CLARENCE GAIDIERD, OF NORWICH, IN DEBT TO CITY OF NEW LONDON $78

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 22.—Clarence Gaidierd, 27, a Negro residing at 343 Franklin street, Norwich, in which city he has been employed as a silk spotter, was in the police court today, charged with intoxication, breach of the peace and resisting an officer. He was fined $20 and costs on the first count and on the second charge a fine of $30 and costs was meted out. The third count was nolled. Gaidierd could not pay so he was committed to jail, where he will remain about three months unless his friends go to his assistance and pay the county $78.23.

Gaidierd and his wife, the latter a resident of Tilley street, are estranged and last night the former came to New London where a Negro dance was in progress in Plant hall. He started to drink and was in a semi-intoxicated condition when he decided to go to the dance hall. Gaidierd was at first refused admission, but finally those sponsoring the affair decided to admit the Negro. Gaidierd's wife was among the dancers and when her husband saw her, he started trouble, for he began abusing the woman. When male dancers remonstrated with Gaidierd he became fighting mad and attempted to cause a free-for-all fight. During the heat of the battle, Patrolman Frank Linehan, who was on duty at the hall, interfered and started to arrest Gaidierd. The latter then attacked the officer, but the fighting was quickly ended by the officer subduing Gaidierd, who was locked up for the remainder of the night.

HUSBAND BOTHERED WIFE— TOLD TO GET OUT OF TOWN

Joseph A. Cummings, 21 High street, Hudson, Mass., was charged with breach of the peace. He was fined $25, but execution of the sentence was suspended and Cummings was instructed to go back to Hudson and remain away from New London. Cummings and his wife have been living apart for some time, but last night the husband came to New London. About 2 o'clock this morning he went to the abode of his wife on Tilley street and forced an entrance. His wife then went to Bank street, where she found and made complaint to Patrolman Clyde Murphy, who arrested Cummings.

Harry Austin, a stranger, was charged with vagrancy. He was given suspension of judgment. Austin was arrested last night by Patrolman Clyde Murphy when found sleeping in a Central Vermont railroad freight car.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 22.—Miss Gladys Hatch, employed at a pharmacy, 108 State street, reported to Patrolman Clyde Murphy this morning that gas fumes filled the building and that apparently something was wrong. Emergency treatment was administered to Rose and afterwards he was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where it was found that his condition was not serious and he will be released within a day or two. It is believed that Rose went to his offices during the night and that he fell over the gas tube connecting one of the gas plates, making a disconnection which allowed the gas to flow into the room and that in stumbling over the tube he fell against some of the furnishings.

LETTER IN FLOATING BOTTLE SURPRISES FISHERMEN

Capt. Sam Long and Mate Jack Spray in their boat Tiger were about 80 miles outside Block Island recently looking for flat fish. They found them plenty so near Easter, but the price at Fulton market has been low as the big boats from Newport and Edgartown, Mass., went through and that means the small boats are out of luck until a few days; for those boats have got to load up again so far off shore. But Capt. Long takes a chance every day if it's all right to go out to the fishing grounds. He is like the stock market in Wall street if the bubble doesn't break, like this winter. Mate Spray says following Fulton market prices, it is like betting on the brown horse, the black horse will come in first.

So throwing the net overboard for some fish they let it travel over the waves for a couple of hours. Then pulling the hundred dollar net on board the good ship Tiger, they found about seven barrels of fish. Both fishermen were happy to see the fish on deck, so Mate Spray said, "We will try it once more! Then back to Noank—being out here since 2.30 o'clock in the morning and now it is 3 o'clock in the afternoon." So pulling the net in for the last time that day, they had six barrels of nice Block Island fish making 18 barrels for the day. The good ship Tiger started toward Noank. When half way there. Mate Spray saw a large bottle and at first thought it was a quart of Golden Wedding whiskey, lost by some rum-runners. But soon he noticed a big piece of white writing paper inside the bottle. Capt. Long is a good man on a rope and has followed many cattle out west on a horse. Taking the rope in his left hand while the mate went at the wheel, he made a good throw and got the bottle that was sailing on a wave and brought it on deck.

He found a real letter dated April 9th, 1927, and read as follows: We was on a steamer named Nightingale off the coast of aine. A storm came up and the wind was blowing around 66 miles an hour. The waves was rolling high as a house. The steamer got filled with water and the captain ordered every one to the life boats. "Remember, men, women and children first! So every one got in the life boats ready for the water. I saw the captain go down with his ship, brave as he could be. I was in the life boat and I wrote this letter and put it in the bottle and sent it off to sea and know some one would find it somewhere. We drifted all night until a oil tanker was coming along and picked us up and gave us a feed and some hot coffee. We were bound to New York. About every one was picked up by some steamer, and we were all glad, not to lose any one. But the captain would not be saved and I sure felt sorry for him, we reached New York and got a train to our home, some going to the west and to different parts. I live near Philadelphia in a little town on the outskirts and would be glad to get back home again. At the end was written: "I will close and hope some one will find this bottle. From Otto Strange; somewhere in Philadelphia."

Capt Long said, "What do you think of that? A letter in a bottle that has been on the salt water for three years and never picked up until now, and got to Noank from the coast of Maine! I don't know how many miles it has traveled in that time—enough to go around the world! "It seems so!" Mate Spray said, "What are you going to do with the letter? Keep it and put it in your fisherman's scrap book." "That is what I am going to do with it, mate! I will give you the bottle, so we can think of this day on the water. I think sometime not far off this letter will be worth something to the right party. The mate came out with a good one, "If this bottle was filled with good old Johnny Walker it would be worth something to take away this cold I've got in my head, where pills cannot reach it!

The captain had a hearty laugh that almost shook the sails off the boat. So the boat Tiger reached the dock and the fish was shipped to New York. Both fishermen were ready to call it a day, after leaving a warm bed at 2 a. m., for it was 7 o'clock before they reached home. Both were happy over the catch of fish and wondered about the lost bottle of three years, with that letter in it.

At Newent church Sunday morning there was an Easter sermon by the pastor and a special song entitled Why Weepest Thou? by the choir, with baritone solo by Walter Hyde.

A number from this place were at Jewett City Congregational church Sunday afternoon to hear the cantata Life Eternal. In response to an invitation of the Newent pastor the cantata will be repeated next Sunday evening at the community hall, in Lisbon.

At the meeting of the grange Friday evening these were piano solos by Mrs. Jesse Phillips; a discussion of the subject, Which would be of greater value, two dozen pullets or two heifer calves?; a roll call answering to the question, What can I do to beautify my town? There were also conundrums and grange songs. Doughnuts and coffee were served.

An entertainment was given at the community hall Wednesday evening by the pupils of the Newent school. The proceeds, amounting to $35, will be used to give the graduating class a trip to Hartford.

Kelvinator Demonstrates World's Fastest Freezing In Country-Wide Test

In a recent nation-wide test conducted by Kelvinator dealers, Kelvinator refrigerators in 48 states and the District of Columbia demonstrated the amazing average freezing time of 80 minutes—from water to solidly-frozen ice cubes.

All tests were attended and certified by responsible witnesses, including city officials, representatives of newspapers, universities, etc.

Super-fast freezing of this type is made possible only by Iso-Thermic Tubes—an exclusive Kelvinator device which concentrates intense cold in the freezing compartment—cutting the time of freezing from one-half to one-third the usual period.

Today Kelvinator brings to your home Four-Way Cold—an all-automatic type of refrigeration service never before obtainable.

It provides, in its de luxe models, four separate degrees of cold: (1) for extremely fast automatic freezing of ice and desserts; (2) a special Cold Storage Compartment, with below-freezing cold for keeping meats, fish, game, ice cream, etc., indefinitely; (3) steady cold for freezing ice at Kelvinator's fast speed; (4) controlled cold in food compartments always between 40 and 50 degrees.

Everyone can now own a Kelvinator — on Easy Terms

The model Kelvinator you require may be purchased on easy terms through Kelvinator's attractive ReDisCo monthly budget plan.

LIQUIDATION IN EARLY SESSION OF MARKET GAVE WAY TO BRISK BUYING

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)— The stock market was called upon to absorb further heavy liquidation in pivotal issues during the early hours of trading today. But as the selling wave appeared to have spent its force by afternoon, speculation for the rise was briskly resumed, several pool favorites shooting up in spectacular fashion as short commitments were hastily covered.

The recovery was somewhat irregular, but a handful of shares surged up 3 to 11 points, several reaching record levels for the year, and J. I. Case rushed up 29 points, closing at the top. The index of 90 leading shares recorded a gain of only 1 7-10 points, however, which was less than half yesterday's loss. Trading was in slightly greater volume than yesterday, transfers aggregating 4,589,090 shares.

The outstanding corporate news of the day, General Motors first quarter earnings statement, appearing after the close of the market, was a little more favorable than had been forecast in view of slack business in the early months of the year. Earnings of 93 cents a share showed the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents earned by a good margin, and compared with unofficial estimates of from 90 to 95 cents. This compared with $1.37 a share in the like period of 1929.

Call money was again plentiful, renewing at 4 per cent, dropping to 3 1-2, and loaning in the outside market at 3.

Buoyancy of J. I. Case was connected with unofficial reports that earnings in the first quarter exceeded the $15 per share earned for the entire year of 1929. Diamond Match, until a few days ago traded in 10 share lots, rushed up 10 points in a large turnover, and American Water Works, Eastman Kodak, Electric Power and Light, and Worthington Pump sold up 7 to 11 points. Radio rose nearly five points to a new high for the year at 58. General Electric gained 2 points, and U. S. Steel closed up a fraction. American Bank Note, American Tobacco, Crucible Steel, American Can, and Westinghouse Electric lost a point or 2, Ingersoll Rand, six, and Federal Mining 10, touching a new low at 170.

Commodity markets were irregular, wheat lost about a cent a bushel, reflecting bearish weather and crop reports, while corn moved up about half a cent, reflecting better cash demand. Cotton futures closed barely steady.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—Easier credit conditions lent some assistance to the bond list today. Investment rails hardened considerably, while United States governments and the utilities were firm. The volume, however, remained unimpressive, although a few carrier liens turned over in eager volume.

The improvement in carrier liens covered a representative assortment. Chesapeake and Ohio 4 1-2s, Rock Island 4s, Erie 5s, Pere Marquette "C" 4 1-2s, Southern Railway 4s, Western Maryland 4s, Wabash 4 1-2s, Pennsylvania debenture 4 1-2s and St. Louis-San Francisco 4 1-2s and prior lien 4s were active and generally higher, the Frisco bonds each moved up a point. Santa Fe general 4s eased after an early advance. Union Pacific first 4s also sagged.

American Telephone 5s of 1965, Duquesne 4 1-2s, International Telephone 5s, North American Edison "C" 5s, Louisville Gas and Electric 5s and several other prominent utilities showed distinct firmness. Industrials were inclined to ease, although the declines were mostly unimportant. International Match 5s lost 1 1-4 on a moderate turnover.

Convertibles made a late rally which carried several issues above the Monday closing. American Telephone 4 1-2s turned a 3 point loss into a net gain of 2 1-4. General Theatres 6s got back all but 3-4 of a similar decline. Pattee 7s with warrant advanced 3 3-8 and Pan American Petroleum 6s rose 2 1-2 on small sales.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 22.—(AP)—Pitching headlong down grade toward the dollar a bushel level, wheat today broke through the season's low-price record. Something of a recovery took place in the late dealings, however, as a result of buying credited to government sponsored agents. On the other hand, today's drop in wheat values came about largely because of announcement that the federal farm board would discontinue wheat loans after April 30 and on account of further rains in recent drought territory southwest.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous 3-4a1 3-8c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-4a5-8c up, oats 1-8a1-2c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 5c.

Provisions were responsive to downturns in the value of hogs.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, April 22—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 19 were $8,508,448.50; expenditures $17,548,403.75; balance $230,914,930.66.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—Prices on the New York curb market got off to a poor start today as the market was called upon to absorb a fairly heavy volume of overnight selling, but the offering quickly dried up, and a brisk rally set in which continued to the close, final quotations generally being around the high levels of the day. Trading was only moderate in volume, the day's sales running around 1,250,000 shares.

Official announcement was made today that a money desk would be established on the curb tomorrow, permitting brokers to arrange bank loans on high grade curb collateral at a slight differential above rates prevailing on the big board.

Public utilities were again in the vanguard of today's advance. Electric Bond and Share opened at 113 1-2, dipped to 112 1-4, rallied to 116 1-4 and closed at 115 7-8 for a net gain of 2 points. North American Light and Power jumped six and a half points to a new high at 80 1-2. Central Southwest Utilities preferred and Electric Power and Light optional warrants also moved into new high ground, the latter showing a net gain of 4 1-2 points in sympathy with a sharp rise in the stock. Niagara Hudson held steady around 23. American Light and Traction (old stock) broke 11 points on a few sales and Standard Power and Light (new) lost 2 points.

Natural Gas stocks were in brisk demand under the leadership of American Natural Gas which ran up 4 3-4 points to a new high at 19 3-4 and retained all but a point of its gain. Southwest Gas Utilities crossed 17 to a new high for a gain of more than 2 points and Lone Star Gas added 3 3-4 points to its recent gain.

Reports of an increase in gasoline prices in California brought fresh buying into the oil stocks, Cosden advancing more than 3 points, Humble 2 and Gulf 1 1-2 with most of the Standard Oil issues improving fractionally after an early period of heaviness.

St. Regis Paper sold close to the year's high on publication of a report showing earnings of $1.29 a share last year. Dow Chemical advanced 6 1-2 points to another new high at 95 1-2, which contrasts with the year's low of 71. New York and Hamburg also advanced more than six points.

Securities Corporation, which recently was split on a 10 for 1 basis, led the investment trust and holding company group with a spectacular advance of 56 points to a new high at 720. The new stock ran up more than 8 points but lost 2 points of its gain. Eastern States B also moved into new high grounds.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES.

The Trailing Arbutus.

I wandered lonely where the pine-trees made
Against the bitter East their barricade,
And, guided by its sweet
Perfume, I found, within a narrow dell,
The trailing springflower tinted like a shell
Amid dry leaves and mosses at my feet.

From under dead boughs, for whose loss the pines
Moaned ceaseless overhead, the blossoming vines
Lifted their glad surprise,
While yet the bluebird smoothed in leafless trees
His feathers ruffled by the chill sea-breeze,
And snowdrifts lingered under April skies.

As, pausing, o'er the lonely flower I bent,
I thought of lives thus lowly, clogged and pent,
Which yet find room,
Through care and cumber, coldness and decay,
To lend a sweetness to the ungenial day
And make the sad earth happier for their bloom.
—John Greenleaf Whittier.

The Bird.

Hither thou comest, the busy wind all night
Blew through thy lodging, where thy own warm wing
Thy pillow was. Many a sullen storm,
For which coarse man seems much fitter born,
Rain'd on thy bed
And harmless head.

And now as fresh and cheerful as the light
Thy little heart in early hymns doth sing
Unto that Providence, whose unseen arm
Curb'd them, and cloth'd thee well and warm.
All things that be praise Him; and had Their lesson taught them when first made.
—Henry Vaughan, in Poems.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Plants, just like human beings, have to defend themselves from enemies. Plants have to fight with each other for enough room in the soil in which to grow. In this struggle for life, the weaker plants are often killed by the stronger plants, which force them out of their way. The battles of plants, however, are chiefly animals and insects which are always waiting for a chance to destroy them.

Many plants have wonderful weapons for their defense. The thorns of the rose bush, brambles, and gorse prevent cows and horses from eating them, as well as keeping off snails and slugs. The cactus family of plants have a formidable armour of prickles and daggers. The plant known as the Spanish bayonet is armed with taper pointed spears that have file like edges. Some plants, such as the ragged robin, have sticky stems covered with fine hairs, to which insects stick if they climb up to try and steal the honey.

Many plants use poison as a means of protection. The sun spurge has a poisonous juice which kills any insects which approach it, while the poisonous properties of the deadly nightshade are well known. The bracken fern has such a bitter taste that cows and sheep feeding near it will not touch it, and the leaves of the buttercup have a bitter taste which is much disliked by plant eating animals.

The common bladder wort, an aquatic plant, not only defends itself against insects and animals, but catches worms and fish for its food. As it floats underneath the surface of the water its leafy branches spread out in all directions. Its leaves are covered with little oval bladders filled with air, and at one end of each bladder is a cavity which leads into the mouth below. Inside the bladder is a small trap door, which opens when pressure is put upon it. A small worm or a small fish can enter this door, but they can never come out.

Perhaps the most original means of self-defense is that possessed by a strange plant called the rattlesnake iris, which grows on the prairies of the United States. When ripe its seeds give a rattling noise very similar to that made by a rattlesnake. This is greatly feared by animals, who will never go near the plant.

LETTERS OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Grace Snyder, Willimantic—Thank you ever so much for the book you sent me.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES.

A Disobedient Bird.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide Awakes and I hope you all enjoy my story. This story shows we must always obey our mother.

One bright day in summer a robin built her nest in an apple tree. After a while four fledglings were born. Day by day the young birds grew until there was not enough room for the youngsters. One morning one bird said, "Mother I am going out to make my own living." "Stay just a while longer," answered his mother.

Not listening to what his mother said, he departed, hopping along the ground at a rapid rate. At last entering a small farm yard he looked very curiously at the many strange creatures.

All of a sudden he felt himself listening to a very sweet noise nearby. Being so charmed by the sweet sound that he did not see a huge creature moving toward him. Suddenly the huge creature caught him by the neck and dragged him into the farmyard. Just then, a little girl seeing the terrible sight, made the large creature, which was indeed a cat, let go of the poor little bird.

Gaining at last his strength the young bird flew to the nearest tree, trembling violently. At last coming to himself again he resolved that if he saw his mother again he would never disobey her again.

Going To The Woods

My Dear Uncle Jed: I read the Wide Awake circle every week and find it very interesting and hope they'll find mine as interesting. I am going to write about going to the woods with my sister. My father worked in the woods. We asked him if we might go over in the woods with him. He said we could. So we hurried and got our work all done and started. He had gone, and Colby said she knew a short way. So I said we would go the short way. We walked and climbed over walls and fences. Finally I asked my sister if she was sure she knew the way. She said, "Sure, come along. So we went a little further." Then she said, "I don't remember this broken tree. Gosh! we're lost." So we did our best till we found the right path. Finally we crossed a brook where we played a while. Soon we found father. We told him the hard time we had had. First he laughed and then he said, "You can help me pile up logs if you want too. We had a good time helping him. We got home safe and sound.

A Nature Walk

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to you about a nature walk. One day I was invited to a nature walk with the teacher. As you know when the blue sky comes the violets come too. We picked many violets and other flowers. We all had lollypops and went home feeling very happy.

Gold

Uncle Jed: Gold has been known from the early times. Most of it now comes fro mthe United States, Africa and Australia. It is often combined with other metals. It also appears combined with tellurium an element which is related to sulphur. Native gold is found in veins in quartz rocks, the quartz disintegrates into sand while the gold is washed downstream. Gold nuggets are left by the running water while the lighter rock is washed away. Gold has been found in a variety of sizes.

When gold appears in veins in a large rock the rock is exploded by dynamite. This broken rock is crushed into small pieces by strong iron crushers. It is then made fine which dissolves into powder by heavy iron stamps working in iron troughs. Gold left contains pure gold. This gold sends forth a green light. The metal is too soft to be used by any other purposes and is combined with silver or copper. Pure gold weighs 24 carats fine.

My Visit

Dear Uncle Jed: Last week I went to visit my aunt and my cousin. I started at 8 in the morning and got there at 9.30. I left my coat and hat on the veranda and we went in the house to dinner. My uncle, after dinner, played checkers with us for a while then he said, "Aunt and I are going for a ride, would you like to go?" Of course we were delighted to go. When I went to get my coat and hat it was gone. We searched low and high for it, finally "Dot" said maybe Rover the puppy took it over to Teddy's house. So we went to the next house and in the tree in front of the house was my coat and hat. This was Teddy's work. Uncle put three bags of corn in the rumble seat and we sat on it while my aunt and he sat in front. My, but it was high! Uncle took us to a mill in which his corn was to be ground. On the way home he bought us some candy.

Just before we got home we met my cousin. What a surprise it was. When we got home we called up some of our friends and had a little party. We roasted apples and popped corn. We had a good time. I went to bed at 11. I stayed over Sunday and came home Sunday night. I had a very pleasant time. I will write again hoping the Wide Awakes will like my letters.

My Experience With a Telephone.

Dear Uncle Jed: One night as I was reading I heard the telephone ring. I wasn't sure whether it was our number or not so I waited till it rang again. To my surprise it rang two, which is our number. I hesitated a moment and then I ran into the dining room. As there happened to be no light in there I stumbled over a chair and fell down. I picked myself up quick as possible not knowing what had happened.

The telephone rang constantly. After I came to my senses I recollected what I was about to do. In my excitement I put the receiver to my mouth and the mouthpiece to my ear. I said "hello" but there came no answer. I said "hello" a few times more, but still there came no answer, so I hung up the receiver. After a short pause it rang again. I picked up the receiver right this time and I said "hello" and received an answer.

As I thought my first experience over I deliberately found my mistake and I laughed.

My Pet Ducks.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story about my pet ducks. My ducks are about two years old. They are nice and fat. They are nice ducks. One is white, one is brown, the other one is white. They always walk together. There is a brook side of the road. So they always go there. I don't want them to get run over by an automobile so I go out and make a noise like a hawk. And they run up to the house as fast as they can, and don't go there again.

A Day's Outing.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time. I have now decided to write to you about "A Day's Outing."

One summer day a few of my friends and I decided to go for a day's outing. We had worked hard and felt that we deserved it.

The following night my friends gathered at my house to make all possible arrangements for we planned an early start. With our lunch prepared, our bathing suits and hiking clothes laid out, and the car ready, we retired. We could hardly sleep for planning the next day's fun.

Early the next morning the alarm brought us back from the land of dreams. We wasted not a minute but dressed hurriedly, bid out parents adieu, piled into the car and were off. Ariving at a lake we ate our breakfast after which we went for a long canoe ride. Returning we ate our lunch, after which we went swimming. Refreshing ourselves by this swim we rested till six. We fried steak for supper. Shortly afterward we left for home feeling that we had a glorious day.

Flying Kites.

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to the Wide Awake Circle many times and enjoy writing this time. I am going to tell you about flying kites.

One windy day in March when I got home from school I found my brother out in the shed making kites. I watched him for a while and then went into the house. After doing some errands for my mother I came out again. He said he would make me a kite so that we could go together on the hill. So he made me one too. I took it and was going to start. When I asked him if we could make a face on one side of the kite he said we could. We got some black crayon and drew faces on them. I made mine with a smile on his face and wrote under the face Mr. Happy. My brother made a face that looked very angry. He called his Mr. Angry. We went on a big hill out in the lots. At first I had a hard time until the wind caught the kite and took it into the air. One time I let go of the string and it flew into a long branch on a tree. It was out of my reach so my brother climbed up and got it down. Then we started for home. I was taking my kite down when it got caught in the telephone wire.

Only Pearls!

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to tell the Wide Awakes about the "Arab and the Pearls." An Arab once lost his way in a desert, and was in danger of dying of hunger and thirst. After straying about for a long time, he came to a fountain of water, where the travelers of the desert were in the habit of stopping with their horses and camels to drink.

He saw lying upon a bank a small leather bag. "God be praised," said he as he took it up, "there may be nuts and dates inside and I shall have something to eat as well as water to drink." In this hope he quickly opened the bag; but, as soon as he saw what was in it he said with a sad countenance, "Alas! they are only pearls."

Our Hike.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day the girls in my class decided to go on a hike. So we started early Saturday morning and we walked through swamps, up hills, and climbed ledges. Then we found a large rock, which we all sat upon and ate our lunch. Then we came to a little hut in the woods in which lived an old man and woman. Their house was not painted. The woman was very kind to us. She offered us a glass of water. We said no thank you. Then we all got tired of walking, and it was getting dark, so we all started for home. We got home safely after our long hike.

My Trip To The Old Furnace

Dear Uncle Jed: As I have not written to you in a long time, I am going to tell you about my trip to the old furnace. Saturday afternoon the girls in the seventh grade at the school I go to went for a hike with our teacher. We left from the high school in Danielson at 2.20. We walked slow and sang songs all the way up and back. We took some lunch along. It is about two miles from the high school. When we were going along the road just before we got to the old furnace we heard the sound of water. Some girls went ahead and found a waterfall. We were soon all there and sat down because we were tired and hungry. We ate our lunch and then we followed trails. We went on one and it did not take us anywhere. We took another and it led us to some water. We crossed the water on rocks and walked on until we came to a hill of rocks. Under the rocks were small caves. We did not go in the caves. When it was time to go home we did not want to go and wished we could stay longer. We all went home happy but tired.

A Scout Chase

Dear Uncle Jed: It is a long time since I have written. This time I will tell you about a Scout chase.

In a scout troop there are four patrols each having a leader. Two patrols plan to chase the other two on a marked time. Accordingly, the other two start out five or some minutes before the others. On their way the patrols being chased, have to leave signs. When the time is up the remaining patrols go after the others. If any girl in any other patrol is caught she has to pay a forfeit. It is great fun, especially when the four patrols sight each other thus commencing a lively chase.

I hope the other Wide Awakes have enjoyed my letter.

About Cocoa

Dear Uncle Jed: The name of my story is Cocoa. Cocoa grows very close to the trunk of main branch. It grows in the tropics. When it is ripe [illegible] tree to another with a [illegible]. At the end is a long stick. It is cut close to the ground. It is [illegible] dry.

When it is dry it is taken to a place where it is cut open. There is a whitish pulp inside. In the pulp is from 20 to 80 seeds, white or light purple, the size of a lima bean.

The seeds are then taken to large drying places where they are spread out to dry. Men go from one to another with hoes stirring them up so they may dry evenly. There are sliding roofs so when it rains they may not be wet.

They are now ready to be shipped away. When they are washed, hulls taken off.

CURIOUS CREATURES

HONEST USED CARS

Honestly Re-conditioned . . . Honestly Priced

That's all we'd ever have to say about our used cars, if it wasn't for the fact that anyone can say it. The only difference is, we think we can prove it.

Why are they honest used cars? Because that's the only kind of used car we can afford to sell. Satisfied purchasers of our used cars are the biggest single source from which we draw our new-car buyers. New-car sales are where we make our money. We can't jeopardize those sales through used-car failures.

Why are they honestly re-conditioned? For the same reason, plus the fact that they are re-conditioned by our own expert mechanics who are trained to do precision work on the new cars we sell.

Why are they honestly priced? Because we are in the new-car business, not the used-car business. If we never made a cent on used-car sales we'd still do a tidy business on the new Hupmobiles we sell. That's the reason we can price used cars so low.

Read the brief description, given below, of some of the used cars we now have for sale. You may find just the car you're looking for. And, if you do, you can be certain it's the best dollar-for-dollar value in the city.

Whippett Six Sedan $375

Hupmobile Club Sedan—A fine sturdy family car at low cost $275

Pontiac 4-door Sedan—Driven only 4000 miles by original owner. Excellent condition. New car condition at used car price $600

Red Arrow Auction

At a Red Arrow meeting held at the Hanover-Curland company on Monday evening the club voted to present to the Norwich public two interesting features in connection with the Red Arrow game.

In order to give new incentive to the Booster Contest, for which $1,800 of valuable prizes will be awarded, at the May 23rd auction, the club is stressing the sale of trade books for which the booster selling a $5.00 trade book to a Red Arrow patron will receive 10,000 arrows to his credit, while the purchaser of the book will receive double Red Arrow money.

A harmonica contest was also arranged in conjunction with the Palace theatre. It will be held Friday, May 2nd. A fine cup and several other valuable prizes were appropriated for the contest. The public will be the judges of the awards to the winning contestants.

An entertainment feature was also arranged as a special interest for the auction to be held next Friday. The new method of auctioning the articles by the ticket method whereby all articles auctioned are provided with a ticket giving first and second high bidders met with public favor and greatly expedited the auction. In fact the articles were auctioned much quicker than the counters could take care of the Red Arrow money. To improve upon this method the club made arrangements for additional counters at the next auction and the management of the award was put in charge of Mr. C. L. Barker, advertising manager of the Red & Hughes company.

The entertainment feature during the auction will consist of local black face comedians, who will greatly amuse the audience.

Broadway Theatre

The roarin' ridin' shootin' West lives again in the exciting screen version of Zane Grey's famous cattle country story, "The Light of Western Stars" which opens at the Broadway today. Richard Arlen is the two-fisted cowpuncher who carries the heart of Mary Brian, a demure eastern miss by storm. The little lass goes west to "help" run her brother's ranch, unaware that he has been cowardly murdered by a gang headed by a rascally sheriff. Arlen as "Dick Bailey", is hired as foreman and straightaway proceeds to clean up the town, aided by Harry Green, who has the hit of his career as "Pie-Pan", a tin peddler, who is "not exactly scared, but just careful!" Fred Kohler has a typical role as leader of the rustlers who dominate the town, and Regis Toomey is a brash young easterner who acquires a speedy education in western ways. Catching the very spirit of the great outdoors which Zane Grey loved so well, Paramount has outdone even its other great western success, "The Virginian," and has turned out a production teeming with life and action. Bellowing trail herds, barking six-guns, and the typical sounds of a busy cowtown are reproduced with startling fidelity, and the tense action and sparkling comedy furnish one of the most thoroughly satisfying films that has visited Norwich. On the surrounding program are included the famous Gleasons, Lucille and Jimmy, in a roaring comedy skit "Don't Believe It"; Laurel and Hardy in "Below Zero," a Paramount "bouncing ball song," "Oh You Beautiful Doll," and the latest Paramount Sound news. To give the kiddies an opportunity of seeing "The Light of Western Stars," the management has arranged a special schedule for Friday afternoon, with the feature being shown at 4 o'clock, in ample time for all school children, with the admission specially priced. See Adv.

Palace Theatre

A double-feature bill, the equal of which has never before been presented in Norwich, opens at the Palace theatre today with the showing of "Rich People," a drama of society starring Constance Bennett and Robert Ames, and "Officer O'Brien," a gripping story of the conflict between the underworld and the law with William Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian.

This program is part of the Warner Brother's spring festival which began April 20 and will be continued until June 5. This festival marks the period when Warner Brothers set the pace for the feast of entertainment which their theatres will provide for movie patrons all over the country during the coming year.

"Rich People" is Constance Bennett's initial dialogue star production. She is supported by an admirable cast including Regis Toomey and Robert Ames.

"Rich People" is the story of a defiant daughter of a multimillionaire. Headstrong and impulsive she feels that her father's money is a handicap to her true character. She becomes engaged to Noel Nevins, (Robert Ames), whom she likes but does not love. Then she meets Jeff McLean, (Regis Toomey) an insurance salesman and falls in love with him. He repels her because of her father's money though he finds that he has succumbed to her charm. He faces a bitter struggle with his honor to determine whether or not he, a poor boy, should ask her to marry him. The answer to Jeff's problem is revealed in this excellent film and the solution is intriguing.

"Officer O'Brien" presents another phase of this many-sided life, and in this picture leaders of the underworld carry on a desperate struggle to evade the law. William Boyd, as Officer O'Brien, portrays one of the finest characters in his screen experience.

Promoted because of his part in the arrest of a vice leader, he rises to the rank of lieutenant with greater success in store for him. Patello, the gang

"Rich People" and "Officer O'Brien" will be shown at the Palace theatre through Friday of this week.

Exhibition at Porteous & Mitchell

An interesting and novel demonstration of Washauredy Krinkle Crepe—products of the Windsor Print Works is to be seen all this week in the main window of the Porteous and Mitchell Co. store.

A miniature bedroom scene is depicted—all day long—in and out—mannequins parade through the doors costumed in cunning negligees and lingerie—the uses for which this crepe is specially famed.

An extensive line of this fabric in plain and printed is carried by this store, in its Wash Fabrics Dept.

Count Luckner

Count Luckner's life harks back to the days of the Elizabethan freebooters. It is without parallel or comparison in our own century, as a career of adventure. And the peak of this amazing career was reached during the war. When war came, Luckner ran an old sailing-ship disguised as a Norwegian fishing vessel, through the allied blockade. He roamed the seas like a ghost and sank 500,000 tons of shipping.

Yet he never took a life! Before sinking an allied ship he would take her entire crew on board his own boat, the "Sea Eagle." He treated his prisoners as if they were his guests on a pleasure cruise—and deposited them all safely on shore. His ship was wrecked, and the "Sea Devil" was captured—but he escaped and traveled 2,500 miles in an open boat, with a crew of six. They rowed for forty-eight [illegible] on a rough sea, some of them [illegible] dying of thirst.

His [illegible] the greatest romances of the [illegible] war over, he has been signally honored all over the world. The honor of which he is proudest was his reception in America, when he landed in San Francisco. COTTON

NEW YORK, April 22.—(AP)—Steel operations throughout the country are at a higher rate than last week, and above the level of two weeks ago, according to unofficial estimates. Operations were reported to be averaging nearly 76 1-2 per cent of rated capacity, against 75 per cent last week and about 76 per cent two weeks ago. The United States Steel corporation was understood to be operating at about 81 per cent of capacity, compared with 79 per cent last week and 83 per cent two weeks ago.

Wall street heard today that the Van Sweringen interests have informed the management of the Missouri Pacific railroad and the roads bankers that they will oppose the plan to refund back dividends on Missouri Pacific preferred with an issue of common stock, holding that the issuance of such additional common would tend to lessen the common stockholders' present equity.

COUNT AND COUNTESS FELIX VON LUCKNER

COUNT FELIX VON LUCKNER is the dashing, romantic humanitarian of the late war, who won his way up from the ranks in the German navy to his position as commander of the "Sea Adler," the famous German raider which sailed the South Seas sinking Allied munition ships during the late war. Because of his very fine humanitarian motives he emerges from the conflict [illegible] best known and most beloved heroes. He sank fourteen ships and yet completed his war record without a single notch on his gun. He never killed anyone nor did he permit the slightest injury to any of the hundreds of prisoners whom he captured.

Count Luckner will appear here in the near future to tell of his absorbingly interesting experiences during the war. When he arrived in New York city some time ago he was greeted by three American commanders, whose vessels he had sunk, who came to thank him for his humane treatment while they were his prisoners.

The jury in the common pleas court here Monday struggled for close to three hours to reach a verdict in the liquor prosecution case of Alexander Kornacki, 17, finally returning a verdict of "guilty."

They received the case just before noon, after hearing the arguments made by Prosecuting Attorney C. B. Whittlesey for the state and Attorney V. P. A. Quinn for the accused, which were followed by the charge by Judge Charles B. Waller. At 1:30, court adjourned until 3 and when the session was resumed at that time, Foreman Charles W. Dow reported for the jury that it seemed impossible to reach a verdict.

Judge Waller read them the pronouncement of the supreme court as to the duty of minority jurors to attempt to reach a verdict and sent them back to the jury room for further consideration. In about an hour they came back with the verdict of guilty.

Kornacki, who is the son of John Kornacki, former operator of the Greeneville bottling works on Sixth street, was accused of making a sale of liquor at the bottling works on the morning of Nov. 12 to two detective agency men, Herbert Gray and James Eustis. His defense was that he was not at the place at the time they said he sold them drinks, Gray stating that he managed to pour the liquor into a cream jar which he carried in his pocket at the time.

Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey moved for sentence, stating that he thought it ought to be no less than was given in the city court, $200 fine and ten days in jail.

Attorney Quinn pleaded for leniency for Kornacki on the ground of his youth, asking that no jail sentence be given. He frankly stated to the court that while this case was appealed, the youth had been arrested on a liquor violation charge and had been fined $200 for the second time in the city court, but without jail sentence. He also stated that the young man's father had been given a fine and jail sentence in the city court room and had again been arrested on a liquor charge Saturday night. He said that the young man has always maintained he did not make this sale to Gray and Eustis, and the attorney gave it as his opinion that if Alexander was selling liquor it was because his father got him to do it. The youth is now out of the bottling business, which has had its license revoked.

Before pronouncing sentence in the case, Judge Waller inquired of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy if he had any comment to make, to which Mr. Cassidy responded by stating that he believed the blame in this case was largely upon the Kornacki youth's father, whom the attorney considered heartless as he was putting the boy forward to take the blame, and didn't show enough interest in him to be in court during the trial. The city attorney said this was purely a business proposition in the Kornacki family and he felt the only way to teach them to respect the law was to give a jail sentence in this case.

Judge Waller made the sentence the same as it had been in the lower court, $200 and costs with ten days in jail, and then adjourned the court session to this (Wednesday) morning at 10 o'clock.

SPECIAL CITY MEETING FOR FINANCIAL BUSINESS

A special city meeting will be held Monday evening of next week for action on a proposal to authorize the city government to borrow $60,000 for the purpose of providing money for the city's expenses from the end of the fiscal year, May 15th, until the annual city budget is adopted in June. The special city meeting is made necessary as for the several years past the local banks have refused to lend money to the city unless authorization to borrow the money is first secured by the city government at a city meeting.

The meeting will also act on the matter of fixing the property lines in front of the so-called Bailey property at Burnham square. Another matter that will be brought up is the question of giving the city government authority to grant, lease, or sell to the Connecticut Light and Power Co enough land at Bog Meadow, near Fairview reservoir for the establishment of a pole line there.

PAYS FINE AND COSTS FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

Presented before Justice of the Peace Walter M. Buckingham at Gales Ferry late Monday afternoon, Amedee Martineau of 100 South street, Willimantic, pleaded guilty to the charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. He was fined $100 and costs, paying the court $112.65.

Martineau was arrested Sunday afternoon by State Policeman Peter Busch, after the machine Martineau was driving had sideswiped the car of George F. Ring of this city and Miss Mildred Cummings of Willimantic, at a point on the Military highway a short distance south of the Poquetanuck cove bridge.

Martineau's machine rolled and hit a fence after it struck the other two cars and he was arrested and brought to Norwich police headquarters, where he was held until taken from there Monday afternoon for the hearing at Gales Ferry in the town of Ledyard.

STUDIES REASONS FOR QUARRELS AMONG CHILDREN

"When Children Quarrel" was the topic of an interesting and instructive talk given by Dr. James L. MacCartney, chief of the division of mental hygiene, state of Connecticut, when he conducted a round table for the child study group of the Woman's City club Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the club room at the Wauregan hotel.

Dr. MacCartney brought out as many of the reasons why children quarrel: Unhappiness in family situations, jealousy of a next older child for a new baby, over irritation caused by some physical reason, tonsils, adenoids, indigestion and again it may be a feeling of fear or insecurity on the part of an offending child that causes him to bully younger children and be defiant to parents or teachers. When we recognize the close connection between family friction and the emotions of loss of prestige, jealousy and fear, we are at once in possession of a key to unsocial conduct.

Parents can do much to prevent as well as eliminate the feelings of insufficiency that lead to conduct disorders by trying to get the child's point of view. "Empathy" is the new word that expresses this. It means the ability to put one's self into another's place and feel what he is feeling.

By keeping the spirit of adventure and joy in overcoming difficulties keenly alive in children, parents will see them grow in self-reliance and self-control into that comradeship with father and mother and each other which makes family life worthwhile.

The next and last meeting of this group will be held Tuesday, May 26, at 4 p. m., in the club room.

The prosecuting attorney stated that the sale made was one bottle of beer and he recommended that the case be disposed of by nolle on payment of a fine of $75 and costs.

Judge Waller directed that such an order be entered.

Aldrich was the song leader and was assisted at the piano by Doris Rose. The secretary, Rev. George Warren Potter, read the minutes of the previous meeting and the treasurer, Stanton W. Brown, gave his report. The club voted to plan an entertainment to be given by outside talent during May. Lewis E. Aldrich was appointed chairman of the committee and selected as his assistants, Carlton Morse and John Rogers. The chairman appointed Stanton W. Brown to serve on refreshment committee for May. Lewis E. Aldrich was appointed to serve on the entertainment committee for May. John Rogers, chairman of the entertainment committee, then took charge of the meeting. A solo by Harold Rose, "Among the Valleys of New England," was well received. Doris Rose was accompanist. Mr. Rogers then introduced George Jackson, an impersonator, who kept the audience in good humor by his witty stories and songs. Mr. Rose gave another solo, "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," and was heartily encored. The closing number was a ventriloquist act with two Mammy dolls, put on by Mr. Jackson. He showed much skill in manipulating the dolls and the sketch was greatly enjoyed. A rising vote of thanks was given the entertainers, the entertainment and refreshment committees. The refreshments were served by Edward Howe, Arthur Fulton, William Burdick and A. D. Zabriskie.

From the account of the Easter concert at the Methodist Episcopal church the name of Marion Cripps was inadvertently omitted.

CLAIMS OF DRYS REFUTED IN WET REBUTTAL ATTACK

Pierre S. DuPont, a Leader In the Industrial World, Asserted That Industrial Expansion Since the World War Has Been Coincident With Rather Than the Result of National Prohibition—Declared That Many Upright and Respected Persons Are "In Open Revolt" Against the Dry Law—General Edwards, Representative Tinkham and Miss Elizabeth Harris Also Challenged the Claims Made For Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP)—The decade of American industrial expansion since the World war, has been coincident with rather than a result of national prohibition in the opinion of the anti-prohibitionists, who today delivered a rebuttal attack before the house judiciary committee against the testimony of the drys.

The opponents of the 18th amendment placed one witness after another on the stand to challenge the dry contentions that happy homes, bulging bank accounts, busy manufacturing plants, and a host of other good things could be attributed to the dry statute.

They also took direct issue with the argument of the drys that young America was drinking less as a result of the constitutional prohibition against intoxicating beverages.

George Holden Tinkham, a republican representative from Massachusetts; Pierre S. DuPont, Delaware capitalist; Major General Clarence R. Edwards, retired, whose name is linked with the exploits of the famous Yankee division in France; and Miss Elizabeth Harris, of the Washington branch of the woman's organization for national prohibition reform, were those called upon by Representative Linthicum, of Maryland, a democrat, who has been presenting many of the anti-prohibition witnesses.

After these had been heard F. W. Buck, executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary-Tax Reduction League, Inc., urged revision of the prohibition statutes as they exist today.

DuPont, a leader in the industrial world, directed his assault against the claims of increased wealth, arguing that this rested upon "nothing but the coincidence" with prohibition. He asserted that many persons, including even some of the most upright and respected, were "in open revolt" against the dry law.

He said whether or not the efficiency of the working man had been changed materially as a result of prohibition, was a question that could not be definitely proved.

"In dealing with this part of the subject," he aded, "prohibitionists take the attitude that a large percentage of working men consumed liquor to such an extent as to interfere with their daily work."

He then said that an investigation for a decade before prohibition had produced an estimate that not more than 5 per cent of the total male population drank enough to injure themselves.

Tinkham also challenged the assertion of the drys that prohibition had increased savings in the United States and presented a letter from Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale university, under date of July 9, 1929, in which the economist said he had found evidence that prohibition has "materially helped the United States, but I do not think it as important a factor as several others."

General Edwards told of the effort of army officers in the pre-prohibition days to cope with drunkenness among troops. He said they had found that by establishing what was known as the "post exchange" temperance had been promoted.

In the post exchange, he explained, good food, wines and beers alone were served and soldiers readily had taken to patronizing such places rather than saloons and grog houses just off of the military reservations.

The veteran soldier said he personally had established such exchanges at Fort Porter, near Buffalo, at Fort Clark, in Texas, and later in Panama. After he had been relieved as commandant in the Canal Zone, he said the post exchange, known there as a community house, subsequently had been abolished and drunkenness and insubordination soon followed.

Buck urged that congress provide for a dispensary plan under which the licensing of breweries and wineries and distilleries, would be carried out and the sale of the intoxicants placed in the hands of dispensing agents, to be appointed in the same way as postmasters. An amendment to the 18th amendment, he said, would be necessary to accomplish this. He argued that a dispensary system would promote temperance and improve health. Buck cited the control systems in Canada, Sweden and other countries as sustaining his contentions.

Miss Harris challenged the testimony of a number of women who appeared in behalf of prohibition on the ground that they could not speak for all the women they said they represented. She contended that with the exception of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, it would be impossible for any one person to voice the views of all members of other women's organizations on a subject as controversial as prohibition.

FAVORABLE REPORT ON PRISON RELIEF BILLS

WASHINGTON, April 23.—(AP)—The senate judiciary committee today reported to the senate a series of house bills providing prison relief and including authorization for two new federal prison institutions.

The bill providing two new institutions would establish one of these as a penitentiary in the northeastern section of the country and the other as a reformatory west of the Mississippi.

Another bill receiving approval was one to establish a hospital for mentally defective prisoners. Another would establish a federal parole board with full authority to pass on all paroles.

The house measure to reorganize the prison administration with a bureau of prisons was not acted upon by the committee.

ALLEGED KIDNAPERS HELD FOR GRAND JURY

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)— Three men whom James D. Quinn, Jr., flier and airplane mechanic, accuses of having kidnaped and beaten him in an effort to learn the whereabouts of the wife of J. Morgan Corbett, wealthy Boston real estate man, were held to the grand jury by Magistrate Michael A. Ford today.

This action was taken after Quinn had testified that the defendants, Arthur Hamel, Edward Kendel and Edward Klein, together with Corbett, had lured him to a shack in the Throggs Neck section of the Bronx, by means of a ruse, and there on April 1 and 2 beat him unconscious repeatedly to make him tell where Mrs. Corbett had gone after leaving her husband.

INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION DECLINED DURING MARCH

WASHINGTON, April 23.—(AP)—The federal reserve board in its monthly review of business conditions said today that industrial production declined in March, factory employment showed little change and wholesale prices which continued to drop had reached the lowest level since 1916.

The March decline in basic industries, the board said, was contrary to the usual seasonable trend. The average daily output of steel, coal and copper, it continued, decreased substantially while cotton and wool textiles dropped about in keeping with the seasonal rate. Production of automobiles and lumber increased however, the board found.

N. Y. SUBWAY TURNSTILES MADE ALMOST NOISELESS

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)— Score a put out for the anti-noise campaign and an assist for the Interborough Rapid Transit company. Subway turnstiles, the clatter and bang of which have assaulted the ears of New Yorker's for years and years, have been made almost noiseless.

A test today at Grand Central terminal, where each turnstile handles 55 persons a minute during the rush hours, proved so successful they probably will be installed throughout the subway system.

CLERGYMAN'S SON HELD ON SUSPICION OF HOMICIDE

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)—James Matthew Maxon, Jr., 21-year-old son of the Protestant Episcopal bishop of Tennessee, tonight occupied a cell in New York's famous old prison, the Tombs.

Charged with suspicion of homicide as the result of the death of David Paynter, 73, a retired printer who was his fellow lodger in a West End avenue rooming house, the young man was taken to the Tombs today after his hearing in homicide court had been continued until next Tuesday. Until today he had been held in a temporary detention cell in the West Side jail, uptown.

Before they took him away to the Tombs, Maxon had his first long talk with his father, the gentle, slightly-built, grey-haired bishop, who said quietly after it was over:

"We did not talk about the case at all. My business is to be his father, not his lawyer."

PLAN UNIFICATION OF AIR TRANSPORT COMPANIES

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)—A revised offer by the United Aircraft & Transport Corp. for an exchange of stock with National Air Transport will be submitted to N. A. T. stockholders, according to a statement tonight, dwhich indicated that unification of the two companies was nearing materialization.

Under the revised plan, United offered to exchange on the basis of one share of United common for each three of N. A. T.

The statement added that all pending litigation in the Delaware courts will be terminated.

INQUIRY INTO ALL PHASES OF NAVAL TREATY CERTAIN

WASHINGTON, April 23.— (AP) — Inquiry into all phases of the London naval treaty by senate and house naval committees appeared certain today as the chairman outlined plans to summon the delegation and naval experts before their respective groups.

In addition, Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, has some questions he desires to ask although he has previously indicated he probably would favor ratification.

At the white house, however, Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state, expressed the opinion that the treaty would be promptly ratified by the senate.

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF KILLING DRY AGENT

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., April 22. —(AP)—George W. Moore was acquitted by a criminal court jury here today on a charge of second degree murder of Robert K. Moncure, federal prohibition agent killed during an attempted raid on Moore's home Jan. 18. The jury deliberated 25 minutes.

Loud applause followed the verdict.

Moore face a similar charge in connection with the killing of Franklin R. Patterson, another prohibition agent, who also was shot to death during the attempted raid.

Would Stop Sales Of Bottles, Jars, Casks

Action Urged By Government Before the Supreme Court As Aid to Dry Enforcement.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—(AP)—The government urged the supreme court today to aid it in more effective prohibition enforcement by preventing stores from selling bottles, casks and other containers which will enable bootleggers to deliver their products to customers in an attractive manner.

The question reached the court in an appeal by Ike Danovitz of Pittsburgh, Pa., as the surviving partner of the Feitler Bottle company, protesting against the seizure and confiscation by prohibition enforcement agents of a stock of empty barrels, bottles, corks and other articles.

The government defended the seizure on the ground that the articles were intended for sale for the illegal manufacture of liquor.

Ward Bonsall, as counsel for Danovitz, insisted that the seizure was illegal on the ground that the prohibition law condemned traffic in articles used only in illegal manufacture. He argued that the manufacture of liquor had ceased before it was bottled or placed in other containers.

Assistant Attorney General Sisson took direct issue with this argument, insisting that the bottling and preparation of the liquor for the market was a part of the manufacture declared illegal by the Volstead act.

Bonsall took the view that should the supreme court sustain the lower courts in declaring the seizure and confiscation legal, it would not only aim a blow at the manufacture and sales of bottles generally but the decision also must be extended to the manufacture of fruit jars and all other containers susceptible of use by bootleggers in marketing their product. Assistant Attorney General Sisson asserted that if the government succeeded in preventing bootleggers obtaining whiskey bottles and compelled them to use fruit jars and milk bottles it would be a material step forward in prohibition enforcement.

Every member of the court asked questions which indicated approval of the decision of the lower courts authorizing the seizure.

DEATH OR LIFE SENTENCE TODAY FOR SLAYER LORENZ

HARTFORD, April 23.—(AP)—Henry O. Lorenz killed Nils E. Anderson for some other motive than a quarrel over money, something more intimately connected with his personal life, which Anderson knew and threatened to disclose to August J. Benson, father of 15-year-old Elizabeth Benson, West Hartford high school girl, who had been Lorenz's sweetheart for nearly two years, it developed today at the end of the first day of the youth's trial for murder.

Beyond the few who already know it, the secret motive may never be publicly revealed. State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn did not claim it as part of the evidence against Lorenz, because, undoubtedly, he felt it would needlessly smirch the reputation of someone else. Neither did the defense, which is in the hands of Attorney Walfrid G. Lundborg, of West Hartford, desire to get it into the record. And so it was ruled out by Judges Newell Jennings, Carl Foster and Earnest C. Simpson.

The state ended its case on this note at 3 p. m., setting a record for speed in a Hartford county murder trial, and a little later court was adjourned until tomorrow at 10 a. m., to give Lorenz an opportunity to discuss with his counsel whether he is to take the stand at the opening of court in the morning in the last act of the little drama which may end in black tragedy for him. At the opening of the trial Lorenz considerably shortened the proceedings by changing his plea to guilty of the murder, leaving it to the three judges to decide for what degree he is to be punished. Life or death is the question they will decide tomorrow.

QUESTION OF EFFICIENCY OF AMERICAN SEAMEN

WASHINGTON, April 23.— (AP) — Sharp controversy between ship operators attending the third national conference on merchant marine and officials of the International Seamen's Union of America developed today over the efficiency of American seamen.

After Andrew Furuseth, president of the union, had charged that inefficiency was prevalent on board American ships and that union members were discriminated against, Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board rose to a defense of the board and of the ship operators.

"Furuseth keeps charging," Chairman O'Connor said, "that inefficient men are carried on our vessels. As chairman of the shipping board I deny it."

He added that no union man ever came to the Sea Service bureau and was turned away because he was a union man.

Earlier W. J. Peterson, president of the Pacific American Steamship association, had replied to attacks of the union head and asserted that Furuseth was not representative of the nation's seamen.

ASPHYXIATED BY GAS AT HOME OF HIS SISTER

STAMFORD, April 23.—(AP)—Edward McGee, 55, was acidentally asphyxiated by illuminating gas in the home of his sister, Mrs. Anna Waldron, here today.

He was alone at the time and was heating several kettles of hot water on the kitchen stove. He sat beside it to read a newspaper, and it is believed that he fell asleep. Meanwhile, the water boiled over, extinguishing the flame.

He was found by his sister, who called police and doctors. An inhalator was used for an hour without success.

Views Of Tilson On Ultimate Tariff Bill

Does Not Believe the House Will Accept the Senate Debenture and the Flexible Provisions.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, April 23—When Republican Floor Leader Tilson of Connecticut was asked today by your correspondent "What is your opinion about probable passage of the tariff bill and the president's probable action if the debenture and flexible tariff senate remain in it?" Colonel Tilson replied:

"I do not believe the house will accept the senate amendment for debenture or the senate amendment for a flexible tariff. Moreover, from what President Hoover has made known, I do not believe for a moment he would approve and sign a bill of which the debenture is a part or relinquish the present flexible tariff power already held by a president, merely to give congress the power it already holds. In other words, I believe the fate of the bill hangs on those two features. The debenture is absolutely unsound and the proposed congressional flexible tariff power already exists. As far as the bill has gone in conference, I think it a good one, and I am hopeful. The conferees and the senate and house will reach an agreement on elimination of debenture and adjust the existing differences concerning flexible tariff authority in a way that will enable President Hoover to sign the bill. Should the debenture not be eliminated I do not believe the measure would pass the house after coming from conference."

TARIFF POINTS TO BE REFERRED TO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP)—An agreement between the senate and house conferees on the tariff bill, was reached today, but eight major points of the controversy were referred back to the two branches for final determination and a bitter dispute over these is in prospect on the floors.

The controversial sugar rate increase, the export debenture, and the modified flexible tariff provision are among the propositions upon which new votes will be necessary before a bill can be sent to the white house.

Republican leaders immediately began conferences seeking to determine whether the house or senate should be asked to act first on the high points of differences. There is every indication that President Hoover may be called upon for advice on this question.

Besides sugar, debenture, and flexible differences, the two houses have yet to reach an accord on the cement, lumber, shingles, and silver rates, and the senate's proposed re-organization of the tariff commission.

Before adjourning, the conferees eliminated the Norris amendment, which provided for suspension of duties on all commodities dealt in by monopolies, and accepted the house provision to repeal an existing statute limiting cigar shipments by parcel post from Cuba to packages containing 3,000 and over.

NAVAL DELEGATES SPEED HOMEWARD ON LEVIATHAN

S. S. LEVIATHAN, April 23.—(AP)— Running at top speed, the steamship Leviathan tonight was speeding westward through a slightly rolling sea. She is bringing back to the United States, Secretaries Stimson and Adams, Ambassador Morrow and Senator Robinson, together with members of the staff of the American delegation to the London naval conference.

All the delegates had luncheon and also dinner in the first class salon today but were conspicuously absent through most of the daylight hours while they rested in their cabins. Secretary Stimson came on deck in the afternoon and tramped several miles.

The call at Cherbourg, France, was brief and informal. The ship cleared immediately after the arrival of the boat train from Paris.

$200,000 FIRE IN LUMBER YARD IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, April 23.—(AP)—Fire which completely burned the Bicknell Lumber Co.'s yard and threatened one of the city's automobile districts, was brought under control tonight only after three alarms had been sounded and firemen had fought the flames for almost two hours. The damage was estimated at $200,000.

Starting in the stables from an unknown cause, the fire spread so rapidly that the truckman who discovered the blaze as he drove his truck into the yard could not save the vehicle. The flames swept through the 300,000 feet of lumber stored in the yard and in a few moments were consuming the long one and a half story building in the yard.

This building, containing seasoning lumber, some offices and a motor boat agency, was completely destroyed.

FEDERAL SOLDIERS ON TRAIL OF KIDNAPERS

MEXICO CITY, April 23.—(AP)—Federal soldiers tonight were hot on the trail of three kidnapers who late last night released Dr. George Edward Purnell, an American dentist, after exacting a ransom of $200. The doctor, who was captured near Guadalajara last Sunday, returned to that city in the early hours of today.

Nothing had been heard definitely from the troops but it was regarded here as a foregone conclusion that they would capture the kidnapers within a short time. The American had identified two men by name and it was known that the trio had only a short start on the pursuers.

PLANE FORCED DOWN ON FARM IN CHESHIRE

MERIDEN, April 23.—(AP)—Forced down by engine trouble, Russell Green, piloting a plane owned by Hill and Sorenson, of the Bethany airport, made a perfect landing on the farm of Howard Ives in Cheshire this afternoon. After clearing the carburetor of his motor, Green continued on to Bethany, to which he was en route from Brainard field, Hartford, when the motor failed.

OPPOSED TO INCREASING FUNDS FOR WORLD WAR VETS

Chairman Wood of the House Appropriations Committee Spoke Against the Johnson Bill—Estimating the Cost of the Veterans' Bill At $400,000,000, Wood Predicted That In Less Than Two Years It Would Require More Than $1,000,000,000 to Carry Out Its Authorizations.

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP)—The first definite reaction to President Hoover's warning two days ago of an impending deficit in the treasury was shown in the house today when Chairman Wood of the appropriations committee threw the weight of his office against the Johnson bill to grant increased compensation benefits to World war veterans.

Through more than ten hours general debate on the measure which would provide compensation benefits for every disability incurred between date of enlistment and January 1, 1925, no voice was raised against it until Wood took the floor. The only previous opposition had been based on the contention that the bill should be broadened to include more veterans.

Asserting that the legislation was as "full of injustices from beginning to end" and was an opening wedge for the expenditure of "more than a billion dollars a year" for veterans' relief, the Indianan read the letter sent to himself and Chairman Jones of the senate finance committee by President Hoover, calling for a reduction in expenditures.

The cost of the veterans' bill was estimated by Wood at a possible $400,000,000 annually. Chairman Johnson of the World war veterans committee had calculated its cost as about $100,000,000.

"We are already expending through the veterans' bureau an amount equal to the customs receipts of the United States," Wood said, "We are now expending through the veterans' bureau an amount equal to one-fourth of all the income of the United States through any instrumentality and if this bill passes, I offer now the prediction that with its contents and authorizations necessary to carry it out we shall be expending in less than two years more than $1,000,000,000 through the veterans' bureau; as much money, if you please, as it cost to run this entire government before the World war."

The house agreed to remain in session tomorrow until the bill was disposed of.

NEW YORK, April 23.—(AP)—Hugh B. Donovan said the stock sold at $100 a share, although Monjar admitted the corporation had no assets, and no means of paying dividends except $10 subscriptions to its "education service," which consisted of Monjar's weekly lectures on means and methods of self-improvement.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 23.—(AP)— The Episcopal church and the love of a 31-year-old rector for a Roman Catholic girl clashed in an ecclesiastical court here today, as Rev. Julius A. Velasco, rector of the St. John's church of Dayton, Ky., went on trial.

He is charged with having failed to carry out an alleged promise to resign his orders if he married a Catholic girl. He was married Jan. 25 by Father Michael O'Ryan of the Roman Catholic church at Ellicott City, Md., to Miss Catherine Rogers of Baltimore, a Catholic.

Mr. Velasco took the stand today in his own behalf, and while his blonde and petite wife listened, he told the jury that "love does not wait on religious persuasion."

WILLIMANTIC, April 23—The contract for the erection of a one-room addition on the third story of the Windham high school building has been awarded to Oliver L. Willard of this city, it was announced today through a committee of the Windham school board. Four bids were entered as follows: Charles Smith & Sons of Derby, $8,000; O. L. Willard, $7,170.25; P. F. Sweeney of Norwich, $6,985 and Thomas Peroni of Hartford, $6,924. The bids were received by William B. Sweeney, chairman, H. C. Lathrop, Stanley J. Sumner, Charles H. Backus and John Reilly, members of the special building committee.

The specifications provide that work must be started not before June 2 and completed not later than August 15. The additional one room will provide desks for 75 students and is a replacement of a modification of the original plans for the school. Practically all of the additional student room provided by the addition will be taken up by tuition pupils for which the town will receive $120 each per year, beginning next school term. Judge Frank H. Foss of the police court today discharged Lawrence J. Haggerty of 6 Maple avenue on a charge of reckless driving, but found Frank M. Geer of Greystone street, guilty of traveling at a rate of speed excessive under the circumstances and imposed a fine of $10 and costs. Haggerty and Geer were the drivers of cars which collided at Thread Mill square Monday evening and when arraigned today both pleaded guilty to charges of reckless driving, the charge against Geer being modified to the above mentioned. Geer's undoing proved to rest to a considerable degree in the testimony of two pretty young girls, the Misses Hazel Macomber and Dorin Drouin, eye-witnesses of the accident, who said that someone in the car driven by Geer was shouting an alleged invitation to them to take a ride as he approached the scene of the accident. Measurements taken by Officer F. R. Laramie indicated that Geer had a clearance of 45 feet at the point of the collision, which space could have been used in driving around the Haggerty car which was making a left turn around the traffic signal at the square. Prior to the disposition of the cases Attorneys John E. King, representing Geer and Arthur T. Kelley, representing Haggerty, both filed motions for dismissal of the reckless driving charges, the motions being denied by Judge Foss.

DANIELSON

DAMAGE OF $1,500 IN MAIN STREET PROPERTY FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 23.—A fire that broke out at 10:50 this morning in a small shed in the rear of the Henry W. Chapin jewelry store in Main street, in the central part of the business section, did damage estimated at $1,500 before it could be extinguished, though the response of the firemen was especially prompt and their work particularly effective.

An alarm from Box 24, close by the burning structure, was quickly followed by billowing black smoke and shooting flames from the burning structure. Chief A. P. Woodward, after an investigation this afternoon, said that the fire was of some undetermined origin. It spread from the little shed where it originated to an adjoining two and one-half story frame structure, the flames lapping at the northerly side of the larger building until it was ignited on the outer boarding. For a time the larger building appeared to be in danger of being quite badly damaged, but this prospect was averted by the good work of the firemen, who were back in quarters at 11:30.

The properties involved in the fire are owned by Samuel Diamond of Putnam. The damaged Chapin store is a small frame structure built during the past year and is located close beside the larger building that figured in the fire. Goodman's garment store occupies the lower floor of the building, and the family is resident on the second floor. The Goodman store stock was somewhat damaged by water, and there also was damage to the stock and equipment of the Chapin store. It is understood that the losses by the fire are largely covered by insurance.

Borough officials are contemplating bringing before a special meeting of the electors of the borough a proposal under which a bond issue would be authorized, the object being to permit of the borough reducing the interest rate on its loans from 6 per cent to probably as low as 4 1-2 per cent. Under such an arrangement a considerable saving in interest charges would be effected each year. This plan has been under consideration for some time, but on account of high money rates has not been feasible until recently. Now with plenty of cheap money available, the plan should work out admirably.

The borough's debt is about $26,000. This likely will be increased by some few thousand dollars through the borough's sidewalk building program. In any event, a bond issue of $25,000 to $30,000, the first obligation of the kind for the borough, would readily be taken up by certain banks, it is said, and likely disposed of to one customer. Such small issues of good bonds are particularly favored just now. The present also appears to be the ideal time for issuing borough bonds, very likely better than will be the case six months hence. The bond issue would permit of retiring all of the present outstanding notes of the borough, all of them bearing 6 per cent interest, and replace them with bonds that might be placed at an interest rate as low as 4 1-4 per cent and not over 4 1-2 per cent. Borough officials who have gone into the matter believe it should be presented to the voters for consideration.

Important changes are underway at the Mortlake Manor in Brooklyn, property of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the late president. The great old horse barn dating back to the days when stage coaches as well as those of guests of the ancient inn were stabled there has been torn down. It will be replaced by a three-car garage. The south veranda also has been razed, as will be the front veranda at a later date. The entrances will have "hoods" built over them, restoring the outward appearance of the house to its original design, as established by old photographs. Much other work will be done on the inn, which will not be open to the public this season, as for several years past. Mrs. Roosevelt, who sailed for Europe in early April, is expected at Brooklyn in June to remain for at least part of the summer season.

This afternoon Henry P. Dubuc of Mechanic street, as detached assistant manager in charge of the Danielson district for the insurance company the group represents, headed a delegation of six local insurance agents to a banquet for members of the $100,000 club at the Hotel Kimball in Springfield. Membership in this club is attained by selling $100,000 worth of life insurance within a period of 12 months. The six local men who qualified are: H. P. Fuller, F. A. Bernier, I. L. Buteau, Joseph Bussiere, Arthur Blackmore and Lionel LaRocque. They joined at the banquet tonight with other agents from various sections of New England who attained the coveted mark.

At the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney P. Marland, this afternoon from 3 to 7, there was a birthday party for their son, Robert Marland, observing his ninth anniversary. Games were played and refreshments were served. Those attending were Richard Turner, Warren Tanner, Jr., Cadet Hand, Frederick Nash, Marshal Dows, Charles Russell and Morris Heneault.

Another ninth birthday party today was that for Miss Barbara Tillinghast at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett T. Tillinghast, on North Main street. The decorations were in yellow. There were games to interest the little guests and refreshments were served. Those attending were Jacqueline Myers, Martha Davis, Lucile Anderson, Jennie Pockoski, Jennie Cogswell, Virginia Rapp, Mary Musgrave, Dylis Jones, Eva Puckett, Phyllis Kenworthy and Judith Brooks.

The coming Memorial day will find it a comparatively simple matter to locate a considerably larger number of graves of the soldier dead in the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn than was possible prior to the good work done by Sidney R. Bard in conjunction with a state agency for marking soldiers' graves and therefore to mark them in accordance with custom each Memorial day. Numbers of new markers have been erected at graves requiring such attention in the upwards of 30 cemeteries in the town of Killingly.

Mrs. James Monohan and Miss Alice Monohan of Providence, former residents of Danielson, were visitors with relatives and friends here today.

Because the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of this town is a subsidiary, there is local interest in a rumor circulating in New York financial circles and getting some publicity, that Otis & Co., bankers, New York, have obtained a controling interest in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

The big pumper of the fire department was out of the central station on this morning's alarm for fire before the second repeat of the box number, an unusually fast response by the firemen in view of the fact that the department is made up of volunteers and that no one is on duty at the central fire station.

The cold weather of the week is reported to have put a crimp in the ambitions of the average fisherman to go out after trout, and only the most hardy of the devotees of the sport have been trying their luck. Catches have been reported small the past few days.

Two hitch-hikers who were here today report that getting rides from passing machines is not so easy as it was two or three years ago, and that one who sets out on a hike may expect to do considerable walking. Many trucks now carry the legend "No Riders," and many owners of private cars no longer will take the chances of giving a lift to some stranger who may hold them up.

So many people are asking the question, "When will work be started on the new postoffice building?" that it seems necessary to mention that as yet the site for the proposed building has not even been considered by representatives of the government, nor has there been a definite appropriation made for the proposed building. One answer to the question that seems likely to prove correct is "Not this year."

The temperature dropped below the freezing point in Danielson this morning and icicles were observed clinging from roofs and other parts of buildings as late as this noon.

Tax Collector James R. Walsh was at Goodyear today to receive town taxes now due from citizens of the town who live in that area. Collector Walsh will visit other communities of Killingly from day to day, according to a published schedule.

Members of the Ladies' Benevolent society of the Westfield Congregational church met in the church parlor this afternoon.

It is already indicated that there will be an increase in the number of home gardens in Danielson this spring season, by reason of the fact that the things grown will help relieve pressure on the family budget in later months of the year.

Motorists traveling between Danielson and Norwich are noting with interest the lively activity attendant upon the state highway construction projects underway in the towns of Plainfield and Griswold, and it will be that way throughout the summer season.

Such a small number came out last evening for the meeting at the Community house in South Killingly in the interest of better country roads that the procedure was confined to a general discussion of the project. No delegates were elected to the general state convention to be held in Hartford in the near future.

PUTNAM

ESTIMATE FOR COST OF NEW POSTOFFICE INCREASED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 23.—According to a Washington dispatch from The Bulletin's Washington correspondent, received late this afternoon, official authorization was granted to a bill calling for an increase to $33,500 in the governmental estimate for the cost of a postoffice for this city. The increased amount of the estimate for the local postoffice was included in an additional estimate bill calling for $28,693,450 for the government public building programme, submitted to President Hoover yesterday.

The purpose of the estimate is, it was said, to permit the secretary of the treasury to enter contracts under the $315,000,000 authorization for public buildings and to begin work on the gigantic nation-wide undertaking. Little information, other than that received from Washington today, was available here this afternoon concerning the new Putnam postoffice which has been under consideration since the original appropriation was made by congress some years ago. At the present time the government owns a large tract of land on South Main street at the intersection of Grove, which was originally acquired as a site for the proposed postoffice.

COMMITTEES APPOINTED FOR MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 23.—A fitting observance of Memorial day will take place in this city on that day, it was learned Tuesday evening, following the organization meeting of the general committee to have charge of the celebration of the day. The gathering was held in the chamber of commerce rooms on Main street. G. Stanley Shaw, assistant treasurer of the Cargill Trust Co. and past commander of the Anslem Mayotte post, American Legion, was delegated to direct the work of formulating plans for the observance of the day. The various sub-committees appointed to cooperate with Mr. Shaw were: Parade, Henry L. Converse, chairman, John Cronin, Charles E. Richardson, Mrs. Henry N. Benoit, Albert Day; programme, Rev. U. O. Bellerose, chairman, Rev. James F. English, J. Dyer Potter; transportation, Walter N. King, Charles A. Ryan, Mrs. J. Dyer Potter; decorations and flag, Arthur C. Keith, chairman, Mrs. Arthur Tourtellotte, J. Dyer Potter, Ernest J. Durand, Arthur Tourtellotte, Whitman Danielson, Arthur Wood; publicity, Arthur S. Macdonald, Walter N. King, Niel J. Bulger and Myron H. Perry; school children, Supt. Leon M. Farrin, Calvin Stanley, Rev. J. D. Casey.

The committee plans for a parade and the usual exercises at the cemeteries when the graves of the soldier dead will be decorated. Mr. Shaw said today that a second meeting of the general committee will be held at the chamber of commerce rooms next Tuesday evening. Representatives of various fraternal, civic and social organizations in the city are requested to be present in order to aid the committee.

A belated snow storm was received here at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon. The flurries, which were of some intensity, followed a cold snap which sent the mercury down to a few degrees above the freezing mark today, to send those who discarded winter togs a week ago back to the closets for their winter attire before venturing out this morning. Fires, which have been out for a week, were revived in furnaces and public buildings.

ADDRESSES MEETING ON DIRT ROADS QUESTION

There was a large gathering at the Palmer Memorial hall in Woodstock hill Wednesday evening where farmers, in a resolution, endorsed the slogan adopted by rural organizations all over the country, "A Hard Surface to Every Farm Home." That rural roads in the springtime are in deplorable and almost impassable condition is a fact generally accepted and the purpose of these meetings is to stimulate a movement to improve the condition of the country roads. The surfaces of the highways would be rolled and possibly coated with oil. Much talk, many promises, but no action is the general outcome of every movement fostered by individuals. The state grange, fostering the movement, is of the opinion that a cooperative plan in which the endorsement of rural bodies in every community could be obtained would bring satisfactory results in the matter of obtaining better roads. During discussions at tonight's meeting, such subjects as the farmer paying his burden of taxation, registration and other assessments pertaining to the legal operation of a motor vehicle and still obtaining no recognition when better roads are suggested were brought out by those participating in the debates.

The speaker of the evening was Louis G. Tolles of Southington, master of the Connecticut state grange. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Senexet grange of Woodstock, which is in accord with the views of other rural organizations in their campaign to secure better dirt roads throughout the state.

Although it is generally conceded that the gasoline motor coach service being rendered by the New Haven road on the Southbridge and East Thompson branch, is being run at a loss to the railroad, it is not believed that the line will be discontinued at the present, since an outline of service was printed again this season in the new time-tables of the railroad recently issued. The gasoline-driven train carries about three passengers each way a day, between Southbridge and East Thompson, in addition to some express and a small amount of mail. A meeting of business men and manufacturers of Webster and Southbridge with railroad officials was scheduled to have taken place this afternoon in Southbridge. The merchants, it is understood, intend to protest any move of the railroad company to remove the gasoline-driven coach from the line, since it is the only type of railroad passenger service serving the three communities at the present.

HERBERT SUNDUS GAVE TALK AT ROTARY MEETING

At the weekly meeting of the Putnam Rotary club held today at the Putnam Inn, the following were declared elected members of the board of directors: Rev. U. O. Bellerose, Alexander Gilman, Alexander Maitland, Subbo Nickoloff, Ray C. Bosworth, Arthur Hughes and Arthur E. Smith. At a meeting of the club to be held in the near future a new president and vice-president will be appointed from the board of directors elected today.

Herbert Sundus, an engineer in the employ of the Southern New England Telephone Co. at New Haven, gave an interesting talk following the club luncheon. The subject was "The Use of Telephone Circuits in Radio Broadcasting." The nature of the talk by Mr. Sundus was purely technical, but his subject was made clear by the use of lantern slides depicting various types of telephone apparatus used in radio broadcast. The illustrations served to key interest up to a higher point. By the use of phonograph records especially made for his discourse, Mr. Sundus outlined the care and preparation required before radio programmes can be put on the "air" on nation-wide hookups. A number of the records demonstrated voice range frequencies and the effects of losing frequencies at various ranges.

Mr. Sundus also explained the meaning of the terms, red, blue, gray, Columbia and National broadcast systems which are invariably referred to during the course of broadcast reception by radio announcers. About 150 stations are linked together on nation-wide circuits, over 30,000 miles of telephone wires. In concluding, the speaker intimated that without the aid of the telephone system, radio would be unable to continue on the high commercial plane it has attained during the past two years, since its programmes would be confined to a small area.

Guests at today's Rotary luncheon were Mr. Sundus, and Lawrence Grew of New Haven, Sidney Bard, Henry Dubuc and Henry Johnson of Danielson and James Filmore of this city.

The semi-annual meeting of the Drop-In class of the Congregational church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alice Carpenter on Wilkinson street and during the business session officers for the ensuing six months were elected. Mrs. Frank A. Fuller of Tatem street was elected to head the class. The following subordinate officers comprise the executive slate: Mrs. Anna Sampson, vice-president; Miss Josephine Warren, secretary; Mrs. Hattie Bowen, treasurer. The following committees were appointed to serve for the remaining half year: Social, Mrs. Wendell Witter, Mrs. Walter Rich, Mrs. Lillian Phillips; finance, Mrs. H. L. Pease, Mrs. C. S. Adams, Mrs. George A. Harrington; Sunshine, Mrs. Ralph L. Kenyon; sewing, Mrs. Annie Child, Mrs. Milo P. Warren and Mrs. W. H. Mansfield; calling, Mrs. Alice Carpenter, Mrs. Georgianna Longden; publicity, Mrs. Edith L. Perry.

WEDDING

Landouzy-Ingalls

Last evening at 7 o'clock in St. Mary's church, Mrs. Bertha Ingalls of Manchester, N. H., was united in marriage to Ernest Landouzy of School street, this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the church, and was witnessed by Roland LaPorte of Putnam.

Importations of tea to the United States for the fiscal year ending in June amounted to more than 93,500,000 pounds.

STATE PRISON PROTECTION

When tragedies occur there is very frequently contained therein a warning to others. They set others to thinking about the adequacy of provisions for the prevention of like affairs and they often are the means of unearthing conditions which were not recognized and emphasizing others which were known but not remedied.

When dams have given way it has been the cue for those responsible for others to get busy and learn whether they could be considered safe. When floods have occurred steps have been taken to try and secure prevention in the future, so it is only what is to be expected when prison authorities in the various states are bestirring themselves, as the result of the fire in the Ohio penitentiary, to learn whether such a thing could happen in their institutions.

If there is not an adequate knowledge of such conditions, such a move is certainly the right thing. If the possibility of such a fire has not been considered, it is time that it was. If provisions for fighting fires have not been made and if the means of releasing prisoners from cell blocks in case of fire are not efficient, the Ohio case has certainly furnished a sufficient talking point in order to have them made so.

When Ohio comes to replace the penitentiary it is safe to say that it will do so with a fireproof structure. Still there are states where existing institutions will be considered adequate for many years to come, and when it is recognized that they are not fireproof there cannot be overlooked the obligation of providing proper fire prevention and fire-fighting methods.

Even though the Ohio prison fire may have been set by convicts and the dead were killed by acts of their fellow convicts, there cannot be overlooked the importance of maintaining conditions which will make it impossible for such fires to be kindled. Because men have broken all kinds of laws and made themselves obnoxious to society, so much so that they have to be locked up, doesn't mean that they should be subjected to death in their cages from fire and smoke. It cannot be said that the authorities upheld any such horrible idea, but there has been disclosed the necessity of preventing it, and states that are losing no time in having their prisons thoroughly inspected for proper protection are properly busy.

IMMIGRATION LEGISLATION

Getting an immigration bill that will meet requirements and escape attack over a period of years is more easily advocated than accomplished. Immigration legislation is subject to frequent changes. It has been in the past and it probably will be in the future.

How sentiment changes in regard to it is interestingly illustrated by the action that was taken this week in the senate in support of the amendment to the immigration bill by Senator Norbeck. This calls for the abolition of the national origins provision which was put into operation last year against the advice and effort of President Hoover. In the adoption of the law in the previous administration it was provided that the president should proclaim its effectiveness the first of July. The president was helpless in the situation. He urged action delaying the date or abolishing it but congress refused to listen. The consequence was that the law was put into effect and now those who have done everything they could to embarrass the president by opposing his recommendations have swung around and given their approval to the action which he previously advocated. The senate has for once done something that the president asked.

Thus far all seems well, except that the senate action isn't the final disposition of the matter. Neither does the Norbeck amendment involve the whole bill or the national origins include all the Norbeck amendment. In addition to ending the national origins provision, the Norbeck amendment would reduce the immigration total from 150,000 to 120,000. That is, perhaps, no more than the house would be willing to approve under the present unemployment, but there is also included in the bill the requirement that Latin-American immigration should, in the future, be subjected to quota restrictions.

That is another proposition. It represents an effort which may be desirable from certain viewpoints, but equally undesirable from others. The president is opposed. Whether the house will look with favor upon any such move is a question. It might be favorable to the ending of the national origins clause but not be willing to swallow the other. Thus it seems to be a case of loading a bill down with so many provisions, good and bad, that the good are endangered because of the bad.

SEEKING AMERICAN DOLLAR

While there are those who are getting the summer hotels ready, preparing for the opening of resorts and shore cottages, it must be apparent that this does not represent all the plans that are being made to interest and attract the summer visitors, vacationists and tourists.

There will be a big business done by entertaining the millions who will travel about this country, invade New England and even cross the boundary lines before snow flies again, but the tourist season is also one that deeply concerns other countries. Already Europe is getting ready for the tourist trade, wondering perhaps how much effect the slump in the stock market last fall is going to have upon the number of travelers, but realizing, nevertheless, that it is a profitable source of revenue.

With European countries benefiting heavily from American tourists, it is natural that they should lay their plans accordingly, that they should direct increased attention to European travel, to special attractions across the Atlantic and to the provisions that are made to take care of all who come.

It is possible for them to show that Italy has abandoned the charge it used to make for visas, that France has made a large reduction and that there is opportunity for the United States to help out on the situation by reducing the passport charges. France has got busy and named a high commissioner of tourism, the idea being to suggest ideas for popularizing the various sections of the country that tourists will be attracted. Other countries have been setting forth their attractions and making special claims. It is all being done, of course, with an eye on the American dollar.

Such a preparation is fair enough, but the method adopted in Italy and France of cutting down those charges, which have been encountered so often and in such amount, might well be extended to the many other things. It would unquestionably make a hit if some city or country were to advertise that Americans would be charged no more than any others. Perhaps in time that idea will be adopted.

EARLY TREATY ACTION

Unless something develops to cause a change of mind, the naval treaty that has been negotiated at London will be submitted to the senate at an early day for ratification. With the delegates on their way home it will be only a short time before the pact will be placed in the hands of the president, who has indicated his desire to see it put into operation at as early a date as possible. That time depends upon the action by the respective governments. The United States has played a most important part in behalf of the treaty and it is now to be expected that it will cause no greater delay than necessary in acting upon it.

Here again is another case where the wish of the president is known. That can be taken in two ways in the senate. It can be made an added reason for prompt and affirmative action, after the necessary scrutiny of the provisions, or it can be accepted as the signal for more of that opposition which has developed to presidential preferences for no other reason.

There is no good excuse for delaying the submission of the treaty at this time. Congress is in session. When it will adjourn no one knows, although there is quite a general desire to get away on the part of the many who are obliged to prepare for their coming election contests. The negotiations surrounding the treaty have been closely followed. They are fresh in mind and the whole matter can best be acted upon in the next few weeks rather than after an indefinite delay.

The agreement is one that will help to bring about a better understanding among the nations. It should allay distrust and reduce suspicion without in any way abandoning a proper national defense by any of the nations. It will aid in reducing that endless and needless, wasteful race for naval supremacy which ends nowhere, which has not prevented wars in the past and has no charm over the future.

BLINDLY ADDRESSING MAIL

An effort has been made for a long time to get people to write the addresses on envelopes going through the mail in such a manner that they can be easily deciphered and delivered. There will always be cases where mistakes are made in the name and in the address, through no fault of the writer, but there are many times more cases where incomplete and inaccurate addresses are due to negligence and carelessness.

In an effort to get a better response from the public, the postmaster general has ruled that henceforth those letters bearing blind addresses and which do not carry the name and address of the sender in the corner must be sent to the deadletter office if they cannot be returned to the sender.

It is not a difficult matter to address a letter correctly, to place the name of the city and state in the proper place and to add the street address and number. All of these are important for the prompt and proper delivery of mail, and even then there are times when it fails. But, for the protection of all mail and to insure the return of matter which cannot for any reason be delivered as desired, the placing of the name and address, or at least the address, of the writer in the upper left hand corner requires but a moment and it saves much confusion and uncertainty.

There are those painstaking addressers of envelopes who stand in no danger of having their letters returned. It is unfortunate that there cannot be more of this kind so that the number of those who impose needless duties upon the postal service would be negligible in number. As it is, they appear to be so numerous that more than the making of a request seems necessary in order to secure compliance.

MARIAN CHANGES HER MIND

Marian gazed out the window as the train slipped past fields of mid-summer grandeur. She was on her way to Hilldale at last! How many months she had looked forward to this trip! And now, after school had closed and her year of teaching was over, she was arriving at her friend's home with fond anticipation of all the expected visit promised to hold.

"You must spend at least a month with me during your vacation," Frances had told her. "We'll have such fun together. Hilldale is gorgeous in midsummer. You'll love it. And I want you to meet my brother, Everett. He's perfectly crazy to know you, dear, after all I've told him about you. He used to gaze at your picture on my desk and simply exclaim over you!" Then had followed a discussion of Everett, his good points, of which there were many, and his bad ones, of which his sister could find little to say.

"I know you two will get along famously," Frances had said. "He's interested in no end of things—he's been everywhere for his firm—India, China, Russia—Everett's not so young any more, but he's just at the time of life when a woman of real intelligence like you will most appreciate him. And, my dear, wear your brightest clothes, for he adores colors."

She knew Frances was a born matchmaker but, discounting even her sisterly enthusiasm, Marian felt that Everett Manning must be such a person as she long had dreamed of knowing.

The conductor called "Fifth avenue, Hilldale," and Marian, seizing her bags, hurried to the platform. But to her amazement it was deserted. Couldn't they have received her letter? Was there some dreadful mistake? Or had they just neglected coming to meet her? With a feeling of apprehension, she found a cab and gave Frances' street number.

There it was, the brown stone house Frances had described in such glowing terms, the family homestead, set back in a grove of maples—but to Marian it looked bleak and uninviting.

Grasping her bag she went up to the door and rang the bell. And then a sickening sensation came over her as the door opened and she beheld him—in the flesh—while her dreams of romance crashed about her head. True, there was the sleek black hair Frances had raved about, but it was thinning toward the top—she remembered Frances saying he was no longer so young. He had the easy grace of a man of the world and further there was in ample evidence his love of bright colors—for he was wearing a red and green striped silk shirt. Marian made a brave effort, swallowed her disappointment and in a weakish voice inquired: "Are—you Mr. Manning?"

"Yes, I am," responded the source of her disappointment and then suddenly, looking at her bags, "Why, you must be little Marian Fisher!" Marian nodded dumbly.

"Is Frances at home?" she asked.

"So you're Marian Fisher!" he repeated while Marian sank into a chair and pressed her hand to her aching head. "And you made that trip up from the station alone! I can't understand it—Where can that little scamp, Frances be—to have run off and left, just when she was expecting you—" He was the kindest person she had ever met, but Marian wasn't interested in that, or in his excuses. She was trying to stifle a throbbing headache and contrive an adequate excuse for fleeing from this place and returning to town before Frances should arrive and see how greatly she was shaken. But just then the door burst open and Frances herself bounced in. And right behind her appeared the best looking individual Marian had ever beheld.

"Marian! Of all things!" cried Frances flinging her arms about her astonished friend and kissing her. "Where were you? Didn't you come on the train?"

"Why—of course," stammered Marian, while the smiling young man behind Frances smiled harder than ever. "I got off when he called Hilldale and—"

"Fifth avenue!" exclaimed Frances. "Oh, my dear, I should have told you there was an outlying station before you get into town. We've simply hunted everywhere for you."

"Oh," murmured Marian, "I got along all right. I found the place and your brother Everett—" she waved toward Mr. Manning.

"Everett!" exclaimed Frances looking up and laughing. "Why, this is Everett." The smiling young man bowed and grasped Marian's hand warmly. "And this," said Frances, introducing the cause of Marian's perturbation, "is our dear old Uncle Hiram!"—Chicago News.

CHILD TRAINING

Living With Our Children

Pauline Herr Thomas

Said a mother of my acquaintance to me the other day:

"My dear, I can't understand these children of mine. I feel sure I do not excel in the arts of child-rearing, but there is one thing I have always prided myself upon and that is the interest that I take in my children's activities. I am never too tired or busy to help Sister with her latest requirements for a school or social affair. Sonny's childish airplane model or his more recent place on the soccer team, indeed his every interest has had a share in my enthusiasm as great as his own.

"With four children, I think I might have been excused occasional lapses. Yet, I tell you, I have never flagged in my interest in one of them, down to seven-year-old Peggy. Do you wonder that I am bitterly disappointed when after all my effort my boys and girls do not come to me with their difficulties or triumphs as they should? They never open their hearts as I had hoped they would.

"Sister rushes off to work or pleasure with little or no explanation, offers even less upon her return, and, upon my solicitation, gives it very reluctantly. Only yesterday, I had to read the local newspaper to learn of Sonny's victory in the park tennis tournament. I simply can not understand it at all!"

At this point there was a commotion at the door.

"No, you can't come in, I say. You are not coming into my house,"—in a shrill voice, unmistakably Peggy's.

"All right for you, Peggy Watts. I'm going to tell your mother,"—in a still higher pitch.

"Peggy, what is the matter, now! Are you quarrelling with Ruth again? What is it all about?" demanded her mother.

"Oh, what does it matter what it is all about, I'd like to know! I can't do a thing you don't want to know something about, Mother. Ruth's mother never asks her such things." This from a seven-year-old!

I felt sorry for Mrs. Watts. She was heartily ashamed of this show of disrespect. She remonstrated with Peggy, to no effect, of course. The answer to her problem was in that retort of Peggy's.

It was Froebel who said, "Come, let us live with our children." He himself could not have wished for a finer demonstration of this appeal than the attitude of thoughtful parents today.

Discrimination between wholesome interest and prying questioning, however, calls for tact and good judgment. A childish quarrel should sometimes remain the child's own affair, just as we often wish our own differences to remain undiscussed. The child's inherent right to a degree of privacy in all pursuits is as vital as our own and should be respected accordingly.

By all means, let us live with our children, but let us not misinterpret this counsel. Familiarity is known to breed contempt, but consideration and genuine courtesy make such "living" delightful.

YOUR HEALTH

What Is The Doctor For?

By J. T. Rooks, M. D.
Walla Walla, Wash.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

"The average duration of human life is gradually increasing. It has not been many years since an American child had at birth a life expectancy of only about forty years, while today it has advanced to fifty-eight years." We often see such newspaper and magazine headlines, and these statistics (you know we are told that figures do not lie) appear to indicate a very substantial gain in our expectation of reaching a healthy old age. But unfortunately this increase has been due almost entirely to the better care and attention which our infants and children are constantly receiving, and instead of extending our span of years we have merely decreased infant and child mortality.

Actually the life expectancy for people over forty has only increased about one year, while the death rate from the so-called diseases of middle life seems to be climbing from year to year, and one doubts if the relative increase in the number of very old people has more than kept pace with the corresponding increase in population. Organic diseases of the heart, cancer, Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and other constitutional diseases are causing more deaths today than ever before. These diseases steal upon us in the prime of life. The mother, the father, the head of the family is cut off at a time when a father's support or a mother's loving care is absolutely indispensable. Such tragedies, occurring with increasing frequency, are the tribute we pay to our modern mode of living and methods of caring for our health.

Some of the most deadly infections, such as smallpox, diphtheria, typhoid, yellow fever, cholera and others have been rendered practically harmless by preventive measures, when people cooperate in using them. But with the so-called diseases of middle life our greatest problem remains unsolved for unlike many acute infections these diseases do not occur in epidemic form and it may be for this reason that the great masses of our population are so apathetic in their attitude towards them. The remedy lies actually in preventive medicine and until there is a general awakening and a definite desire on the part of the majority of our citizens to cooperate intelligently with the medical profession in the solution of this great problem, there can be no hope of improvement.

The tendency to turn to the physician as the court of last appeal is still far too great and in many cases when these eleventh hour calls are made, the filing of a properly completed death certificate is the greatest service that one has a right to expect of the physician. But that should not be his chief task.

If every man, woman and child, while in good health, would consult the family physician at least once every year and insist on a good careful physical examination, this simple procedure alone would help marvelously in preventing these premature deaths; for our first problem is to determine each individual's exact condition while in health and to correct any abnormalities that may arise and relieve the symptoms of disease while it is still in the incipient stage. Periodic health examinations are, therefore, matters of the greatest importance to each individual's life; and I know of nothing that could possibly equal them in the matter of reducing the high cost of medical care.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 23—Years ago, the old state, war and navy building housed many elaborate social functions. Diplomatic breakfasts and dinners were served there.

But the growing demand for utilitarian office space crowded all these uses out of the picture. It has been a long time since anything but a limited grab-and-gallop lunch counter for war department clerks, established in a dark lower corridor, was available in the gray old pile to meet the needs of the inner man.

With the movement towards outward reconstruction of the building to harmonize with the classic design of the treasury now actively afoot, however, a stir of talk is going on toward reviving also some of its former diplomatic social grandeur. The navy department was ousted during the World war and now the war department is to retain but meagre foothold.

Seek Revival

Only the offices of the war secretary, the chief of staff and the adjutant general with his current files and papers will soon remain to challenge the state department's full supremacy in the structure that in its day was the largest building in the world under a single roof.

In the old navy wing, facing the white house, high up under the mansard roof, is the one-time navy library room. It is on the fifth floor, directly above the temporary quarters into which President Hoover moved his offices after the white house fire. And it is that room which some state department officials hope ultimately to see set aside for a diplomatic conference room, or for state dinners by the secretary.

Lavish

Congress was lavish in appropriations when it provided for completion of this old building. It is built as solidly as the rock of Gibraltar. Every interior door is a huge hardwood affair.

Outside, where the double stairway leads up, is a huge skylight, glowing with deepest navy blue for all the years it has been there. Within is a flooring of Minton tiles. The iron walls are set off with 32 panels of green malachite from the Alps, striped with yellow sienna from Italy and red porphyry from France.

There are decorations of Mexican onyx and four mighty bronze figures representing War and Peace, Liberty, Industry and Mechanics, and Literature and Arts. Over the doorway is a bit of verd antique excavated from the temple of Jupiter in Pompeii in 1848. And all this today is the setting for the index bureau files of the state department.

Incidentally, those hundreds of big hardwood doors cost Uncle Sam nearly $300 apiece many years ago. They could not be replaced today. Yet when alterations were made some years ago, a Virginia contractor got possession of enough to build himself a garage of them.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Mrs. Quack's Proud Moment

In this I'm sure we all agree—
A mother's pride is good to see.
—Old Mother Nature

Nothing happened to those precious eggs of Mrs. Quack's. Plenty of worries she had and many moments when she was terribly frightened. But Peter Rabbit and Chatterer the Red Squirrel were the only ones who discovered her secret and so in time those ten eggs hatched and ten fuzzy little ducklings were ready to go for their first swim. It was a proud moment for Mrs. Quack when she led them out from under those big, broad skunk cabbage leaves, which had so well protected that nest, and started for the Smiling Pool.

But if Mrs. Quack was proud, she was as anxious as she was proud. All the anxiety which had been hers while she was on the nest was nothing compared to the anxiety which she felt now and knew she would continue to feel as long as those ducklings were too small to care for themselves. A lively lot were those bright-eyed babies. Yes, indeed, they were a lively lot. Mrs. Quack felt as if she needed eyes all over her body to keep track of them. The very first thing she taught them was to mind instantly. She knew that their safety depended on this and she took great pains to make them understand that something dreadful would happen to them if they didn't mind.

Mrs. Quack came over at once to get the corn that Farmer Brown's boy threw in the water

Down to the Laughing Brook Mrs. Quack led them first. You would have laughed to see them paddling about for the first time. They had no more fear of the water than they had of the ground when they had left the nest. Then Mrs. Quack swam down the Laughing Brook, going slowly, so that the babies could keep up with her. And in this way they reached the Smiling Pool. A proud mother, indeed, was Mrs. Quack as she sailed out into the Smiling Pool with her ten babies just back of her.

Farmer Brown's boy happened to come down to the Smiling Pool with some corn, just as Mrs. Quack and her babies appeared, and perhaps you can guess how delighted he was. Mrs. Quack came over at once to get the corn that Farmer Brown's boy threw in the water. The babies didn't know what to make of it when they first saw their mother seeming to stand on her head in the water. They gathered around and just stared at her in round eyed surprise. Of course, they couldn't eat yellow corn, as they were so little that they had to have softer food. So presently their mother led them over along the swampy edge of the Smiling Pool, where among the tussocks of grass and bulrushes they could quickly hide in time of danger. There they found insects of various kinds and they soon were tipping up in the shallow water and searching in the mud below for things to eat.

Curiously enough, that very night Unc' Billy Possum found the deserted nest. He never had given up looking for it. Every once in a while when he had nothing else to do he would go looking for Mrs. Quack and her nest, and it just happened that the night after that nest was deserted Unc' Billy, poking around, happened to push his head under some big skunk cabbage leaves and right into a mass of feathers. They were the feathers with which Mrs. Quack had lined her nest. But the nest was empty save for some broken eggshells. Unc' Billy didn't waste any time there. His nose told him that that nest hadn't been deserted very long and right away he started to look for those ducklings. Those baby ducks would be quite as good eating and perhaps better eating than the eggs would have been.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

Why Algiers Celebrates

Algiers is donning party clothes. One hundred years ago French troops captured the city. Now the French government, proud of its North African port, is planning to celebrate the event.

"An obscure walled town, clinging to the steep Mediterranean bank opposite Barcelona, Spain, where raucous coffee house orchestras and wild tales of adventurous pirates who operated out of this port formed the only local excitement, was Algiers until 1830," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Today Algiers ranks with the busiest ports on the Mediterranean. Terrace above terrace, the dazzling white city arises from the water's edge to the walled citadel that dominates Algiers, its harbor and the land and sea for many miles beyond. Each row of houses on streets paralleling the shore line thrust at least one story above the roofs of the row in front, as if straining for an unhampered view of the harbor.

"Cargo and passenger boats fly an international medley of flags. There are huge transatlantic boats destined for Genoa or Naples; British boats from a half dozen colonies that dot the world; Japanese and Chinese boats dominating many craft from the east. The French flag is everywhere in Algiers and there are so many French ships in the harbor that natives take their arrival as a matter of daily routine.

"Among the French steamers are the mail boats which make the 500-mile run from Marseille in less than 24 hours. In a year nearly 5,000 ocean greyhounds and more than 10,000 Mediterranean coasters stir the blue waters of Algiers harbor, not to mention the many hundreds of smaller local craft that dot the anchorage.

"Out in the harbor are boat loads of coal and hillocks of coal cover large wharves; for Algiers is an important coaling station. Coal is just one of the reasons for a harbor full of boats. Large barrels of Algerian wine are piled high. Near-by are piles of smaller barrels, huge mounds of grain-filled sacks, heaps of boxes packed with luscious dates, and piles of cork bark, the chief export of Algiers, stacked like cord wood.

"Engines shunt cars from one wharf to another for loading and unloading by half naked, dark-tanned natives; huge wagons, some drawn by six horses and driven by barefooted, beturbaned, men in sheetlike gowns, come and go in an endless procession; and now and then a five-ton auto truck driven by an impatient chauffeur attempts to open a gap in the traffic by blowing a noisy horn.

"Back of the busy waterfront is a wall with numerous arches leading to spacious warehouses. The roofs of these warehouses form the Boulevard de la Republique, lined with 6-story buildings housing Algiers banks and business houses. Pedestrians reach the Boulevard by stairways while vehicles approach it by ramplike roadways.

"The Boulevard de la Republique is not only the beginning of Algiers proper but also the beginning of the French quarter. The native quarter lies just beyond it, up the steep hillside. Numerous streets running at right angles to the Boulevard de la Republique remind the traveler of those of Paris. Plate glass show windows display the latest French frocks for women, men's haberdashery and other merchandise. French street cars, some with American equipment, clang their way through the narrow streets and bright-colored autos stop at the curb where native chauffeurs in uniforms from Paris, assist their passengers, attired in Parisian modes, to alight.

"The only touch of the Orient here is in the street crowd where white-gowned, veiled Moslem women with pantaloons as large as filled potato sacks rub elbows with smart French officers in natty blue uniforms, lithe French soldiers in blue jackets and brick dust colored pantaloons, and vacationists from England, America and France who migrate to Algiers annually like New Yorkers flock to Florida. There also are unveiled Jewesses in gay dresses and bright shawls, dirty ragged, bronzed-face, tatooed Kabyle women and natives from the islands of the Mediterranean.

"You can throw a stone from the edge of the French quarter to the center of the native quarter. Where the gay, busy French quarter abruptly ends, the quiet native quarter begins. Stairways lead from the French to the native quarter. Mounting the steps one passes from west to east; from clean, airy streets into byways too narrow for vehicles, where upper stories protrude so that window sills nearly meet.

"Here are bare-legged negroes from the Sudan, Arabs from the desert, Mozabites or Sahara Jews, and a sprinkling of native soldiers, jostling one another. In mere holes in the flanking walls are native shops of questionable cleanliness. In one hole about eight feet square, four men repair shoes. Near by a carpenter works in quarters scarcely large enough for an American carpenter's bench, and within eyeshot of the carpenter is a hole where native artisans are making jewelry out of horns."

THERMOS IDENTIFIED WITH COMMUNITY INTERESTS SAYS COMPANY'S PRESIDENT

How the Thermos bottle is made and how it is brought to the attention of the buying public was entertainingly told by Aurin E. Payson, president of the American Thermos Bottle Co. at the Wednesday meeting of the Norwich Rotary club. Mr. Payson graphically told how the bottle is made and how through the research laboratories of the company a number of other heat-resisting articles have been put on the market. Mr. Payson told his audience that Thermos needed Norwich and that Norwich needed Thermos.

He said in part:

It is a great pleasure to address you Rotarians, representing as I do for a moment one of the manufacturers of your community. Permit me to say at the start that if, as I understand, this is part of a program whereby this influential body of gentlemen is going to become more interested in the manufacturing activities of Norwich and its surrounding areas, I wish to be the first to congratulate you upon the wisdom of such a course. Barring extraordinary circumstances the average American community is successful and prosperous in a direct ratio to the success and prosperity of the industrial concerns in its vicinity. We hear of business conditions in Detroit being bad because the automobile business is slack, we have heard in the past how New England has suffered because the textile industry has been in poor shape and part of the struggle of the average American city is, therefore, to procure diversification in its manufactured products. Under these circumstances it is evident that in an industrial section such as the east the success or failure of manufacturing enterprises near a city determine in a large measure whether that city is prosperous or otherwise.

For the Rotary club of Norwich to interest itself in the manufacturers who are established in this vicinity appears to me to be a distinctly progressive step. If manufacturers are busy their payrolls are large, in turn their requirements for raw materials, building materials, mill supplies, etc., are many and this makes business in the community active for merchants, bankers and all the professions who serve the people who dwell there. It would seem to me that any manufacturer ought to welcome the opportunity of presenting to you the story of his product, of his business, of his hopes and problems, because it is in this stage that many times constructive suggestions can be offered and a community spirit favorable to that manufacturers' purposes built up, which may serve the manufacturer in good stead and through him the community.

Contract Provisions Exceeded

The American Thermos Bottle company located in Norwich in 1912. It had, however, been organized and active in business for about five years previous to that time in New York. Its location here was accompanied by arrangements made with some of the public spirited citizens of the city who were desirous of seeing this industry become established within its limits. At that time, for instance, it was recited in the contract that at least $300,000 should be expended in advertising within the next ten years and in addition at least $300,000 in payrolls should be expended in Norwich during the same time. Of course there were other conditions in the contract but these two are interesting during the next ten years after the signing of the contract the American Thermos Bottle company actually expended over $1,000,000 in advertising in which the name Norwich was prominently used, and instead of spending only $300,000 in payrolls it expended during that ten year period over two and one-half million dollars in payrolls.

The company in 1922 established a glass factory in West Virginia where natural gas was available. At that plant the glass blanks, or pistons as they are known in the trade, are blown, the smaller sizes being blown on automatic machinery and the larger sizes by hand. These are shipped to Norwich by rail and here the filler and bottle are completed. A pair of pistons are cracked off and one placed inside the other, then they are sealed at the top, a bottom is formed, they are tubulated, silvered and the air exhausted between the walls and sealed. This completed filler is then placed in a metal case or jacket of other material, assembled in cartons and shipped. There are all kinds of styles and sizes of bottles produced; they run from the small size half pint bottle used in a school child's luncheon kit to fancy silver plated and hand decorated desk sets and boudoir sets.

Four years ago this company established an engineering department to do two things; First, to renovate and improve its present manufacturing processes, and second, to develop and improve its product. It is a fact that there had been probably no intelligent research work in the vacuum bottle industry in the last twenty years. Nearly fifty years ago Sir William DeWar, the English scientist, developed a vacuum flask in order to hold certain chemicals that he was testing in a state of even temperature during his experiments. These bottles were fragile and could only be used in an upright position because there were no supports between the walls. A German in 1907 hit upon the idea of placing asbestos pads between the walls and it was this patent that was bought in Germany by the founder of the American Thermos Bottle company and brought to this country. From that time on the company had capitalized on its position in the market with a new item and the success it made was the success that a new article which is needed always brings until it can be copied and improved upon. The company was relying upon its trade-mark Thermos which it owns and which though very valuable in itself is not an excuse for lack of effort to improve the product which carries this brand. Therefore, the work of this engineering department was; first, to improve the processes and cut costs. For over two years this work went on with the result that practically all methods of manufacturers were renovated and changed, always with a view of improving quality and at the same time reducing costs. During the last two and one-half years attention has been turned to the product and it is most interesting to see what it is possible to discover about a product, concerning which it is thought all is known, when determined study is applied to the subject.

Different Glass Types

It was found for instance that by using different types of glass it was possible to make these bottles in larger sizes than it had before been thought possible. Finally pyrex glass was determined upon to be the most desirable form of glass to use because of its structural strength, its heat resisting qualities and low expansion coefficient. Bottles were made in sizes, by use of this glass, of one gallon, 2½ gallons, five gallons, 10 gallons and finally 15 gallons in capacity. Immediately then many more opportunities were presented to the field of Thermos activities, as well of course as a great many new problems, and that is about the position that the Thermos company is in today. Research is still going on and undoubtedly will produce even more pleasing results than it has in the past, but already it has shown enough to occupy the attention of the company's executives for some time. The other problems of merchandising finance and production have to be solved simultaneously when new products are attempted, otherwise the company can easily be robbed of the advantages of its own initiative in the field of research. Many uses appear for these new larger containers, for instance, the field of soft drinks, ice cream, counter display jars and possibly the new frozen foodstuffs industry to some extent will be interested in these new products.

As a growing member of the Norwich manufacturing community Thermos is interested in all of the problems that arise in that area. Thermos has tried, especially in recent years, to take its part in major charities and activities of a civic nature. It is interested in any move that will improve the traffic situation, the deepening of the Thames channel, etc. Thermos is, I believe, one of the largest users of commercial gas in the state of Connecticut, therefore, it is interested in as low a cost as possible for this commodity. Thermos is a large user of electric power, and inasmuch as all of its products destined for consumption in metropolitan New York are shipped by truck over the road every night it is interested in anything that will improve highway transportation in Connecticut. In other words you see the interests of a Connecticut manufacturer are most always the interests of the average Connecticut citizen, and as such the Thermos company wishes to do its part and co-operate with this club or any other club that will assist in improving the community and contribute in some measure to the prosperity of this part of the state.

Mr. Payson was given a hearty vote of appreciation for his talk.

The business session of the meeting was in charge of Vice President F. Russell Smith in the absence of President Frank R. Murdy and the program was in charge of Harold D. Larrabee. The song leaders were John E. Sellman and Ellis Thayer.

STOECKEL SAYS BAD ROADS AROUSE DRIVERS' VIGILANCE

A new theory of the cause and prevention of automobile accidents is advanced by Motor Vehicles Commissioner Robbins E. Stoeckel of this state to account for the phenomenal decrease of ten per cent in the total number of motor vehicle accidents reported to the department for the first quarter of the year in comparison with that period of 1929. In the face of an increase of 17,957 in the number of automobiles registered to March 31 as compared with last year and an increase of 32,725 in the number of operators' licenses, issued to that date, the number of accidents reported in 1930 was 446 less than the total to the same date in 1929.

Commissioner Stoeckel's theory, in brief, is as follows: After a certain volume of traffic is reached, accidents decrease in an undetermined ratio to the further increase in traffic, and the danger period for serious accidents becomes the period during the day when traffic over a given highway is lightest.

In support of his theory, the motor vehicle commissioner pointed out that it is a well known contradiction that from the standpoint of accidents, "If a road is absolutely dangerous, it is safer from danger of accidents." A narrow, winding road will often show fewer accidents than a broad, straight highway, he pointed out.

On this basis, from his own experience, and from years of study of motor vehicle operators, Commissioner Stoeckel has noted that the average driver takes unusual precautions to prevent accident when passing through a section of road he knows to be dangerous. It is his theory that as traffic on a highway increases, the average driver recognizes that extraordinary precaution must be taken, and a point is eventually reached where care is being taken by all drivers and the accident record of a section of highways will become better.

Connecticut, Rhode Island, and certain sections of Massachusetts and New York in which conditions approximate those in this state, are expected to have a similar experience by the commissioner, who feels that traffic is now so complex on Connecticut highways that operators have become accustomed to take greater care than before. As traffic reaches a peak on certain other sections of highway, the commissioner hopes that a further reduction in reportable accidents will be noted.

The commissioner realizes, he said, that with the increase in traffic, minor collisions with no damage worse than slightly dented mudguards may well be expected, but on the other hand, he expects that the more serious accidents will decrease.

Mr. Stoeckel pointed out that the worst accidents on the main traveled highways of the state frequently occur when the traffic is below its peak and the driver relaxes his vigilance and increases his speed.

"I am convinced that reckless driving is at the bottom of the greater number of automobile accidents reported today," said Mr. Stoeckel. "Few persons indeed drive in a reckless manner during the peak of traffic, when traffic is heavy over the road on which they are traveling. If a person operates while drunk, or recklessly, there is considerable question whether or not he is a proper person to be allowed to operate an automobile, and it is upon this theory that the department revokes or suspends operators' licenses. It is the function of the courts to punish an operator for the wrongs he commits, but it is the function of the motor vehicles department to keep persons who operate improperly or give indications that they are improper persons to operate, from behind the steering wheels of motor vehicles."

During the first three months of 1930, 3,931 accidents were reported to the state department of motor vehicles, and during the same period in 1929, 4,377 accidents with more than $25 damage were reported.

Of these accidents, the largest decrease was reported in accidents occurring within city limits, the decreases being 279, and the accidents reported 2,623 in 1929 as compared with 2,344 this year. A slightly smaller decrease is reported in accidents reported outside city limits, 1,587 of these accidents being reported in 1930 as compared with 1,754 in the first three months of 1929, a decrease of 167.

There were 99 fatal accidents in the state in the first three months of 1930, in which 102 persons were killed, while in the first three months of 1929, 110 accidents took 118 lives. There was no change in the number of fatal accidents within city limits, but one more victim was claimed this year than last, while in the country districts there were 17 fewer fatalities and 11 fewer fatal accidents than last year.

Courts were less inclined to be lenient with persons charged with offenses against the motor vehicle laws during the first three months of this year than last, 565 fewer offenses paying $2,910 more in fines. A total of 2,482 persons were fined by courts this year, paying $60,591, while 3,347 persons paid $57,681 in the first three months of last year.

BEAUREGARD KNOCKS OUT ROSE IN 6TH; KOP AND GUOIN BREAK ARMS

Al Beauregard of Taftville, New England bantamweight champion, fighting one of the best fights of his career, stopped tough Willie Rose of New York in the sixth round of the ten-round feature bout of the Shyml club card at Parish hall last night. Beauregard dealt out such terrific body punishment that the New York lad was unable to stand up under it and wilted from a terrific left to the stomach and it was better than a half hour before he regained his senses.

In the semi-final, Joe Barre of New York, not the cleanest fighter we have seen by any means, won a hairline verdict over Ero Peterson of Worcester through a last-round rally which gave him an advantage of one point, Referee Taylor giving the verdict by a single point.

Johnny Kop, local battler, hit his streak of hard luck again in his bout with Tommy King, New Bedford, in a six rounder and was forced to quit after the third round when he broke a bone in his hand.

Young Lavigne of New London plastered Marty Cortes of Boston for six rounds and coasted through to an easy win.

In the opener, Young Guoin met a more experienced boy in Freddy Slade of New Bedford and was knocked out in the third round. In falling when hit by Slade, Guoin broke his left arm just above the wrist.

Beauregard Deals Out Nasty Lacing

When Al Beauregard dropped Willie Rose in the sixth round just before the bell he accomplished something that 95 other boxers have been trying to do in vain for the past three years. When Rose failed to answer the bell for the seventh round, Beauregard's stock mounted a hundred points, for in Rose Beauregard had whipped one of the best boys of the weight in New York.

The fight itself proved devoid of everything but straight old-fashioned slugging. One round was a repetition of the other, with the boys standing toe to toe, throwing lefts and rights to head and body with everything they had. Beauregard took every round with the exception of the fifth, which was even. When Beauregard coasted along to get his wind, Beauregard concentrated his attack on Rose's mid-section and his terrific left hooks to the stomach wore Rose down so that he wilted from sheer exhaustion. In the third round, Beauregard pummeled Rose unmercifully about the body as he did in the fourth, at the end of which neither boy looked in the best of condition from the terrific pace. Coasting through the fifth round, Beauregard opened with another attack to the stomach which had Rose in distress after a minute of torrid exchanges. With but five seconds of the sixth round left, Beauregard backed Rose to the ropes and let loose a terrific left hook to the stomach. Beauregard's glove seemed to bury itself in Rose's body and the New York boy crumpled in the canvas. Referee Taylor started his count and had gotten as far as the count of five when the bell stopped the count. Rose was dragged to his corner where frantic efforts to revive him were made, but without avail. Rose was completely out and the only sign of life about him was the terrific twitching of his stomach muscles and those of his legs. He was carried bodily from the ring and Doctor Snyder, local physician, worked over him for nearly half an hour before he regained consciousness.

Beauregard weighed 119 1-2 and Rose 120.

Barre Wins in Last Round

Joe Barre of New York took Ero Peterson of Worcester in the last round to win a hairline decision. Barre proved highly unpopular with the crowd through his unsportsmanlike tricks and when his hand was raised there was a terrific booing of the decision. Barre deserved the decision, without a doubt, but the sympathies of everyone in the hall were with Peterson, a gentlemanly and clean-cut a boy as has ever stepped into a local ring. In fact, it was his clean sportsmanship that lost him the bout in the final round. Peterson had a slight edge of a point at the end of the seventh and in the eighth round Barre opened up and drove Peterson to the corner, where in a mix-up, Peterson nearly fouled Barre and with a smile he attempted to touch gloves with Barre to show that it was unintentional when Barre opened with a fierce attack to the head. He piled up enough points in this last flurry to overcome the scant lead of Peterson. Peterson did not show so good when he tried to lead and Barre was just ring-wise enough to get Peterson to lead. Barre scored heavily on the in-fighting, while Peterson did all his counting when Barre was coming in. Barre weighed 134 1-2 and Peterson 137.

Kop Breaks Bone in Hand

Johnny Kop, local boy, proved himself one of the gamest boys that has ever stepped in the ring and although he lost on a technical knockout to Tommy King of Fall River he lost no prestige with the fans. Kop swarmed all over King in the first round, but suddenly slowed down in the second and King took the round by a slight margin. As the second round ended Kop swung his right to the head and the blow landed high on King's forehead. As Kop went to his corner his face was contorted with pain and his arm was helpless at his side. He complained to his seconds that his hand was broken but he went back for the third round. All during the third round he fought off King with his left hand, his right being absolutely useless. The pain became so great and a cut on the eye was bleeding so profusely that Kop had to quit. He gave a game exhibition and all credit is due him. The physician said that he broke was the same that he injured in training several months ago.

Lavigne Wins in a Walk

Young Lavigne, New London sailor, peppered Marty Cortes of Boston with everything but the water buckets and coasted through to an easy win over the Boston lad. Lavigne fought coolly from round to round and had Cortez' head bobbing with right and left jabs, while he himself was unmarked.

Guoin Breaks His Arm

The first casualty of the evening was in the opening bout between Young Guoin of Taftville and Freddy Slade of Fall River. Slade proved to know too much for the courageous but inexperienced Guoin. After a good showing in the first round, Guoin was stopped completely by the hard left-handed punching of Slade in the second round. Slade worked a fast left with a right cross that drew the blood from Guoin's nose early in the bout. At the end of the second round Slade floored Guoin but the kid came back strong. The third round saw Guoin absorbing terrific punishment about the face and when Slade caught Guoin with a right to the jaw the Taftville boy fell to the canvas. It was at this time that his arm was broken, the arm crumpling under him.

Elly Taylor of Hartford was the referee and made a mighty fine job of it, although the fans disapproved of his decision in the semi-final.

PHILS WIN FROM ROBINS IN WEIRD GAME: 38 HITS

PHILADELPHIA, April 23—(AP)—The Phillies and the Brooklyn Robins shattered all of the young baseball season's slugging marks today as Philadelphia gained the second straight victory, 16 to 15, in a weird game that lasted almost three hours.

The two teams, first one leading then the other, got 38 hits for their 31 runs but it took an error to decide the issue. Jake Flowers, Robin second baseman, booted Thompson's grounder with two out in the ninth and Spotts come home from third. The lead had changed hands on three previous occasions.

Brooklyn used six pitchers, three of them in the first inning, while the Phils called on four. Collins got credit for the victory and Clark was charged with the defeat.

Chuck Klein, 1929 National league home run leader, hit his third four bagger of the year in the eighth to put Philadelphia within striking distance after Brooklyn had scored six runs in the seventh. Thompson also contributed a homer to the Phillies scoring.

GRIMM'S SINGLE IN 9TH GIVES CUBS A VICTORY

CHICAGO, April 23—(AP)—Grimm's single scored Hack Wilson from third to give the Cubs a six to five ninth inning victory over the St. Louis Cards today.

Charley Root hurled the route to hang up his first win. This year he was reached for nine hits, while the Cubs got 11 off Herman Bell, Grabowski and Haid, who divided mound duty for the Cards.

COFFMAN ISSUES 10 BASES ON BALLS AS BROWN WIN

ST. LOUIS, April 23—(AP)—Dick Coffman was wild, but the Tigers could do nothing with his delivery when hits meant runs and St. Louis defeated Detroit, 5 to 1, here today. Coffman issued ten bases on balls.

Manush, with a double and a triple and Schulte with a double and two singles led the Browns' attack.

Bill McGeehan calls it "modified murder," but why does he use that word "modified"? From what I saw last night up at Taftville, Bill's characterization of the pastime is rather tame.

The casualties included two broken arms, a cauliflower ear, a cut eye and abdominal abrasions. That sounds more like a train wreck than it does like a boxing match.

From the ringside it looks like the only wise boys in the game were the managers and the promoters. These boys get the shekels but without the busted arms and the tin-ears.

But even at that the fans just grin in unholy glee and cry for the kill. It's a grand sport and what's a broken bone or two in a man's game.

People cry shame at the prize-ring, but the boxers themselves know what the game is and a busted hand, arm or tin-ear are part of the game. Last night ten boys in perfect physical condition battled and it was only a couple of tough breaks that incapacitated two.

Al Beauregard looked the best we have seen him in any bout when he fought a cool fight to beat Willie Rose. There is now talk of matching Beauregard with Corporal Izzy Schwartz for the first open-air show.

After Willie Rose had returned to consciousness and was able to converse coherently he said that no boxer in the world could stand up under the terrific body punishment administered by Beauregard.

Awfully sorry were the fans to see Johnny Kop and Young Guoin go out with broken bones. A tough break for the boys who were coming along so well. The crowd saw Joe Barre, wise New Yorker, uncork as nasty a bag of tricks as was ever seen. Barre is a good little boxer but his ring tactics leave a bad impression on the fans.

It was a corking good show.

PUTNAM HIGH-TRADE GAME POSTPONED BECAUSE OF COLD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 23.—The biting northwest wind sweeping over Adams field this afternoon added to the intensity of the prevailing cold weather enforced athletic officials of the Putnam Trade school and Putnam high to postpone the opening game of the baseball season between the two schools that was to have been played here at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Coach L. F. Noyes of the high school announced that the game will be played Thursday at the same hour.

The high school nine left dazed and bewildered last Wednesday afternoon after absorbing a 14 to 3 trouncing, inflicted by the Pomfret prep nine, will take the field tomorrow a slight favorite to win. Weiss is expected to pitch for the Noyesmen while Connolly and McNally of Jewett City will do the twirling for the tradesmen.

SNOW HALTS GAME WITH PIRATES AHEAD, 1 TO 0

PITTSBURGH, April 23.—(AP)—A snowstorm descending on Forbes field in the middle of the third inning forced the Pirates to postpone their home opening against the Cincinnati Reds today. The game was called after a wait of more than a half hour while a snow blanket covered the outfield. Nearly 20,000 fans were present. The Pirates had a 1 to 0 lead when the game was stopped.

ACADEMY WALLOPS STONINGTON FOR 22-3 WIN IN OPENING LEAGUE GAME

The Academy's long-awaited batting punch was brought forth in earnest Wednesday afternoon at the campus and three Stonington high pitchers could not stop the Wildcats as they pounded out a 22 to 3 victory over Stonington high in their opening league game. The Red and Whitesters collected 19 hits for a total of 23 bases and combined these with 11 Stonington errors to roll up the big score, one of the largest the league has ever known. The game went only eight innings because of the severe cold.

Boots Greene turned in his second scholastic victory with another brilliant pitching exhibition. He of the dizzy benders worked the first six innings, holding the down-staters runless, allowing but five hits and striking out ten. Chuck Lavarge toiled for the last two frames and gave up three hits and all of the Stonington runs.

Capt. Chubby Gibbs and Alec Arico led the hitting attack, the former with five hits in five attempts and Arico with four out of six. Nearly every one of the boys chipped in with a hit or two to make it a grand parade all around.

The Academy scored one in the first, five in the third, two in the fourth, 11 in the sixth and three more in the seventh having no trouble at all in bringing them in, while Stonington was blanked until the last inning, when, with one out, they managed to push over their trio of tallies on two passes, two doubles and a single, mixed in with a squeeze bunt.

The Academy played almost errorless ball behind their pitchers, Gibbs at short being charged with the only error and that a mighty excusable one at that. On this play Chubby came over behind second to take Godomski's hot drive only to throw badly to first. The Wildcat captain, however, more than made up for this with several brilliant fielding plays. They don't come much better than Chubby.

The Academy had a slightly changed lineup for the game. Bud Fontaine, regular catcher, was suspended Tuesday by Coach Brigham for disciplinary reasons while Speed Reardon, regular secondsacker, is out because of scholastic difficulties. Les Crowell was called in from right field to don the mask and turned in a good afternoon's work while Jerry Fitzgerald and Walter Navick filled in acceptably at second. How long the two boys will be out of action is not known.

WILDCAT SCRATCHES

Nice little strikeout record for Boots in his last two games, a total of 22 in 15 innings. There were 12 against Deep River in nine frames and ten against Stonington in six innings.

Mickey Breen was the victim of an unfortunate break in the seventh when his line drive to center easily cleared the fence only to hit a tree and bounce back in again, robbing him of a sure home run. As it was he made a double out of it.

Six of the eight Stonington hits were doubles.

Butsy Weisgraber turned his ankle in scoring in the sixth and it was very painful after the game. He, however, expects to be in shape again within a day or two.

This was the worst defeat in memory that N. F. A. has ever dealt out to Stonington.

Hank Morin and Shackley of Stonington were the umps.

The Academy batting order was shifted around somewhat. Hack Pepin went up to second place from sixth, Breen to clean-up from seventh and Weisgraber in Pepin's place and Berghinzo in Breen's former post.

Now for Chapman Tech.

FAST CARD OF BOUTS SLATED FOR DANIELSON

DANIELSON, April 23.—Another boxing show, and one that promises to be particularly good, is scheduled to be held at the town hall here Tuesday evening of netx week.

Louis Peloquin, matchmaker for the Danielson Boxing club, sponsors of the show, said this afternoon that he figures this card one of the best balanced that has been arranged for Danielson.

The star bout, six rounds at 123 pounds, will bring together Rene Peloquin of Danielson and Julius Lurkey of Worcester, boys that fought a slashing battle here a few weeks ago and who are just about certain to do when they meet again. Peloquin holds the decision over Lurkey in the battle mentioned.

In the semi-final of six rounds Alex Touraine of New Haven will take on the capable Ero Peterson of Worcester. Both have made good records. They are scheduled for 138 pounds.

Bill Champigny of Worcester and Joe Barree of Fall River will hookup for a six-round go at 138 pounds. Both are promising ringsters and have good records.

Vic Darr of Norwich and Benny Novak of New London will have it out for six rounds at 140 pounds. If Novak should happen to beat the hard-hitting Darr the New London boy will get a match with either Touraine or Peterson.

Jimmie Barde of Webster will go in for six rounds at 144 pounds with Edgar Geboury of the same town. These boys, hailing from the same town, have a bit of a grudge against each other. They have been on each other's trail for a year, but never have met.

In the 4-round opener, at 144 pounds, A. Brouillard of Danielson will take on Johnny Ring of Fall River. Both have won their first four professional fights.

BIG FUND TO FIGHT WILD ANIMAL PESTS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Plans for a 10-year war on predatory animals are being backed by the department of agriculture.

Secretary Hyde is lining up all his influence behind a bill to appropriate $13,787,000 for a campaign against coyotes, wolves, mountain lions, bobcats and other pests, by Representative Scott Leavitt of Montana.

Figures from the various bureaus involved indicate to the secretary that stock killing animals cause an annual loss of from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 to the livestock industry.

Their inroads on game animals and game and insectivorous birds, he says, have an important bearing on the conservation of game.

The fund would make available $782,500 yearly for the destruction of stock killing animals, and $596,200 for rodents and other small injurious animals. Funds now available from current appropriations amount to $346,867 for the former and $219,767 for control of the latter.

It is believed, the secretary says, that the fund estimated to be necessary for a 10-year intensive program of control will make it possible to prevent constant reinfestation of cleared areas. It also will enable the department to meet the demand in states where operations now are being undertaken and to extend its work on the public domain and into new areas from which requests are constantly being received.

"The estimated savings effected even from the inadequate work thus far made possible by federal appropriations have been demonstrated to be more than $10 for every $1 spent," the secretary says.

SALTIS QUITS THE 'RACKET' TO BE 'GENTLEMAN FARMER'

CHICAGO — (AP) — Exit: Joe Saltis, wife and children.

A few days before Capone was to return after 10 months in prison Saltis bid good bye to "the racket".

Hereafter, the west-side chieftain will be the landed baron of Saltisville, Wis., where, as he said, he "sunk $100,000 in a little place."

Saltis' last appearance — so he promised the chief of detectives—was the garish funeral of "Dingbat" Oberta, who had been taken for a ride. Oberta had been a Saltis henchman. Joe said he "picked the boy out of the gutter and made a man of him."

The husky Saltis, a few years before a day laborer, speaking guttural English, then a saloon keeper, went into the beer racket on the west side as a Dion O'Banion follower. O'Banion provided the first of the lavish gangster funerals.

A couple of years later "Mitters" Foley was slain, and Saltis was tried, with two others, for the murder. While the trial was in progress "Hymie" Weiss, O'Banion's successor and a gangster pal were killed, another hoodlum and Saltis' lawyer wounded, when machine guns sprayed bullets upon them in front of the O'Banion flower shop. Weiss had a list of the panel called for jury service. Saltis was freed.

Every gang killing in the last five years has called up Saltis' name. A year ago Joe spent a stretch in the county jail for carrying a gun. Then the government played hide and seek with him several months over a tax matter.

It's been a busy life, but that's all over now, with Joe looking forward to a peaceful old age in a sylvan setting.

The Saltisville estate has two nine-hole golf courses, and clubhouse with sleeping quarters for 26 persons. Joe named the township of 62 population. Twenty-six of them work for him.

$1,500,000 PASTURE LOST TO CHICAGO

CHICAGO — (AP) — Chicago has lost its $1,500,000 cow pasture, irksome to the Hyde Park residential district for 37 years.

By the will of John Dunham, who died in 1893, his property could not be sold until all his immediate heirs had died. The 10 acres which he used as a cow pasture remained unimproved through almost four decades. When the last heir died recently the property was sold for an apartment house.

It was valued at $1,500,000.

SHAWKEY EXPLAINS WHY YANKEES NOSE DIVED INTO CELLAR POSITION

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, April 23—(AP)—The historic inability of one rose to proclaim a summer is a soothing philosophy these days to Bob Shawkey, new manager of the New York Yankees. For it is just as self evident that five straight losing ball games at the start do not make a season, though he'll grant you they don't help much, either.

Robert the Gob had a multitude of explanations to offer today for the quick nose dive of the Yankees, rated the outstanding contender to Connie Mack's Athletics, to the cellar of the American league in the first two weeks of play. As the brisk cold froze out the chance to win his first game from the A's Bob had enough time on his hands to figure out that he has a better ball club than the world champion Athletics everywhere but on the pitching hill.

"We're not hitting. That's the trouble but it's the best kind of trouble I could have because if there is anything you can be certain of over a full season's play it's that the Yankees will hit.

"The outfield, with Babe Ruth, Earl Combs, Byrd and Cooke in there, has hit exactly .119 in five games. You know that can't last. Tony Lazzeri, a .350 hitter, has had three safe bingles. Cooke will start hitting when the rest do. The only man on the team hitting his normal stride is Lou Gehrig and Lou had a bad season last year.

"I'm glad we're having our slump now rather than later on. We spent the last two weeks of the training season in sleeper berths and everyone has colds. We'll begin to get the breaks again, speed up with the heat, pick up the hitting, and pass those fellows when their time comes to slump.

"Gehrig, Lazzeri, Koenig and Chapman give the Yanks a better infield than the A's have in Foxx, Bishop, Boley and Dykes. The only place we can't match them is in pitching. I need a real relief hurler badly.

"Balks cost us a game with the Red Sox and we've had a mess of bad breaks. The umpires are calling a lot of balks and I'm in favor of them but they should give out warnings first. They haven't been doing it."

The Athletics had a big day today even though there was no ball game with the Yanks. The veterans took advantage of the mid-week matinees at the theatres and some of the youngsters saw the circus in Madison Square Garden. Glenn Liebhart, crack 19 year old pitcher, Al Mahon, another pitcher and Roger Cramer were handed into the custody of Alex Hart, former prize fighter, who guaranteed to deliver the young ivory safe and sound at the circus and the same at the hotel when the excitement was over.

Liebhart, who was very impressive in a relief role against the Yanks, is the pride of the Athletic squad. When the team was called upon yesterday to provide a speaker for the radio, set up near the dugout, the veterans ducked. But not the new rookie. He constituted himself a committee of one to represent the Athletics and spoke long and mightily in their behalf.

He had a terrible time getting out of the subway in his first trip to New York. His teammates insisted he had to drop a nickle in the turnstiles in order to leave and he had no change.

The meeting of the local W. C. T. U., was held Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. E. V. Whiting of East Main street, the president, Mrs. W. H. Lamb, presiding. Prayer was offered by Mrs. C. E. Newbury. The county president, Miss Nellie J. Starr of Uncasville, gave an interesting talk on the results of Prohibition, contrasting the days when saloons flourished with the present time, while stressing the need for work on the part of all W. C. T. U. members still looking hopefuly to the future. Miss Starr said, in part, "The results of prohibition even imperfectly enforced, have been marked. Saloons have disappeared, there is less drunkenness, less vice, more wages, less poverty, happier homes, more homes, better children, better health and a happier country. Most of the two billion dollars spent for liquor is now being diverted to home owning, home furnishings, automobiles and savings. It is not material welfare that follows prohibition in the first decade, there are moral and spiritual values. Prohibition is a Childs' Welfare measure. Cases of cruelty are disappearing, neglect of children measured by court and charity cases is cut in half. Prohibition has increased health and the general death rate has been lowered. The enormous expansion in education is well known. We work better, produce more, get more out of our work, churches are gaining, in membership and in spirit. People in the country are happier, healthier and wealthier than any other people on the earth." The meeting closed with the W. C. T. U. benediction. Tea was served.

JEWETT CITY

ONE STATE AUTHORITY GIVEN FISHING LESSON

It was like carrying coals to Newcastle when a man from the state department came down here Saturday to show "Doc" Wallace where to go to catch a "mess" of trout. The visitor had been over the brooks to some extent with a sounding lead and knew most of the deeps and shallows. All this with a view to possible leasings and future stocking. The man had in his possession a sort of topographical sketch of several local brooks which contained all the information, except the all-important facts relative to where the trout actually hung out. He knew where to go; so he took the Doc along to show him about it, telling meanwhile of the great strings he had landed away up in the Restigouche preserves, Canada. The pair fished all day, good, honest, hard work. At an hour before sundown when between the pair they had 7 small ones that had strayed away from the nest, the fisheries man allowed as how he hated to go back with nothing to show for a day on Griswold's brooks, and in a territory that he had officially checked and double checked.

"Come!" said he to the Doc, "let us reason together."

It appears that they did so. The chap doffed his high hat, both as to tile and manner. The record makes no mention of coin being passed, and doubtless there was no such transaction for the Doc's middle name is good nature. However, that may be, this correspondent saw the local woodsman's share of the next 90 minutes' catch. Six noble trout, not one under 14 ounces.

Mrs. Harry Remick has been seriously ill at her home for several weeks.

Alvin Douglass, juryman from Griswold, will plant this spring a brand of potatoes that have been grown on his place for fifty years, according to records kept on the farm. A half century ago the late Elbridge Geer was down to the "Landing" when a boat-load of potatoes from Long Island came in to the Norwich docks. These seedlings had been shipped direct from Scotland. Mr. Geer boarded the smack to look around, and upon leaving the wharf he found that somehow or other, several of these foreign spuds had gotten into his coat pocket. Alvin Douglass' father received a sample and planted 4 hills. Last fall, after 50 years' planting in the same soil, the harvest was over 40 bushels. The potatoes are red in color, fair and smooth and an excellent table variety.

CHILD ON BIG TRESTLE SAVED BY FIREMAN'S SIGNAL

What frightened onlookers thought would surely be a fatal accident was escaped by a hair's margin at the railroad bridge where the construction work is being carried on for the underpass of the railroad's right of way. Just as a north-bound freight came over the big bridge about 1,000 feet below, two kids, one larger than the other, started to cross the reinforcement trestle at the upper bridge. The engine driver spotted the children, jammed on his air, and sounded his whistle. The boys heard the warning and likely being frightened, turned and started to retrace their steps. The big engine bore down, and when only a few feet away, the larger of the two boys let go the smaller one's hand and made the end. Seeing that the heavy train could not be stopped, the horrified people in the street, saw the fireman appear at the side of the foot-board and were waiting to witness a daring attempt at a head end "Jim Bloodsoe" rescue from the pilot. Sensing at once that there was not sufficient time for him to get out over the boiler and down to the breast-beam, he swung down on the side step, making frantic motions to the kid, who now stood still, to drop down. With the big machine only a few feet away the boy suddenly appeared to understand the fireman's signal. He dropped flat to the end of the ties and hung on to the 8-inch guard rail. The engine, tank and two cars passed over the child's head. The train stopped, the rescuer crept along the end of the ties, hanging on to the trucks and iron work of the cars and brought the lad to safety, hugged tightly to his oily jacket. He is of the sort that wouldn't like to have his name appear but they do their stuff when emergencies come.

LEGION AND AUXILIARY PREPARE FOR MEMORIAL DAY

At the meeting of the Legion Post Tuesday evening at which Commander W. H. Payne presided, John Blake reported that Ashland band had been secured for Memorial Day. It was voted to discontinue the public service which it has been customary to hold in Finn Opera house the Sunday previous to Memorial Day. The custom began with Grand Army men, and as there are so few left, and in this town none who can attend, and the public attendance has decreased in a great measure, it is thought that two observances of the day are not advisable. Pastors are to be asked to speak on the subject in each church. Joseph Bellefleur, the Fifth district commander of Norwich; Thomas Sears, a state officer of the 40 and 8, and Cmdr. McMahon of Robt. Fletcher post of Norwich were present and gave much information of interest to the work of the posts. Dr. G. H. Jennings reported that Rev. J. J. McCabe will be the speaker at David Hale Fanning park on Memorial Day.

The auxiliary held a meeting Monday evening, Mrs. E. M. Gray presiding, and appointed the committee from the four churches who will have charge of the dinner to be served at the Baptist church to all veterans, the band and special guests. The committee from the Methodist church is Mrs. A. C. Burdick, Mrs. J. W. Carter, Mrs. Ella Geer; Baptist church—Miss Alice Brown, Mrs. Lewis Hewlitt, Mrs. Samuel Cathcart, Miss Susie Morgan; St. Mary's church—Mrs. M. E. Shea, Mrs. E. J. Jodoin, Mrs. Henry Vegiard, Mrs. Mary Godek; Congregational church — Mrs. Abraham Zegeer, Mrs. F. I. Ray, Miss M. A. Burdick, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox. Two new members names were presented and accepted. Ten dollars was voted to the State Day fund.

During October a woman in Montana wrote — "My first bottle of Kruschen Salts lasted almost 4 weeks and during that time I lost 19 pounds of fat—Kruschen is all you claim for it—I feel better than I have for years."

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses.

Every morning take one half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast.

Be sure and do this every morning for "It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat."—Don't miss a morning. The Kruschen habit means that every particle of poisonous waste matter and harmful acids and gases are expelled from the system.

At the same time the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are toned up and the pure, fresh blood containing Nature's six life-giving salts is carried to every organ, gland, nerve and fibre of the body and this is followed by "That Kruschen feeling" of energetic health and activity that is reflected in bright eyes clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

If you want to lose fat with speed get an 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts from Lee & Osgood or any live druggist anywhere in America with the distinct understanding that you must be satisfied with results or money back.

You can ideally modify the harsh "edge" of French dressing if you add

A dash of Sugar

THERE is no reason for French dressing making you wince when you eat it on your favorite salads. A dash of sugar added to the salt, pepper and vinegar or lemon juice, blends these ingredients with the oil into a dressing that is simply delicious.

Try this dressing, flavored with sugar, on lettuce, cabbage, asparagus and tomato salads and see how much more you will enjoy these important foods. This dressing is also delicious on fruit salads or combinations of fish and vegetables.

In cooking vegetables, a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt improves their flavor in a most surprising manner. For example, try this seasoning on carrots, string beans, peas, spinach and tomatoes and you will take new pleasure in eating these foods which have vitamins, mineral salts and roughage. The Sugar Institute.

"Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with Sugar"

MANDELL'S PASSES TEN YEAR MARK IN NORWICH

In 1919 Simon Mandell opened up an exclusive blouse store under the name "The New Waist Shop." At that time the store consisted of only ten feet of space in the building of the old Norwich circulating library of which James Myers was librarian at 104 Main street. Mandell's is still located in the same building. Six years later, in 1925, Mr. Mandell took over the second floor and also additional space on the main floor for a high grade stock of ladies' coats, dresses, hosiery and millinery. The following year he bought out the old circulating library and occupied both the main and second floor. During this year the shop was changed to "Mandell's" because the old name of the store was no longer correctly used, as blouses had gradually been going out of style. In 1927, Mr. Mandell devoted the second floor to an inexpensive dress shop where he started to carry, and still does, dresses for every occasion. During the next few years, business continued so successfully that in 1930 he altered the entire store. To be specific, Mr. Mandell has put in a new modern front and modernistic fixtures. The interior of the windows is done in art-craft and craft-tex. The color scheme in the store is green and gold with the upper part being done in old-rose artcraft. People have commented on the well-chosen colors. In fact, Mandell's is said to be one of the most attractive stores in eastern Connecticut.

As Mandell's carries one of the best stocks of coats, suits and dresses in Norwich the better dressed woman and miss in town and surrounding places patronizes the store. Since all garments are of high grade quality, they will give as they have given in the past the very best service expected. Mandell's goods are not only created in the newest styles, but are varied for any occasion and are suitable for each and everyone of you. Mr. Mandell prides himself on the fact that he allows no garment to leave the store unless it is fitted perfectly to suit the customer. In fact, his goods are exclusive, but not expensive.

REID & HUGHES CO. PASS HALF CENTURY MARK HERE

Many interesting incidents could be told by the Schoolmaster and the Doctor in their broadcasting series on the growth and development of the Reid & Hughes Co., familiarly known as the Boston store— in continuous business in Norwich and enjoying the confidence of the shopping public better than half a century—which is a long time for any firm to pass through the vicissitudes of the mercantile trade.

The Reid & Hughes Co. was founded in Norwich in August of 1879 — pretty close now to 51 years— and still going strong. The late George F. Hughes of revered memory came here from Worcester, Mass., and joined the James Simpson Co., thus becoming associated with the late Adam Reid, who came here from Boston and was also with the Simpson company. James Simpson decided there was a bigger field in New York, so he decided to locate there and established the well-known firm of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson, which did a successful business in the metropolis for many years.

When the Simpson business here was sold to Mr. Reid and Mr. Hughes, who had been employed with the firm, the people of Norwich came to know and appreciate the high standard of business ethics and quality merchandise that put the Reid & Hughes Co., or the Boston store, as it was called, in an outstanding position as a shopping institution.

At that time the store occupied the main floor, 100 feet deep and the basement. The floors above were occupied by the Arcanum club, offices of the Totoket mills, a dentist and a photographer.

At first the basement was used for storage purposes, packing cases, waste paper, etc., but the business increased so rapidly through their efforts that shortly half of the space was renovated and devoted to upholstery and floor coverings. The business continued to grow and as tenant changes allowed, the upper floors of the building were taken over and new departments were added. In the early part of the present century, the store had grown to four floors and the basement of the Williams building, its annex, and the first floor and basement of the Shannon building at Main and Shetucket streets.

It is interesting here to note that the Main street building is still owned by the descendants of Wareham Williams who carried on a dry goods store at the same location and it is pleasing to make mention here of the amicable relations that have always existed between the company and the landlords, from those then residing at 241 Broadway, to the present ones at the same homestead.

Some of the real old residents will recall the time in 1886 when the Shetucket river went on a rampage. The Reid & Hughes basement was completely filled with water up to the first floor. This occurred on a Saturday night, and while Mr. Hughes had a few of the clerks working a rubber boot brigade, the water rose so rapidly that very little of the reserve stock of merchandise was salvaged. The entire stock of merchandise was cleared out at a very great sacrifice to move it quickly and this sale and the fire sale in 1909 drew the greatest crowds in the history of the store.

A disastrous fire occurred in February, 1909. It started in the Shannon building, reducing that building at the corner to ashes. Although part of the Williams annex was burned, the old store was intact and the fire sale was carried on in that building. The business was conducted entirely in the Williams building until the new Shannon building was rebuilt on larger and better lines.

Reid & Hughes Co. is a member of the American Retailers, Inc., in New York, associated with some of the very largest stores in important cities like Boston, Washington and Chicago. This store is also connected with R. J. Cronin, Inc., New York, specializing in merchandising ready-to-wear and millinery here and for a large number of successful stores, principally in New England. William H. Cruickshank has been manager of the store for a number of years.

GILBERT'S FURNITURE CO. NEARING 70 YEAR MARK

In 1832, the founder of the Gilbert Furniture Co., Nathan S. Gilbert, came to Norwich to enter the cabinet-making trade. He was associated with skilled workmen, and the product of the factory was sold to dealers in Charleston, Mobile and New Orleans. In the late fifties, Mr. Gilbert acquired the business in his own name, and employed as many as thirty men in the manufacture of high grade cabinet work. Some of our older citizens recall the piles of walnut and mahogany in the shop yard where the stock was kept a year to dry before using.

In conection with the cabinet-making business, a large retail store was opened on Main street for the sale of furniture and carpets under the firm name of Gilbert and Lane. This was at the time when cord bedsteads, and slats with springs attached, were displaced by woven wire springs and box springs, or upholstered spring beds as they were called. After the death of Mr. Lane, Mr. Gilbert admitted his sons as partners in the business which was continued there for more than half a century under the name of N. S. Gilbert & Sons.

The present firm of the Gilbert Furniture Co., successors to the above, recently purchased a fine brick block at 69 Broadway. Here is conducted a modern home furnishings store. Large stocks of dependable furniture, wall papers and floor coverings are offered the public, and competent workman are in the upholstering, finishing and repairing departments, where many pieces of antique furniture receive careful attention. The members of the firm, S. Alpheus Gilbert and Walter E. Gilbert, are active in the business and are always pleased to give personal attention to their patrons. The store slogan "Good furniture at reasonable prices" gives in a few words one of the principal reasons for the long continued success of the Gilbert Furniture Co.

PEACE FOUNDATION FUND TO HONOR SENATOR BORAH

MOSCOW, Idaho—(P)—Inauguration of the first foundation to outlaw war has been delayed because Senator William E. Borah is too busy to attend the ceremonies.

While the senator has been conducting a little tariff war of his own, the $50,000 peace foundation fund presented to the University of Idaho nearly a year ago by Salmon O. Levinson, Chicago peace advocate, in honor of the republican independent has been idly drawing interest in a rust company.

President F. J. Kelly of the university hopes to inaugurate the "William E. Borah Outlawry of War Foundation" next fall, however, and plans to invite several prominent speakers from the ranks of those interested in peace, inaddition to the senator.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

A double feature bill of unusually fine qualities is being presented today and tomorrow at the Palace theatre. This bill includes "Rich People" with Constance Bennett and Robert Ames and "Officer O'Brien" starring William Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian.

"Rich People" is a tale of high society life and tells the story of the beautiful daughter of a wealthy man. Conny becomes engaged to a man in her own circle whom she admires and likes, but does not love. One day she meets Jeff McLean, an insurance salesman, and she invites him to visit her. He is surprised to find out that she is a society girl and decides to forget her and go his own way. But she is headstrong and woos him in spite of his own misgivings. At last the day of her wedding approaches and as she is dressed in her bridal garb she rebels against her marriage, her friends and her home, and flees. To what? The answer is cleverly told in this magnificent film and should be a surprise to every theatre-goer.

A more sordid and perhaps a less fortunate side of life is portrayed in "Officer O'Brien," a gripping story of characters in the underworld. O'Brien is an ambitious police officer who is gaining an important position as a guardian of the law. His part in the arrest of an accused murderer, a leader of an outlaw gang, is rewarded by promotion to the rank of lieutenant.

When Patello is brought to trial trial there is only one witness to testify against him. This witness is Johnny Dale, brother of Ruth Dale, whom O'Brien loves. Dale takes the stand and as he is about to name the murderer he is shot through the back.

O'Brien is convinced that this is the work of Patello's gang and he resolves to get them at any cost. But the cost is great, because O'Brien discovers that his own father is a crook. He is given the choice of exposing his father and pursuing Patello or of shielding his father and releasing Patello. What he does brings the picture to an exciting and dramatic climax.

Broadway Theatre

The "old west" lives again in the Broadway's present showing of Zane Grey's immortal classic, "The Light of Western Stars," with all the characters we know so well from the pages of fiction. But these characters are real—there are the happy-go-lucky cowpunchers, working like blazes by day and playing just as hard in their time off—the rascally sheriff, dominated by the town bully, who also runs a crooked faro game and dispenses bad whiskey—the ubiquitous "bad hombres" typical of every frontier town, with a ready gun to back their plays—the eastern girl, strange and forlorn in an alien land—the historical "tin-peddler" who made ranch womens' lives brighter with his sharp bargaining—and, behind it all, a romance as tender as any that might blossom in an eastern drawing room—and much more sincere. Built along the lines of the famous "Virginian," but surpassing even that masterpiece in its fast action and stirring story, "The Light of the Western Stars," with its sterling cast, including Richard Arlen, Fred Kohler, Harry Green, Regis Toomey and Mary Brian, moves to a fast and exciting climax. The surrounding program includes Lucille and Jimmy Gleason in a riotous comedy, "Don't Believe It," Laurel and Hardy in their latest howl, "Below Zero," and the current Fox movietone news. Tomorrow's matinee program has been so arranged that, following the regular program, an extra showing of "The Light of Western Stars" will be provided for the school children.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Jacques Feyder, noted French director, is the inventor of a novel camera technique in the treatment of opening scenes in "The Kiss," the new Greta Garbo feature which will open today at the Breed theatre as a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer offering with musical and sound synchronization.

To lend effectiveness to these scenes, Feyder arranged to screen them continuously in a single sequence, the lens taking in the happenings as though they were seen through a human eye, a complete kaleidoscopic effect in sweeping glimpses.

Miss Garbo is fascinating in the tragic role of Irene Guarry, and is little less than magnificent in a powerful scene in which jealousy brings disaster to the French society family.

Conrad Nagel plays opposite Miss Garbo in the role of attorney and gives his usual finished performance. Anders Randolf as the suspicious husband gives an accurate portrayal of an unsympathetic role. The fact that you are glad to see him killed is a tribute to his acting. Lew Ayres, a new face to the screen, attracts considerable attention as Miss Garbo's lover, a role played skillfully.

Phillips' Store in Willimantic

Phillips' Radio store in the Capitol building at Willimantic is essentially the "Home of Atwater-Kent Screen Grid Radios," but also features other high grade home equipment that the housewife will do well to investigate.

Mr. H. I. Phillips is the only authorized dealer in Willimantic and trading territory for the Atwater-Kent Electric and Battery Screen Grid Sets. These sets are obtainable in the same attractive cabinets for either electric or battery equipment and give the same fine tone quality and range which are distinctive marks of Atwater-Kent superiority. Cabinets are in table models, including the charming Kett tables, high and low boy models. Phillips' store also carries the widely known and popular Edison Light-O-Matic radio in various cabinet styles.

Occupying an important part in the sales of the Phillips store is the Electrolux Gas Refrigerator, which has revolutionized refrigeration throughout the country. The Electrolux can be operated with city gas or the famous Pyrofax gas which is derived from natural gas, is odorless, non-poisonous, non-explosive and many times hotter than ordinary gas. This gas, which is also distributed by Mr. Phillips, is tanked and delivered to the customer under a most complete and satisfactory system of constant service. It has been in use by local people for over eight years and has the hearty endorsement of all users. Pyrofax is approved by insurance underwriters. Mr. Phillips is also the only local authorized dealer for Glenwood Pyrofax range, a product of the oldest stove manufacturing company in New England, and widely conceded one of the greatest strides in home-cooking appliances today. The operation of the Glenwood Pyrofax range or the Electrolux Gas Refrigerator with Pyrofax gas is not any more expensive than the use of the regular commercial gas and brings to the suburb what the urban housewife has enjoyed more or less selfishly for many years.

An invitation is extended to the people of eastern Connecticut to call at the Phillips store in the Capitol building on Main street, Willimantic, and investigate the tremendous possibilities of furthering home comfort and economy. The store is open evenings until 8 o'clock.

NEW TRAIN SCHEDULE TO AFFECT MAIL SERVICE

Beginning Sunday, April 27th, at 2:01 eastern standard time or 3:01 daylight saving time, a new timetable, No. 111, on the New Haven railroad, will become operative as follows:

West-bound trains for New Haven and New York—(a. m.) 8:20, accommodation, except Sunday; *10:28, the Mayflower express, daily; 11:57, the Baystate express, daily; (p. m.) 12:24, the Colonial express, daily; 1:43, the New Yorker express, daily; 2:22, accommodation, Saturday only; 3:01, the Shore Liner express, daily; 4.39, the Puritan express, daily; 5:45, accommodation, except Saturday and Sunday; 6:09, accommodation, except Sunday; 6:58, accommodation, Sunday only; 7:12, the Hub express, Sunday only; 8:03, express, daily; 11:07, Federal express, daily; (a. m.) 12:53, Quaker express, daily.

East-bound trains for Providence and Boston—(a. m.) 3:15, night express, daily; 6:06, Federal express, daily; 6:33, accommodation, except Sunday; 6:53, New England express, daily; 7:25, accommodation, except Sunday; 8:18, accommodation, Sunday only; 9:38, local express, except Sunday; 11:53, the Mayower express, daily; (p. m.) 1:28, the Baystate express, daily; 3:05, the New Yorker express, daily; 3:29, local express, except Sunday; 3:58, accommodation, Saturday only; 4:28, express, Saturday only; 4:38, the Shore Liner express, daily; 5:57, Colonial express, daily; 6:10, the Puritan express, daily; 7:55, the Bostonian express, daily; 9:29, the Gilt Edge express, daily.

By the new arrangement of train time, mail matter, west-bound after the midnight closing of the Westerly postoffice, cannot be despatched until the following afternoon, with the exception of mail for New London. There are rumors that the mail service may be even more unsatisfactory by reason of the fact that the mail car may be taken off the Quaker express, 12:53 a. m., and placed on the Federal express at 11:07 p. m., which would mean that the mail would close an hour and a half earlier. Summer patrons of the railroad, especially the home-returning shore resort cottagers, west-bound, will find it necessary to take a 6 o'clock accommodation train to New London, to get express train service at that hour.

BAR ASSOCIATION WOULD ADVISE ABOUT JUDGES

The annual meeting and dinner of the State Bar association will be held at New Haven, Friday, April 25, it is announced, and among the important matters scheduled for discussion is a plan for the formation of a committee of lawyers to advise the governor on the qualifications of candidates for judgships.

If this plan is carried through successfully it will bean an innovation in the selection of judges although in the past the governor has had the advice of members of the bar in making nominations for the legislature to confirm. The bar as a whole has never acted in such an advisory capacity, however.

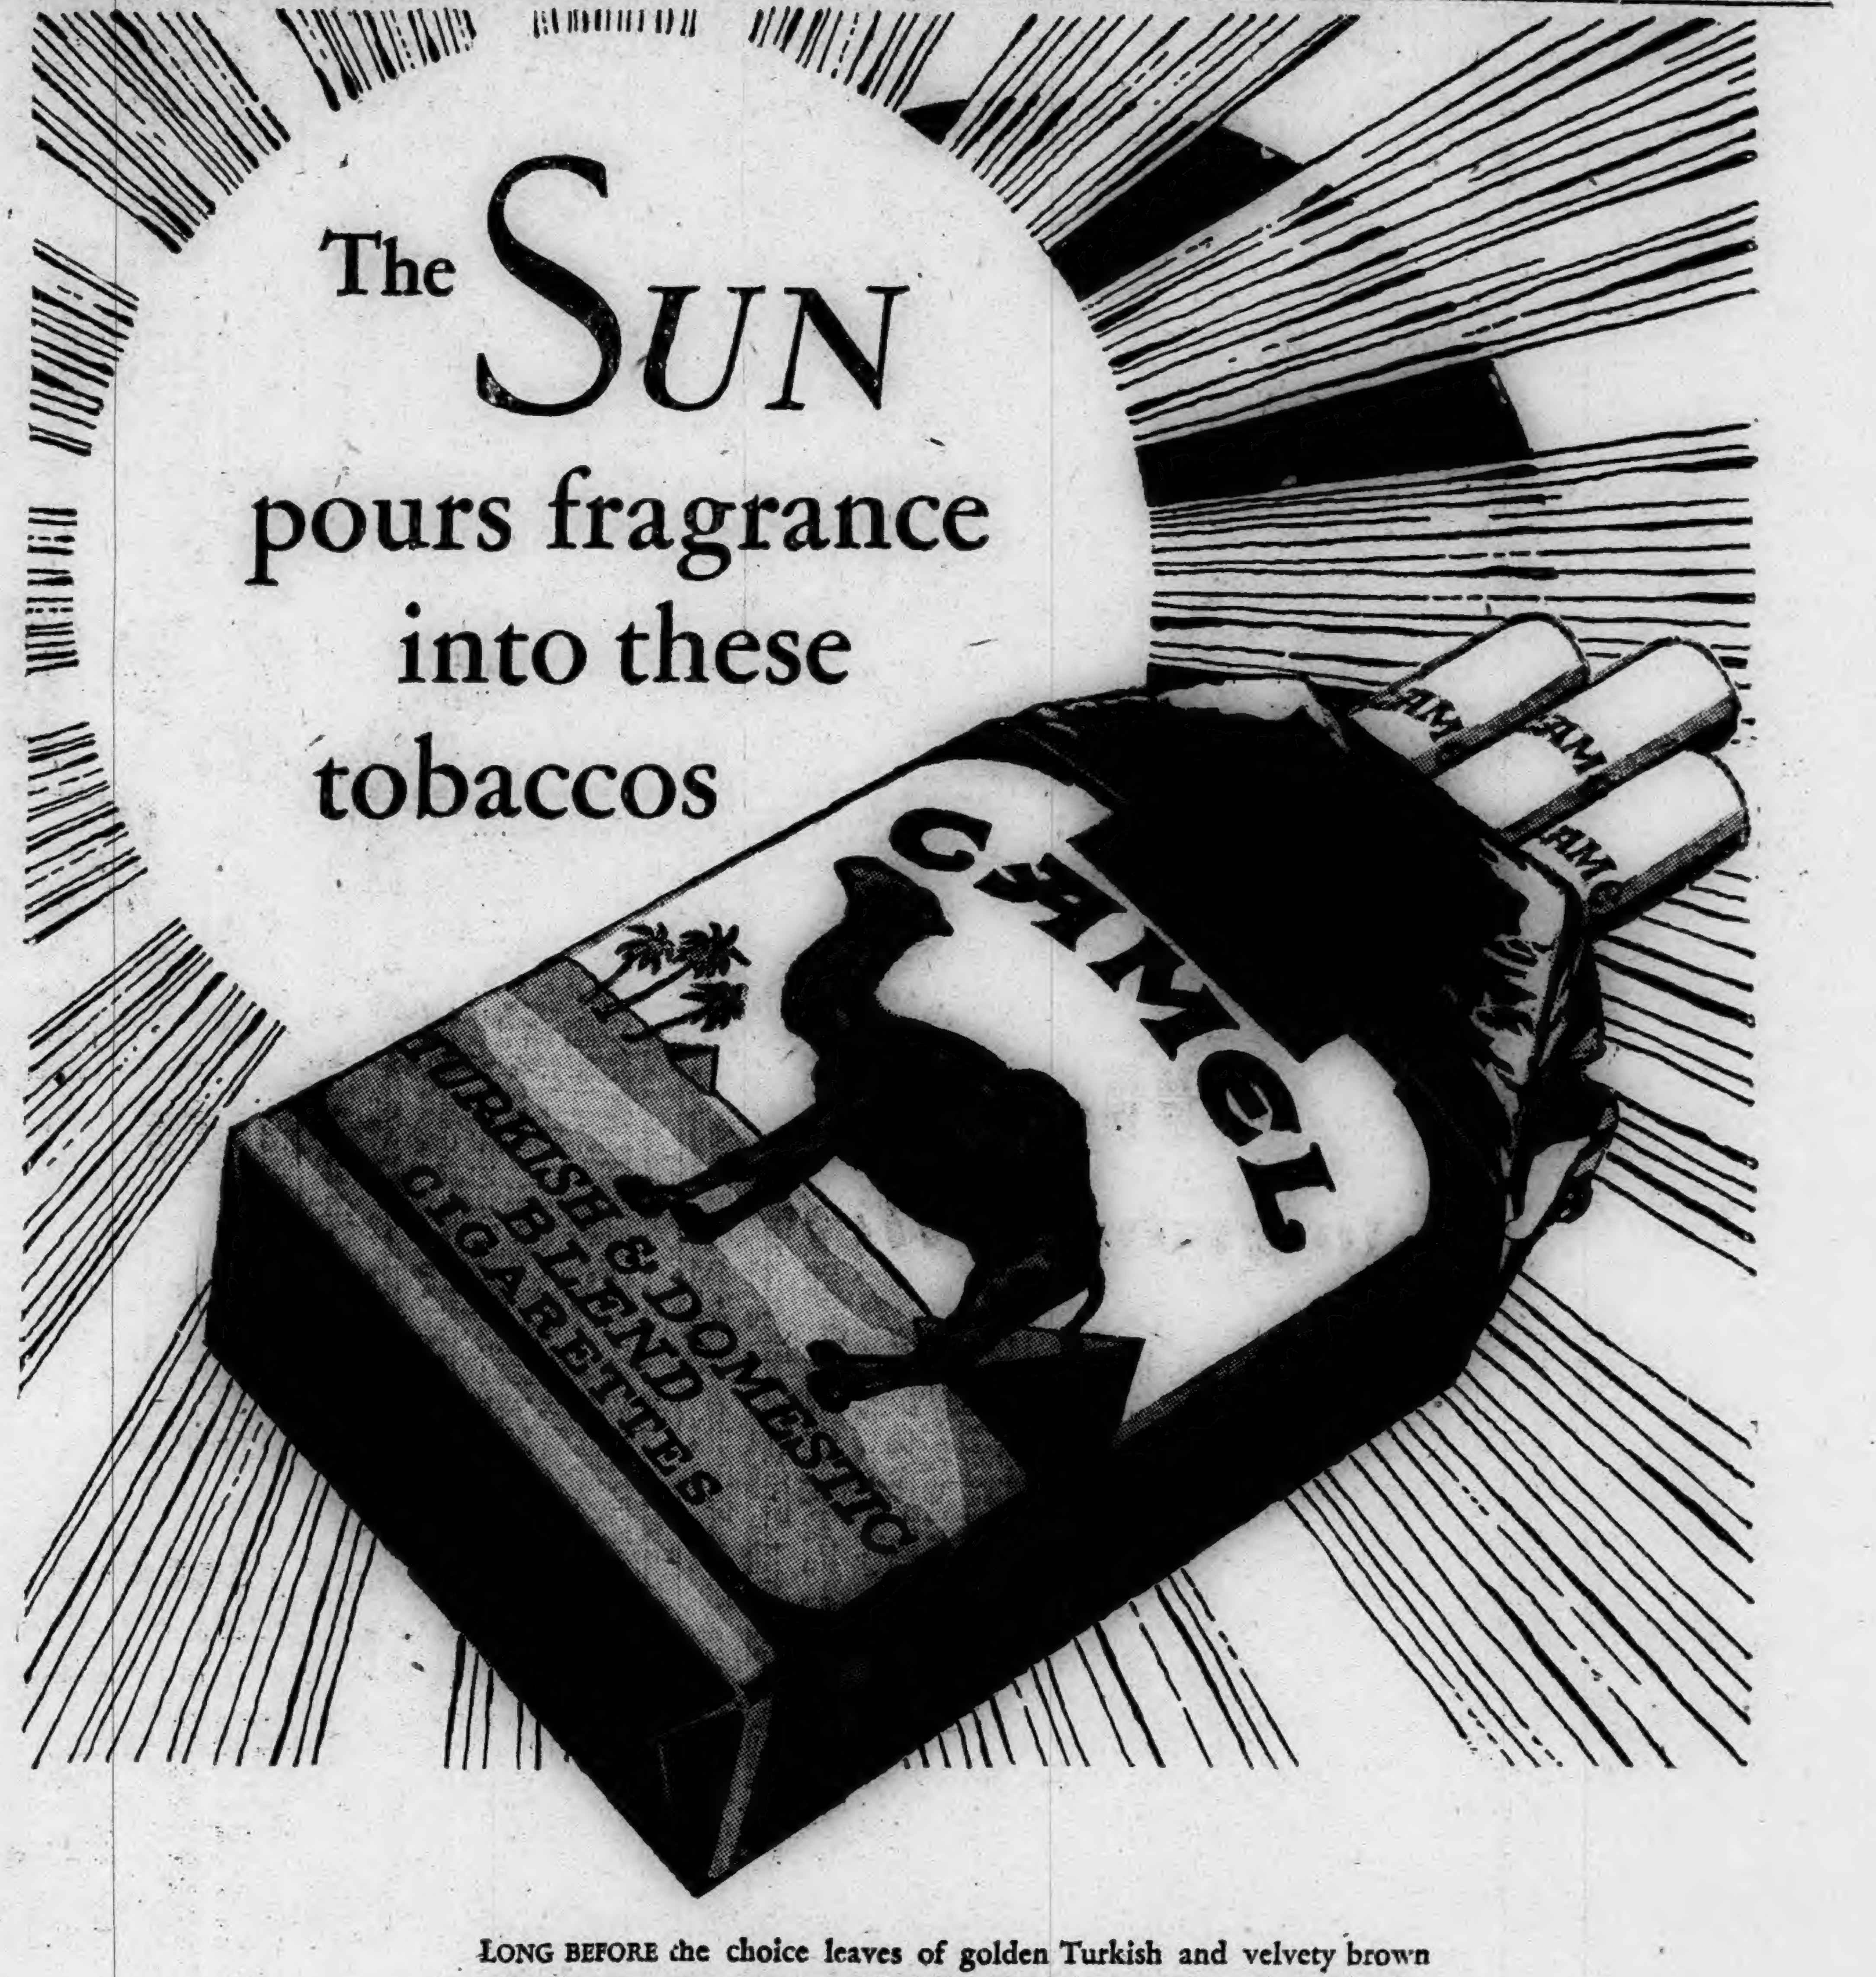
The resolution on the matter, which is expected to be adopted, is as follows: "Within one month after the adjournment of the meeting at which this resolution is adopted and annually thereafter the president of the association shall appoint a committee of five to be known as the 'committee on nominations for judges. The president shall also serve as an ex-officio member of such committee. It shall be the duty of such committee to inform itself concerning the availability of suitable lawyers for appointment to judgeships in the state courts and to endeavor to secure the support of the bar for the appointment of lawyers of high character and ability, learned and experienced in the law and chosen with due regard to fair representation on the bench of the different counties of the state. So far as practicable said committee shall report to the members of the bar the names of candidates recommended by them, giving also such brief history of the eperience and qualifications of such candidates as shall inform the members of the bar as well as the governor of the state of the reasons of the committee for their recommendations.

This resolution has been approved by the executive committee of the bar, comprising William B. Smith, Charles D. Lockwood, Thomas M. Steele, Frederick H. Wiggin, David S. Day, Philip Z. Haney and Arthur M. Brown, president of the association.

Mr. Brown, who is state attorney of New London county, will deliver the annual address at the meeting which will be held at the supreme court of errors at 2 p. m. Thomas Hewes of Hartford will talk on Justice and the Poor. There will be a report of a special committee on the world court.

At 7 p. m. the dinner will be held at the Hotel Taft and will be addressed by Homer S. Cummings of Stamford and Colonel Norris G. Osborn of New Haven.

The SUN pours fragrance into these tobaccos



LONG BEFORE the choice leaves of golden Turkish and velvety brown Domestic tobacco are selected for Camel Cigarettes, nature's own alchemy has worked a miracle in them that no effort of man can hope to duplicate.

Every tiny leaf-cell is irradiated—stored full of goodness by the clean, pure vigor of the sun!

Our share in the making of Camels is to see that all of the fragrance, mildness, mellowness, aroma—in a word all of the natural goodness of these sun-ripened tobaccos is preserved and developed—then to combine them into the smooth, delightful harmony of the famous Camel blend, and manufacture them into cigarettes by the most modern methods known to the industry.

STOCK PRICES WERE IRREGULAR AND SALES EXCEEDED 5,500,000 SHARES

NEW YORK, April 23—(P)—Strenuous efforts to revive the bull movement in stocks in the face of large-scale nervous selling from traders dissatisfied with current business reports sent prices churning about confusedly in today's market and piled up total sales of more than 5,500,000 shares, the largest in nearly two weeks.

Some of the oils, amusements, utilities and specialties made sharp gains, but steels and several leading industrials were inclined to sag, and at the close gains and losses about balanced the index of 90 leading shares showing a gain for the day of only 1-5 of one point. The market displayed marked buoyancy in the early afternoon, but heavy selling appeared in the last half hour, and gains achieved earlier shrank rapidly.

Speculative sentiment remained highly confused. Pool operators were encouraged by the stemming yesterday of the stream of liquidation which developed sizeable proportions on Monday, and some commission houses advised their customers that the market's technical position had been greatly improved. Others, however, continued to urge lightening of accounts on bulges, and the maintaining of liquid position until business recovery becomes more pronounced.

There was little in the day's news to influence the market either way, although oils were stimulated by report of the ending of a price cutting war between Dutch-Shell and Standard interests in the Near East, higher gasoline prices on the Pacific coast, and estimates showing that higher production in California last week was offset by curtailment elsewhere. The weekly steel trade reviews indicated that conditions are fairly satisfactory.

Although buying continues of a hand to mouth character, increasing requirements of automobile manufacturers tends to offset smaller buying by railroads. Arthur Reynolds, chairman of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust Co., stated that he did not look for marked business revival until after July 1.

Standard Oil of N. J. surged up 5 points to 83 7-8, exceeding its 1929 record level by nearly a point. It closed at 82 1-8. Radio Keith shot up nearly 6 points to 48 3-4, within 1-8 of its record for all time reached before the autumn crash. American Water Works, A. M. Byers, J. I. Case, Diamond Match, General Foods, and Ingersoll Rand were rushed up 4 to 11 points to new 1930 highs, although much of these advances was lost before the close.

Anaconda and Kennecott lost about 3 and 2 points, reaching new lows for the year, and National Cash Register and Eureka Vacuum touched new low levels for 1930. Such pivotal shares as American Can, General Electric, International Harvester, and Johns-Manville lost about 2 points. Electric Power and Light, recently a buoyant feature, tumbled 3 points, and Vanadium, another bull favorite of late, fell back 8 points. Republic, Youngstown and Bethlehem Steels lost a point or two, and U. S. Steel closed barely steady.

Credit conditions were stationary. Call loans officially ranged from 4 to 3 1-2 per cent, but were available in the outside market at 3. Foreign exchanges were firm, sterling cables rising 3-16 to $4.86 5-16, as expectations of a lower Bank of England rate this week vanished with a rise in French franc exchange on London close to the point at which shipments of gold from London to Paris would be profitable.

Commodities were firm. Wheat gained 1 1-8 to 1 5-8 cents a bushel on less favorable weather and crop reports, and better export sales. Corn mounted nearly as much. Cotton rallied $1.30 to $2.25 a bale.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 23.—(P)—Price movements were somewhat confused in today's curb market, but the main tendency continued upward with the oils prominent in the advance. The new money desk opened today with the rate fixed at 4 1-2 per cent., or 1-2 of 1 per cent. above the renewal rate on the New York stock exchange. This new feature is expected to prove popular with curb members, and to stimulate marginal trading on high grade curb securities.

The resumption of buying in the oil shares was influenced by reports of a settlement of the California price cutting war. Gulf ran up 4 1-2 points to a new high at 163 but dropped to 160 on realizing. Humble closed 3 points higher at 118 and Lion Oil, Vacuum and Standard Oils of Indiana and Kentucky advanced a point or more.

Several new points of strength developed in the public utility group. Commonwealth Edison soared more than 25 points to a new high record at 330 on odd lot transactions, and retained all but a few points of its gain. Tampa Electric recorded an extreme gain of nearly 10 points, and closed near the top. Niagara Hudson touched a new high at 24 and Cities Service attained a new peak at 48 1-2, the turnover in both issues being large. American Light & Traction and North American Light & Power also reached new high ground. Electric Bond & Share showed a small fractional gain at 116 after having sold above 116, but Electric Power & Light optional warrants closed 2 1-8 points lower at 74 7-8 after having crossed 78 to a new 1930 peak.

Pool operations were again apparent in a number of specialties. Among the many issues to reach new high ground were Fox Theatres, Blaw Knox, Agfa Ansco, American Hard Rubber, Cooper Bessemer, Doehler Die Casting, General Alloys, Mergenthaler Linotype, and Pitney Bowes.

Newmont Mining broke 4 points in sympathy with the renewed weakness of the copper stocks. Dubilier Radio, Royal Typewriter, Federated Metals and a sprinkling of other specialties dropped a point or two.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 23—(AP)—Something akin to buoyancy returned to the wheat market today after a fortnight of declines which had pulled prices down 14c a bushel. Sudden huge broadening out of export business in wheat from North America was largely responsible for the right-about-face action of market, and so too was the fact that federal farm board allies were taking ownership of immense quantities of cash wheat in exchange for May delivery contracts. Furthermroe, drought complaints were again at hand from the southwest, with a short crop predicted for parts of Kansas and Oklahoma unless rains come soon.

Closing quotations on wheat were firm at nearly the day's top level, 1c-2 3-8c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish.

Corn closed 3-4-1 1-8c up, oats 3-8-3-4c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 10c.

Estimates were current that European purchases of wheat to be shipped from Canada and the United States had reached an aggregate of 3,500,000 bushels or more in the last 48 hours. The total was said to include good-sized quantities of No. 2 domestic hard winter wheat to go by way of the Gulf of Mexico, and significance was also attached to the fact that Pacific coast bids were likewise apparently on a working basis. Meanwhile, special notice was being taken of the official weekly crop report from Washington saying that despite rains the drought southwest is still largely unrelieved, with wheat deteriorating over central and southwestern Kansas in particular as well as central and western Oklahoma.

Adding to the force of today's upturns in wheat values were unofficial advices indicating that the wheat surplus belt of Kansas and Oklahoma has a very unpromising outlet and that under any conditions hereafter a bumper crop this season is unlikely. It was pointed out in this connection that prices of late had declined to where they were four weeks ago when drought first became a factor. Toward the last talk was heard that exporters yesterday and today had accomplished more than during any similar time in many months, with millers abroad buying and with Liverpool quotations showing the best premium over Chicago that has prevailed in a long while.

Corn and oats advanced with wheat. Besides, contract stocks of corn in Chicago are now almost 12,000,000 bushels less than at this time last year, and country offerings are light.

Provisions were somewhat firmer because of scattered buying despite downturns in hog values.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May 1.08, 1.06; July 1.05 1-2, 1.08 1-2-5-8; Sept. 1.08 3-4-7-8, 1.11 3-4-7-8; Dec. 1.13 5-8, 1.16 1-2. Corn—May 81 7-8, 83 1-8; July 83 5-8, 84 3-4-7-8; Sept. 84 3-8-1-2; 85 3-4-7-8; Dec. 78 3-8, 79 5-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 23—(AP)—The bond market drifted idly today in the dullest session of the month. Sales totaled only a shade above $10,000,000, due to the slowness of most of the convertibles. Investment rails held their Tuesday gains, but the list in general was irregular.

Money was plentiful and dull. Call loans again dropped to 3 1-2 per cent., but rates on term accommodations were unchanged. United States governments ruled higher on small dealings, Treasury 3 3-4s advanced 11-32, the day's largest gain.

With the usual exception of American Telephone 4 1-2s, the most active domestic issue was the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron convertible 6 which mounted with the stock to a new high. The bond touched 108 3-4, its highest price since last fall and the closing figure of 105 1-2 represented a net gain of 4 1-4. International Telephone 4 1-2s finished 2 3-4 above the previous close. General Theatres 6s sagged 3 1-4 on the offering of the additional issue. Shubert Theatres 6s advanced 4 points in line with the strength in the amusement stocks, while Warner Brothers Pictures 6s were unusually active but failed to move. The company is planning to list another block of the debentures to the amount of nearly $16,000,000, and will use part of the proceeds to pay for acquisition of the phonograph and radio divisions of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company.

Inquiry for the rails was sluggish. Minor advances appeared in an assortment of high grade bonds, including Santa Fe general 4s, Baltimore & Ohio refunding 5s, Central Pacific first 4s, New York Central debenture 4s, Pennsylvania gold 5s, and Southern Pacific collateral 4s.

Inland Steel 4 1-2s, Gulf States Steel 5 1-2s, Pressed Steel Car 5s, International Match 5s, Goodyear Tire 5s and Gould Coupler 6s were firm items in the industrial classification. Utilities were exceptionally dull and slightly easy.

Trading in the bonds of Chile featured the foreign group, the 6s sold off 1-4 to 3-4 on unusually large turnovers, to the accompaniment of reports of new financing by that nation. Prices of prominent European government loans were mostly lower. San Paulo State 6s and 8s improved

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 23—(AP)—Cotton futures closed very steady, 24 to 44 points higher. Spot steady; middling 16.30.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, April 23—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 21 were $9,151,330.41; expenditures $1,320,445.65; balance $220,745,705.42.

NEW YORK, April 23—(AP)—Construction awards in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains during the week from April 12 to 18, totaled $100,146,500, F. W. Dodge Corp., reports. This figure compares with $113,866,400 for the preceding week, and with $117,753,400 for the corresponding week of last year. Since the first of the year contracts for new building and engineering work have aggregated $1,379,067,100, as against $1,713,036,400 for the same period last year.

Reports from the copper trade today state that buying here and abroad is small, with domestic orders just enough to cover immediate requirements and with little change shown since before the price of the metal was reduced from 18 to 14 cents a pound. Persistent rumors from abroad that further cut to 11 cents will soon be made has held up foreign buying.

Winchester Noyes, has been nominated to succeed William Beatty, who has been president of the New York Produce exchange for the past three years. A. C. Field, and John E. Seaver, have been nominated for vice-president and treasurer, respectively.

NEW SIGNALS TO GUIDE AUTO RACERS ON TRACK

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new system of flags, the only code of communication to auto racers when speeding over a track, will be in effect this season.

Green, which heretofore signaled a racer that he was entering the last lap, will be the "go" sign. Red, which meant "the course is clear," will wave when a race is halted.

Yellow will signal caution, an orange flag with navy blue circular center will tell a driver that a competitor is trying to overtake him, and a king blue bunting will tell him he is entering the last lap.

The changes, made by the contest board of the American automobile association, eliminate the black flag with white center as a signal that a competitor is trying to overtake a driver.

SAYS HALF MILLION VOLT LINE POSSIBLE

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal. (AP)—Power transmission of half a million volts, more than double that of present times, now is feasible, says Prof. Harris J. Ryan, director of the 2,000,000-volt laboratory of Stanford university.

Such huge power lines, however, are not yet practical, he declares.

"Even so," says Prof. Ryan, "one may engage in speculation as to what uses can be made of the half-million volt power line.

"Interconnections of powers and markets are now being organized from Chicago to the Atlantic and Gulf states and from Canada to Mexico on the Pacific coast. Executives and engineers promulgating such intercommunications may be the first to encounter need for the half-million volt line for equalizing power sources and markets between industrial areas."

STRANDED AVIATOR TRAMPS 38 MILES

Lost in fog, he was forced to descend when his fuel supply ran out. His only company was a band of coyotes, kept at a distance by menacing gestures with airplane crank and a fire of sagebrush.

The flier started walking and that night reached the edge of a "canyon," which proved to be a highway to Tonopah, Nev.

NEW YORK — (AP) — "What do you think of our skyline?"

The question has been put to every eminent vistor to New York for so many years that it has become a municipal jest.

But it continues to be asked, and it is no longer sufficient to ask the question without specifying which of New York's skylines is meant.

For the city now has two.

The other is in midtown, grown up since 1925. In this group of skyscrapers, clustered around Forty-second street in the vicinity of the Grand Central terminal, are now eight of New York's 15 tallest towers.

The tallest building in the world is the 68-story, 1,030-foot Chrysler tower, in midtown. Catacorner from it is the 55-story Chanin building, and adjoining that is the 53-story Lincoln building. Half a block east is the new 476-foot Daily News building.

All of these buildings have been erected within the last two years, enabling the midtown section to boast a skyline which now rivals the vista of steel-and-stone pinnacles downtown.

But even downtown the 792-foot Woolworth tower, for 14 years the tallest in the world, is no longer supreme. It is outdone by the new 920-foot Bank of Manhattan building in Wall street.

The now obscured golden dome of the New York World, the 612-foot needle-point of the Singer building, the 50-story Metropolitan Life building—each in its turn the highest building in the world—have become also-rans in Manhattan's skyscraper race.

ADDED FREIGHT OFFSETS RAILROADS' AUTO LOSSES

NEW YORK — (AP) — For whatever amount of money the advent of the automobile has taken from the profits of the railroads there is a good sized freight bill to offset it.

J. E. Marvin, general traffic manager of the national automobile chamber of commerce points out that carload freight revenues from automotive companies totaled $542,170,000 in 1928.

This includes all freight developed by the automobile industry.

"TIME TO CHANGE YER OIL"

Refill with SOCONY today

YOUR oil has been weakened by driving in winter. Every time you used the "choke," raw gasoline seeped down into the crankcase—diluting the oil. Thinned oil is an actual menace to your motor. It breaks down under the high temperatures in the cylinders. It cannot form that film so essential to sealing the piston rings and preventing the escape of power. It will not keep metal parts from grinding together.

Change your oil today and drive with smooth comfort this spring. Have the Socony man drain off the old oil and flush out the crankcase with Socony Flushing Oil. Road dirt and grit are bound to accumulate in the crankcase. Flushing is the only way—without taking down the motor—to remove this harmful gritty substance. Don't hesitate another day. Have your oil changed today. And be sure it is a Socony lubricant that is put in.

If you've been driving during the cold weather, ask your Socony dealer or Service Station man to drain off the anti-freeze mixture from your radiator. This service is free.

More motorists in New York and New England use Socony than use any other brand—simply because Socony lubricants are of the very highest quality.

FOUR MINUCCI CHILDREN SENT TO THE COUNTY HOME

A pitiable predicament presented itself today to the city authorities when it became known that because of family conditions, four of the five children of Angelo Minucci, 31 Smith street, were in need of better care and maintenance and as a result of the living conditions of the children they were committed to the county home at Norwich. Mrs. Minucci died several months ago and her husband, who is a fisherman, is absent from his home day and night, the children have been harbored by a neighbor. Owing to it being impossible to properly care for the kiddies, their commitment to the county institution was ordered. Neighbors are caring for an infant that was born a short time prior to the death of Mrs. Minucci.

The police get no clue as to the identity of the alleged gunman, who, it is claimed, held up William Christian, of Groton, clerk in National Economy store, corner of Montauk avenue and Orchard street, last Saturday afternoon when Christian claims to have been relieved of $23 while the crook held a revolver at his head. Christian states that the crook drove a Buick touring car and all such cars are being checked up by Detective Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh. The police continue to the belief that the store employe was not robbed and within a few days, they contend, they will be in a position to show that Christian is not relating the truth as to the alleged robbery.

Dr. Manning K. Rose, proprietor of a dental parlor, 108 State street, who was found yesterday forenoon partially overcome by gas in his office and who has since been a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, will be discharged within a few days. Von Paulson parked his car on Bank street, opposite the fire headquarters of the Allen Hook and Ladder company. In the event of a fire the truck would have been unable to leave quarters because of the parked automobile.

ANGRY HUSBAND'S CASE GOES OVER A MONTH

Larry Muscarella, 8 Cedar Grove avenue, was in the police court this morning on a charge of breach of the peace. He pleaded guilty and the case was continued to May 24. Muscarella, who is but 23 and employed as a barber, went to his home about 8 o'clock last evening. He had been trying to persuade his wife to leave her father's house and go to live with Muscarella's parents. This Mrs. Muscarella refused to do. When Muscarella again endeavored to induce his wife to make the change of residence last night and the woman refused, Muscarella became angered and decided to make the change alone. He also decided that if his wife would not accompany him she would be deprived of the use of the furniture. Muscarella started to wreck the place and smashed all of the furnishings of the home that were of value, including a chamber suit valued at $350. When Muscarella concluded his attack the house appeared as though a cyclone had hit it. Mrs. Muscarella and her father, Frank Loicano, made complaint to the police and Automobile Patrol Officer Thomas Cavanaugh and Patrolman Dennis Murphy went to the house. Muscarella had left, but he was arrested later by Officer Cavanaugh.

Given 30 Days in Jail

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut,

North & Judd Manufacturing Company, New Britain

On or near the site of the present factories of North & Judd Manufacturing company a manufacturing business has been conducted since 1812.

The early shops and mills of New Britain were built to meet the needs of the community itself. There were blacksmith shops run by prominent men. At these shops axes, hoes, chains and nails were made. There were two or three shoemakers and very few carpenters. Sawmills were started early. After a time lumber was prepared for sale in other nearby parishes, and corn ground in New Britain was sent to New Haven and from there shipped to the West Indies. The first tinware manufactured in this country was made very early in the 18th century, and not long afterward this business started in New Britain in a shop on East street.

At about the same time that the tinware business was growing other branches of manufacture began to develop. One of the best known of the blacksmith shops was that of James North on Main street. He became interested in the brass business. In 1800, with his son, James North, and a man named Shipman, he opened a shop at the corner of South Main and Park streets for the manufacture of sleigh bells. Later Seth North, a younger brother of James North, Jr., went into business, too, and the shops of North & Shipman became known as the principal factories for the manufacture of brass goods in this country.

A skeptical visitor once asked a New Britain man: "What are the natural advantages of New Britain?" and the patriot proudly answered, "The grace of God, and men like Major North!" On such a foundation the manufacturing enterprises of New Britain have been built.

From 1812 on, Alvin North, either with his brother, Seth J. North, with his sons or with others, was actively engaged in manufacturing for more than forty years. For about half that time the business consisted largely of making plated wire, or of articles formed from such wire.

In 1848, Hubert F. North purchased the interest of his brother, O. B. North, and in 1855 another change in ownership occurred when Alvin North disposed of his interest to Lorin F. Judd and J. A. Pickett, the name of the firm becoming H. F. North & Co. Mr. Pickett retired in 1863, selling his share in the business to Mr. Judd, and once more there was a change in the firm name, this time to North & Judd. A short time later, in the same year, it was incorporated as North and Judd Manufacturing company, with a capital of $60,000.

Greatest progress has been attained by the company during the past quarter century. It has enjoyed a healthy and conservative expansion until today its buildings and yards are spread out over many acres. A photograph of the factory and working force taken in 1872 shows 22 employes. By the year 1890 there were 600 hands, and today there are more than 1300.

In 1919, the company purchased the W. & E. T. Fitch company of New Haven. In 1925, the company purchased the Traut & Hine Manufacturing company of New Britain which is now being operated as the Traut & Hine plant.

In addition, branch sales offices are maintained in many of the principal cities and foreign countries with the result that its products are distributed all over the world.

North & Judd products are varied in character and include: Harness hardware, buckles, snap hooks, rings and dees, rosettes, loops, trace hooks, turrets, horse bits, riding spurs, trunk and bag hardware, automobile hardware, strap hardware, bow rests, door handles, door locks, belt buckles, suspender trimmings, hames and razor strop hardware.

The officers of the company are the following: F. M. Holmes, president (formerly of Norwich); E. M. Wightman, vice president and secretary; S. P. McCutcheon, treasurer; F. J. Ward, assistant treasurer.

BEEYARD PHOTOGRAPHS TO BE IN COMPETITION

In the interests of "Keeping Better Bees Better," the Connecticut Honey Bee, published by the Connecticut Beekeepers' association, is sponsoring a contest for photographs of the most attractive bee yards in Connecticut. The judges will be C. H. Pease, veteran beekeeper of Canaan; T. E. Babcock of this city, president of the association, and L. B. Crandall, professor of bee culture, Connecticut Agricultural college.

The conditions of the contest are: That the photographs must be of bee-yards in Connecticut; that no name or names shall appear on the photographs, which must be enclosed in an envelope bearing the name of the contestants, and all photographs will be sent to A. W. Yates, Inc., 15 Chapman street, Hartford.

The photographs will be prepared for exhibition and judging at the fall meeting of the Connecticut Beekeepers' association. Three prizes will be awarded on the following basis: 50 per cent for arrangement of hives; 25 per cent, number of colonies; 15 per cent, location of yard; 10 per cent, photography. The prizes, in order, will be: 10 sheets of three-ply Airco foundation; one standard smoker; one Italian queen, and will be donated by A. W. Yates, Hartford.

The contest is open to anyone whose bee yards are in the state of Connecticut. The prize winning and honorable mention photographs will be published, together with interesting data in the Connecticut Honey Bee at the next publication after the awards are made.

NORWICH TOWN

RURAL ASS'N CONSIDERS PICNIC AT LUCAS PARK

A meeting of the executive committee of the Norwich Rural association was held Monday evening at the residence of Charles P. Learned on East Town street. The most important matter discussed was the question of holding the annual community picnic in conjunction with the Woman's City club, and the Norwich grange, at Solomon Lucas Memorial park, Tuesday, June 3rd. This idea met the approval of the committee, details to be announced later. The annual meeting of the Rural association was set for the first week in June, date to be decided upon and notices sent out in due season. The president, Willard P. Haugh, was directed to appoint a committee to nominate officers.

During the session of the Sunday school, Easter Sunday, at the Methodist Episcopal church, the school superintendent, Stanton W. HEAVY FINE IN COMMON PLEAS COURT FOR NEW LONDON BOOTLEGGER

Witold Korpacz of 151 Cliff street was before the common pleas court, criminal side, here Wednesday in trial for violation of the liquor law and was found guilty on two counts by the jury which heard the evidence.

Judge C. B. Waller imposed a fine of $200 upon Korpacz on the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell and $500 fine with six months in jail, as well as costs, on the charge of transporting liquor. The costs amount to $74.31. Korpacz had appealed to the common pleas court from a fine of $400 and 30 days in jail which had been the sentence in the New London police court.

The charge against Korpacz was that on March 25 he had delivered by automobile at 191 North Bank street five 5-gallon cans of liquor, bringing them to the rear of these premises in New London.

The evidence against him was presented through Officer Clarence Martin, who told of watching the cellar at the North Bank street house, to which Korpacz and another man came and the officer said he arrested Korpacz when he had seen him carry one can from the automobile into the cellar. The other man got away while he was putting the handcuffs on Korpacz.

Another New London police officer, Frank J. Philippino, testified that this place was on his beat and he never knew the cellar where the liquor was to be closed.

Prosecuting Attorney C. B. Whittlesey was assisted in the presentation of the case by Attorney Max Boyer of the New London police court, and the accused man was defended by Attorney Thomas M. Shields.

When Korpacz was put on the stand he said that he formerly worked at the New London Ship and Engine Co., in New London and the Whiting Machine Co., also. He said that he had been in this city visiting his sister at 151 Cliff street and on the day in question had gone to New London to see some friends.

He told of calling on various friends there during the day and finally went to the home of Anthony Gerwetowsky, contractor, at 40 Terrace avenue. Gerwetowsky, he said, might have a job for him as he was out of work. He told of going to North Bank street, rear, and of his going into the house, the cellar in which the liquor was found. He claims that he was there to collect a bill.

On their return, he said, Officer Martin flashed his searchlight in their faces which blinded them. It was raining at the time, and Officer Martin asked them to step into the cellar where the liquor was cached. While putting the handcuffs on him, Gerwetowsky disappeared, the witness said.

He denied having brought the cans of alcohol to New London and denied having any conection with them.

On cross-examination, Prosecutor Whittlesey asked for Korpacz's registration and the prosecutor closely questioned the accused why he had registered his car in this state, when he claimed Providence as his home and where his family was located. The registration gave Korpacz's address as 151 Cliff street of this city.

Korpacz claimed that he had lost his license to operate in Rhode Island for three months for speeding and in order to drive a car, he had to secure a registration and operator's license in this state. The prosecutor also asked the witness how it was that he was so familiar with New London streets, especially the no-parking ones. Previously the accused had testified that he did not park his car on North Bank street, when he went calling there as it was a no-parking street. Korpacz replied that he had resided in New London for some time and ought to be acquainted with the streets there.

Other witnesses testifying were Anthony Gerwetowsky, Jan Kowatzik, Pat Plaski, Walter Suplicki and Thomas J. Leahy. Attorney Richard Dudkowski served as interpreter for Polish witnesses who could not talk English. The accused endeavored to establish an alibi by the testimony of several of the witnesses.

Korpacz was taken to jail when the court session adjourned, his case closing the criminal term.

CLAIMS HE WANDERED IN DAZE AFTER CRASH

After wandering about all night, as he claimed, Joseph Awizyc, 22, of No. 57 Sturtevant street, went to police headquarters about 11:30 o'clock Wednesday morning and informed the police that he was the driver of the machine which was involved in an accident on Boswell avenue, near St. Regis avenue, about 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night. His father, Frank Awizyc, who was riding in the machine, was badly injured. Until Awizyc showed up at police headquarters Wednesday morning, the cause of the accident was a mystery. The machine, with the front end stove in, was found by the police about 8:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, in a lot, some 25 or 30 feet from the highway. The driver had disappeared. The registration found in the machine showed that the car is owned by Frank Awizyc and later in the evening he was found at his home on Sturtevant avenue where he was being attended by a physician. It was learned from him that the machine was driven by his son, Joseph.

The latter, however, was nowhere to be found and his whereabouts since the accident, until he showed up at police headquarters Wednesday morning are something of a mystery. He claims that he was dazed by the accident and had been wandering about all night, having just come to, before he presented himself at the police station.

According to his story he was turning into St. Regis avenue when the machine crashed into a truck he says was parked near the corner. He said he saw the truck, but could not explain how he happened to run into it.

When the police arrived on the scene there was broken glass on the easterly side of the highway, and the machine was in the lot, off the westerly side of the highway, and south of St. Regis avenue. There was no sign of any truck in the vicinity. It has not been learned how the elder man got to his home on Sturtevant avenue.

LARGE AUDIENCE ENJOYS NUTMEG ENTERTAINERS

Wednesday evening, under the auspices of Everyman's class of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church, the Nutmeg Entertainers gave an entertainment to a large and appreciative audience. For nearly two hours the audience was kept in laughter.

The musical numbers by Edward H. Smith on the piano and piano-accordion were exceptionally good. Arthur H. Perry, known as "The Man From Maine," kept the audience in good humor with his anecdotes, stories, recollections of the good old days down in Maine when the men all wore chin whiskers and had hayseed in their hair. The popular and folk songs by Carlton Bowers were very pleasing and his character sketches kept everyone in a roar of laughter from start to finish.

EXTRA POWER LINE FROM MONTVILLE STATION

Application has been made to the city by the Connecticut Light and Power company for a right of way 250 feet in width through Bog Meadow to run a pole line for the transmission of electric power, which will be voted upon at the coming city meeting to give approval to such a grant by the mayor.

The right of way will be used for running a new transmission line from the Montville station of the Eastern Connecticut Power company in order to reinforce power lines to the north. The new line will run up from Montville and around this city by the Bog Meadow right of way in order to connect above Occum with the power line of the Eastern Connecticut Power company that crosses the Thames river at Kitemaug.

Daylight Time for Railroad

Effective Sunday, April 27, a new timetable will go into effect on the New Haven railroad, accommodating the train schedules to the change to daylight saving time. As has been the custom since daylight saving came into vogue, the timetables will show eastern standard time and all trains will be operated on that time, but in general the trains are scheduled to run one hour earlier. This does not hold true in all cases, however, and therefore to avoid confusion train users should secure copies of the new timetable which will be ready for distribution at the end of the week.

SUMMER ROUND-UP FOR HEALTH OF CHILDREN

A thorough physical and dental examination for every child before he enters school for the first time, is the idea for which summer round-up work is being carried on. At these round-ups, carried on by the Connecticut congress of parents and teachers in cooperation with the state department of health, children are first weighed and measured. The average weight for the height and age is also recorded. Vision, hearing and certain reflexes are next tested. After this the child goes to the doctor in charge who examines carefully the throat, glands, heart and lungs. Close attention is also given to the spine, feet and legs and posture of the child. Every defect found, during examination, serious enough to require medical or surgical attention, is always referred to the family physician for care.

Following the physical examination, a mouth examination is made by the dental hygienist. She cleans the teeth of many children and advises the mothers as to the care of the teeth and proper diet. All dental defects are referred to the family dentist. The worth-whileness of the work is shown by results as manifested by the health of the children and their ability to enter school without unnecesary physical defects.

The tests were conducted at the tannery pond on North Main street and at the dock in the rear of Osgood's.

Waters who recently filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court. The auction was held at the printing plant on Chestnut street and was in charge of William H. The bidding started at $200 and was run up to $330, the sale being closed at that figure. However, the bankruptcy referee, Attorney Henry L. McGuire of New London, would not approve the sale at that price. Mr. Miller then agreed to pay $400 for the stock and fixtures.

NEW TRAFFIC REGULATIONS FOR SHETUCKET STREET IN EFFECT TODAY

The new traffic ordinance making Shetucket street a one-way street, will go into effect this (Thursday) morning, Alderman Frederick J. Ortmann, chairman of the board of police commissioners, announced Wednesday evening. Shetucket street, starting this morning, will be a one-way street, north, from the Laurel Hill bridge corner, to Main street.

No parking is to be allowed at any time on the westerly side of the street. During the day 10 minute parking will be allowed, on the easterly side, until 3 p. m. From 3 o'clock until 6.40 o'clock in the evening the parking period will be 40 minutes and after 6.40 o'clock the parking limit will be extended to six hours.

Right turns, against the red light will be allowed from Shetucket street into Main street, from Broadway into Main street and from Main street into Broadway. All vehicular traffic must remain stationary while the amber light is showing. Drivers, who do not observe the amber light will be subject to arrest for violation of the traffic rules. The amber light applies to all drivers regardless of whether they intend to make a right turn, left turn or drive straight ahead. In other words, all vehicular traffic will be allowed to proceed while the green light is showing, and right hand turns will be allowed against the red light but all vehicular traffic must stop and remain at a standstill while the amber light is showing. The amber light is for the benefit of pedestrian traffic.

From now on the ordinance prohibiting parking on the northerly side of Main street from the Norwich Savings bank to Washington square will be strictly enforced. All violators of this rule will be given red tags. This means that hereafter no machines will be allowed to remain stationary for any reason on that side of Main street. Parking will be allowed as usual on the south side of Main street.

A space will be provided in front of the Wauregan hotel building, at the corner of Main street and Broadway, for the New London bus line which is routed over the Military highway. No vehicles will be allowed to park in this space which is for the exclusive use of the buses for the taking on of passengers. From the entrance to the Wauregan hotel on Broadway to the corner of Main street, no parking will be allowed at any time, and from the old Manhattan building to the corner of Market and Water streets no parking will be alowed at any time. All violators of these rules will be handed red tags. Double parking on any street, and the practice of leaving machines in the middle of streets will be stopped by the police.

The erection of new traffic and direction signs has practically been completed. The making of Shetucket street a one-way street routes traffic from Broadway and Main street bound for Laurel Hill and the Military highway west through Main street, through Market street to Water street and through Water street to the Laurel Hill bridge. A sign directing traffic through Market street is to be erected at the corner of Main and Market streets.

POETRY

One Vermont Woodpile

Of certain sounds around the farm
 Not much may well be said
But one, though, had a certain charm
 That still pervades my head—
I liked to hear the wood fall down
 In our old woodhouse shed.

Full twenty cords for yearly use
 All split and May-June dry,
We threw into our woodhouse loose
 And lodged it rafter-high.
Then, course, we gnawed about the base
 To get the day's supply.

Ere long that woodpile's basic part
 With air was underpinned,
So that a kitten's step would start
 A slide of wood and wind,
 Denosed and then unchinned.

That slide threw off the kind of noise
 You didn't have to dread,
A tink-tunk sound that pleased the boys
 Although we'd gone to bed—
'Twas rich to hear the sticks come down
 In our old woodhouse shed!

They made a hard wood, head-on sound—
 Of course, they couldn't bend—
A thud-clap when they hit the ground
 With no more force to spend;
If I could hear that sound again
 The world might up and end.

I hope that when my day is past
 And all is done and said,
I'll lie as peacefully at last
 In Mother Nature's bed,
As lay those fallen firewood sticks
 In our old woodhouse shed.

Peepers

The peepers sang today;
For months they've been away;
 I listened long—
 I love their song—
And this is what they say:
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Peep!
 We are through our sleep!
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Ping!
 How we love to sing,
 Ping-a-ping-in Spring.

The peepers came tonight;
Before the stars were bright;
 With magic spell—
 I love to tell
The song of their delight;
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Peep!
 We'll sing you now to sleep!
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Ping!
 How we love to sing,
 Ping-a-ping-in Spring.

The peepers sang to me—
Ten thousand there must be—
 A piping throng,
 The evening long,
Piped this so merrily:
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Peep!
 We never want to sleep!
 Pee-eep! Pee-eep! Ping!
 How glad we are to sing,
 Ping-a-ping-in Spring.

CURRAN DEFENDS LETTER WRITING ON PROHIBITION

President of the Association Against Prohibition Told the Senate Lobby Committee That the Correspondence Was "Not Lobbying In Even the Least Sense of the Word"—Defended Action of Thomas W. Phillips In Writing to Two Members of the U. S. Supreme Court—Explanation Was Not Satisfactory to Senator Robinson, Who Pronounced the Action "Reprehensible."

WASHINGTON, April 24—(AP)—Defending the action of Thomas W. Phillips, candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, in writing letters on prohibition to two members of the United States supreme court, Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, told the senate lobby committee today that the correspondence was "not lobbying in even the least sense of the word."

The letters, read yesterday before the lobby committee, were written last year to Justice Stone and the late Justice Sanford. They consisted largely of an attack on prohibition and drew a charge from Senator Robinson, republican, Indiana, that the anti-prohibition association, of which Phillips is a director, was "lobbying directly with the supreme court."

Curran said today the letters consisted merely of "correspondence between old friends" and cited a letter written by the late Chief Justice Taft to Irving Fisher, of Yale university, which discussed prohibition, as evidence that lobbying was not intended.

The Taft letter, which has been made public at the prohibition hearings before the house judiciary committee, was written, Curran said, when Fisher sent the chief justice a book by himself which favored prohibition. The letter was placed in the lobby committee record.

Senator Robinson, however, was not satisfied with Curran's explanation and described the letter writing as "indefensible" and "reprehensible." He said he was surprised that Phillips had not been "haled before the court."

It also was brought out that Walter G. Hooke, assistant to Curran, had been active in the Illinois and New York legislatures last year in opposition to dry laws. Questioned by Robinson, Curran said the association had "lobbied" in Illinois.

The resignation of Secretary Lamont as a director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment when he became head of the commerce department, was brought out in a letter read before the committee from Benedict Crowell, of Cleveland, to Curran.

Curran testified that the association had paid the expenses of F. G. R. Gordon, of Haverhill, Mass., to work for the re-election of Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, in 1928.

Questioned by the committee he said the association was not ready for prohibition referenda in California and Colorado.

"We have got so much to do this fall," he said, "in helping to elect congressmen and senators opposed to prohibition that if we get all cluttered up with a lot of referenda we get scattered about too thin."

WASHINGTON, April 24—(AP)—Republican leaders of the senate and house carried their troubles over procedure with the tariff bill to the white house today and after a discussion over the breakfast table with President Hoover came away agreed that the house act first on the conference report and take a direct vote on the export debenture provision.

This is not in accordance with custom but Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican pilot, insisted that the house go on record on the debenture farm relief amendment and the president after listening to both sides, approved this plan.

Although disposed to follow the usual practice and have the senate consider the report first, the house leaders accepted the decision and agreed to take up the report including the eight major points of difference between the two branches, a week from today. It was thought that action could be completed in that branch in two or three days.

Reluctant to put the debenture to a direct vote before another test in the senate the house leaders now are faced with separate votes also on the senate provision restoring to congress the power now exercised by the president under the flexible clause, the senate's plan to organize the tariff commission, and the five major rates which the conferees failed to agree upon.

The debenture plan and the legislative flexible provision were written into the bill by the senate coalition of democrats and republican independents over the protest of the president, who found ten objections to the former when the farm marketing act was before congress and twice while the tariff bill was pending appealed for retention of existing law on the flexible clause.

The house rejected the debenture as part of the farm bill but it has never gone on record on the flexible provisions. Although overwhelmingly republican in make-up there is ground for belief that a fair-sized group of republicans would join the democrats in voting for the senate flexible amendment.

Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, a former solicitor general of the United States, made a vigorous appeal for repeal of the presidential rate-making authority when the tariff bill was before the house last May.

However, the chief concern of the leaders appears to be over the debenture. It was indicated by some that the president feels so strongly on this subject that he is preparing to issue another statement opposing it.

HEARINGS ON WET AND DRY CONTROVERSY TERMINATED

As a Wet Witness, W. W. Roper, Head Football Coach At Princeton, Said That He Hesitated to Send His Son to College Because of Prevalence of Drinking By Young Men and Women—Sir Henry Brayton, Chairman of the Ontario Liquor Board, Told Why the People of Ontario Reversed Thier Views On Prohibition—Growing Use of Flasks and Strong Drinks Were Contributory "Factors."

WASHINGTON, April 24.—(AP)—The anti-prohibition forces today concluded their attack on the eighteenth amendment before the house judiciary committee with an effort to prove the success of the Canadian liquor control system and also to establish that athletic directors of big universities were divided over the effect of the dry law on American youth.

As soon as they finished, Chairman Graham announced the protracted public hearings closed. He said probably at a later date the committee would take under consideration the vast amount of testimony obtained and might act on one of the many bills introduced asking repeal of the eighteenth amendment or modification of the Volstead act.

As the committee membership has a preponderance of drys the wets do not expect any of the repeal or modification measures to receive a favorable report.

Opponents of prohibition were the first heard by the committee when the sessions started some time ago. After they had painted a picture of drinking among youth, crowded jails and increase in crime, the drys were heard. They attributed to prohibition increased savings deposits, industrial expansion, happier homes, and better living conditions generally.

Today's session wound up a two-day rebuttal period given the wets. They called upon Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Ontario liquor control board, to tell how one of America's neighboring nations endeavors to control liquor traffic. He defended the system, saying it had proved a more effective step toward temperance than had prohibition.

The wets also summoned W. W. Roper, head football coach at Princeton, whose name is known to the youth of all American colleges. Himself a teetotaler, Roper said he had found that many young men drank and that, even more alarming, young women were drinking. As a father, he added, he hesitated to send his son to college.

Sir Henry prefaced his testimony with the assertion that he appeared as a disinterested party and hought to answer no one. His views, however, were desired by the anti-prohibitionists to counteract testimony given by E. C. Drury, a former premier of Ontario province, who recently assailed the control system before the committee.

Roper's presentation by the wets followed an example that had been set by the drys in calling before the committee Alonzo Stagg, athletic director at the University of Chicago, and Fielding H. Yost, athletic director at the University of Michigan. They endorsed the effects of prohibition upon youth.

Besides Sir Henry and Roper, two other witnesses were heard in opposition to the dry law. They were Representative Robert H. Clancy, a Michigan republican who represents a Detroit district, and Dr. F. W. Buck, executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary-Tax Reduction league.

Sir Henry began by saying that Ontario was the driest of all Canadian provinces. He testified that during the war because of a scarcity of food and a general desire to conserve, prohibition had been enacted.

He then traced its history, saying in 1919, prohibition had been endorsed in an election by 68 per cent of the vote, but in 1923 in another election had obtained only 51 per cent of the vote.

The people of Ontario had changed their view, he continued, because of the things that followed peace-time prohibition. He said that "swamp whiskey," other substitutes, a growing use of flasks and of strong liquor had been some of the things that prompted a reversal of view on prohibition in Ontario.

The Canadian said the greater majority of American tourists crossing the border were "decent and law abiding," that he, as head of the control board, sought in every way possible to prevent issuing of licenses to persons who would take liquor into the United States and, under questioning by committee members he said the underlying principle of the Ontario law was no drinking in public.

Replying to questions by Representative Stobbs, republican, Massachusetts, Sir Henry testified that country clubs in Canada were not permitted to serve liquor; that there was no "19th hole," and that big dinners were dry.

Only at private dinners in private homes, he added, could intoxicants legally be served. Since hotels were baned from selling intoxicants, he said, a man's hotel room was regarded as his home.

The Canadian defended the control system as promoting temperance, saying it had accomplished more in this line than prohibition, and asserted that under prohibition he regarded one of the greatest evils the cessation of educational work by temperance societies and a looking to the government to prohibit drinking by law.

Roper said he was a staunch believer in temperance; that he had toured the country preaching temperance to high school youths, and that he hoped there would be some means of improving the situation.

He testified that be felt the "breakdown" in prohibition had originated with the older people.

"I think that anyone is foolish to either drink or smoke," he said. "But young people are impressionable. If you don't give them right ideals, they will get wrong ones."

"The most alarming part is drinking by girls," Roper said. "In the days gone by if a girl was asked to a college function, and someone offered her a drink, her escort would have felt that she had been insulted.

"Now girls drink openly. They seem to think it a big thing to do."

Roper said he did not claim there was more drinking in colleges than before prohibition but that it was the "vicious type of drinking" that alarmed him.

He said he spoke as an individual and not as a representative of Princeton university. Under questioning by Representative Michener, republican, Michigan, Roper said he spoke of conditions away from Princeton as he had tried to set an example and had absented himself from any function at Princeton at which liquor might had been served.

WOMEN TO FIGHT FOR REPEAL OF THE 18TH AMENDMENT

CLEVELAND, April 24.—(AP)— The women's organization for prohibition reform, a national organization claiming 100,000 members, will fight for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, it was voted unanimously late today by about 300 delegates at the close of a two-day conference.

The unanimous vote for repeal came as a surprise, officers said, for it had been considered likely the organization would go on record as campaigning for modification.

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York city was elected permanent chairman of the organization in the executive session today. Mrs. E. Lathrop Ames, Massachusetts, was elected a vice-chairman.

MUSSOLINI'S DAUGHTER WEDS THE COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO

ROME, April 24.—(AP)—Benito Mussolini, dictator and "Strong Man" of Italy since 1923, like a private Italian citizen saw his 19-year-old daughter, Edda, become the bride of Count Galeazzo Ciano in a ceremony that despite all its attendant magnificence was really but a wedding in a private family.

In Il Duce's parish church, St. Joseph's on the Via Nomentana, the daughter of the dictator and the son of the Italian minister of communications were united by the parish priest, Monsignor Pascucci.

Their wedding, except for the picturesqueness of fascist "black shirts" with glittering bayonets, was simple, in accordance with Il Duce's preference for keeping his family life in the background.

WASHINGTON, April 24.— (AP) — Sweeping increases in the government's compensation policy for World war veterans were voted today by the house after more than a week of debate, climaxed by a tumultous eight-hour session in which predictions were freely made that President Hoover would veto the measure.

In the face of protests by Chairman Wood of the appropriations committee that such legislation should not be enacted in view of the president's request last Monday that expenditures be curtailed, a bill to provide compensation for every disability incurred up to Jan. 1, 1930, was approved, 324 to 49, and sent to the senate.

DANIELSON

AFFAIRS OF FARMERS' EXCHANGE ARE SETTLED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 24—In process of liquidating the Danielson Farmers' Exchange, Inc., checks were being mailed to stockholders today. This corporation was formed in June, 1919, and functioned successfully for a number of years. It was a co-operative buying organisation in the interest of its members, and intended to supply them with many of the purchases they found it necessary to make at close to wholesale price. This end was accomplished by pooling orders and buying through the corporation. Because of lack of proper financial support from some of the stockholders during the past two or three years it ceased to be of the value it once was, so some time since it was decided to liquidate.

Originally the shares of the corporation had a par value of $10. There were 177 shares outstanding and in the hands of 87 people when it was decided to liquidate. Checks mailed to the shareholders today were on a basis of $14 per share, indicating a small margin of profit on the transactions of the corporation in the past.

H. G. Gilbert Named Tree Warden

In accordance with a statute passed at the last session of the legislature requiring boroughs to appoint tree wardens, Warden Gaston A. Maindon has appointed Henry G. Gilbert as such in Danielson. Mr. Gilbert, a tree expert, is also tree warden for the town of Killingly.

In view of the fact that the town government has supervision and control of the streets in the borough, which is all within the limits of the town, and because the borough has charge of the sidewalks within its boundaries, there appears to be an overlapping of authority as to supervision of trees standing at the edges of sidewalks in the borough. However, no difficulty is expected to arise over this because the town and borough governments have very amicable relations and because Mr. Gilbert fills both tree warden jobs.

Arrested Twice in One Day

Zoel Beauregard and his employe, Henry Nadeau, both North Grosvenordale men, just insisted on getting into trouble today. They were arrested here this morning by State Officer John Murphy for buying junk without having a license to do so and each held under bonds of $100 for appearance in the Killingly town court Saturday morning. Bail was furnished and they were released only to be picked up by State Officer Royal W. Scranton in Thompson a few hours later again engaged in buying junk, and in this instance buying it from children, another violation of the law. In Thompson their bail was fixed at $200 each, they supplying it. They will appear in a justice's court in Thompson Friday afternoon. Upon conviction of such charges as will be filed against them a fine of $100 may be imposed and a jail sentence also added.

Having hopped over to Providence Tuesday evening and trimmed the Warehouse team, champions of the Mayflower division of the First National stores, by a score of 1549 to 1478, a team of First National bowlers from this section are now called upon to give the defeated champions a return match, and will accommodate them here next Tuesday evening. The local team is made up of Augustus Meade, Joseph Berthiaume, manager at Dayville, Clements and Martin Slarosta of Webster, and Louis James, Boston, one of the superintendents that travels through this section.

State Deputy John Wetherbee of Abington was in attendance at this week's meeting of Killingly grange, when the first and second degrees were conferred on a class of candidates. After the work refreshments were served and there was dancing.

The first efforts by officials of the town to establish and regulate building lines finds expression in that area between Reynolds and Hawkins streets through which it is proposed to open a new street. The proposed street is just outside the limits of the borough. One section of it has been intended for a street 50 feet in width, whereas another section was to be but 40 feet in width. Through the efforts of the selectmen it is indicated that the street will be 50 feet in width through its entire length when it is opened, possibly during the present year.

In the past there has been a more or less haphazard procedure in fixing the width of streets here, though two of the newer and better residential streets, Hawkins and L'Homme are of ample width, straight and well laid out.

The new proposed street may eventually connect up with another new one running from Hawkins to L'Homme. Opening of these streets will make numbers of good house lots in a preferred section available for building.

A number of the members of Killingly and Highland granges of this town are planning to be in Warrenville Saturday to attend a special evening meeting of Quinebaug Pomona grange. A trio from the Killingly high school orchestra will appear in the lecturer's program. There is to be a supper period from 6:30 to 7:00 o'clock. The Pomona degree will be conferred in full form during the evening. Among the various features on the lecturer's program is an address on Roadside Development by Luther M. Keith, Putnam, of the state highway department.

Those who like rowing contests will have an opportunity to see the Pomfret school crews in action Saturday on the Quinebaug in Pomfret. The Columbia freshmen first crew and the Springfield high school first and second crews will compete against the Pomfret oarsmen. A week from Saturday the Exeter school crew will be at Pomfret.

The Quest of a Gypsy, the annual operetta offering at Killingly high school, was presented this evening by a cast selected from among the pupils at the school. It was enjoyed by an audience largely made up of persons interested in the activities of the school, the pupils and educational matters generally. A pretty little plot ran through tonight's offering and it has to do with a class of girls graduated from a Boston cooking school and with their slogan as "Back to Nature." Roaming about they appropriate a gypsy camp, while the gypsies are absent, and start to prepare a meal. The return of the Gypsyman starting interesting developments and Cupid gets to work. The cast included Andreas J. Haveles, Florence Loiselle, Clark B. Wood, Ruth C. Albro, Phyllis I. Kenworthy, Ruth A. King, Celia Baranski, Mildred E. Meech, Jacqueline Cardner, Gabrielle Fortier, Norman E. Winslow, Norman Lague, Harold Nicholson, Sidney P. Marland, Jr., Joseph Yolda, Jack Huntington, Loretta Nadeau, Antonia Haveles, Beatrice Haveles, Bridget Jaworski, Blanche Boulais, Marion Richardson, Isabella C. Abbott, Evelyn Friese, Jeanette Grenon and Gertrude Jaegar.

Again this morning the temperature dropped below the freezing point in Danielson, some reports having it that readings down to 26 degrees were noted.

The matter of setting clocks and watches ahead an hour will concern numbers of people Saturday evening, while others will defer making the change until Sunday. The clock in the spire of the Westfield Congregational church will continue to show standard time right through the daylight saving period. The clock outside the Danielson Trust company building will show both standard and fast time, a matter arranged by attaching an extra hand.

There have been more cases in the Killingly town court during April than in any month for a long time, the majority of them of a minor nature and the majority of them having to do with violations of either the automobile or the liquor laws.

NEWSBOYS COMPLAIN THAT THEIR PAPERS ARE STOLEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 24.—Among the complaints filed for investigation at police headquarters this morning was one from the local office of The Bulletin company asking police to cooperate in an effort to put a stop to one of the lowest known types of thievery—stealing of papers from a newsboy's bundle. Delivered in this city at an early hour mornings, The Bulletins are left at a convenient spot on Front street where the newsies call for them and start delivery to the homes in the city. For the past week The Bulletin newsies in Putnam have been put to a loss through the activities of men who have deliberately opened the bundles, taken several copies of the edition and made off without paying for them.

While the value of the stolen papers rarely surpasses an aggregate sum of 25 or 30 cents, the loss of the papers greatly handicaps the newsboys by making it impossible for them to serve their regular readers, which oftentimes has a damaging aftermath for the paper itself.

Captain A. J. Dubreuil of the police department asserted today that a police department asserted today that a police officer would be assigned to investigate the matter of stolen papers.

Radio listeners in the east side of the city were "regusted," as one member of that well-known team might have said, last evening, when an unidentified form of interference that rendered reception unbearable at the moment America's most popular entertainers took to the air. The unknown distortion affected all loudspeakers east of the railroad tracks and prevailed until about 8 o'clock when broadcast reception suddenly cleared.

Dr. James Bryden Kent returned yesterday to his home in Larchmont, N. Y., after a visit with friends in this city. During his visit here Dr. Kent was taken ill and spent more than a week at the Day Kimball hospital, where he was for many years previous to his retirement, a member of the medical staff. Upon his departure yesterday, Dr. Kent appeared rested and promised his numerous friends that he would make another visit to the scene of his former home in the future.

Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin announced today that the final vacation in the schools of the town under the eight weeks system will come during the week of April 28.

Miss Eva Jane Covell, a student at the Nissen School of Physical Education in Boston, has been appointed to work part time in the Putnam public schools.

Superintendents from this section will attend a state conference of superintendents to be held in New Britain on April 24 to 26.

Announcement that borough officials contemplate calling a special borough meeting to allow the voters to pass upon a proposal that a bond issue be authorized was favorably received by many people here today. The opportunity to retire notes now outstanding and bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum with bonds bearing interest of 4 1-4 or 4 1-2 per cent, appears to be appealing. Depending on the size of the bond issue, if authorized, it is estimated that the savings in interest charges would be between $500 and $700 a year.

WOODSTOCK STRONG FOR BETTER RURAL ROADS

PUTNAM, April 24—At a pre-organisation meeting of the Woodstock Rural Road Improvement association held in Palmer Memorial hall at Woodstock Hill last night, a small but enthusiastic group of citizens, mostly farmers, listened to an address by Louis Tolles of Southington, master of the Connecticut state grange, in which he flayed what he said was the seemingly unimportant expenditures of the state highway department in the construction of trunk line highways and the attitude of the department which seems to be "leave the farmer in the mud."

Before retiring, Mr. Tolles roused the ire of several members of the rural assemblage and in general discussion, which followed, personal opinion threw a light upon the department, charging it to be a one-man organization, operated by a man who satisfies his own convictions.

Irving A. Paine, Woodstock representative in the legislature last year and a member of house committee on roads, rivers and bridges, in a talk before the gathering said, "The state highway commission is operated by one man, John A. Macdonald, who has to take orders from somebody else when it comes to building a road. Woodstock can have more roads when it can raise the funds and prove to headquarters, that it won't rob the state highway department of its funds. I'm a farmer and I am willing to do anything to get the farmer out of the mud," Mr. Payne said. His remarks were greeted with a roar of applause.

George M. Sampson, a former Woodstock representative, who was in the legislature when the state highway department was organized in 1897, said "The farmers have a legislative majority and I see no reason why we in the rural districts, do not get dirt road improvement."

At this point, Mr. Paine interrupted and said in a reply to Sampson's inquiry, "Bills, as you know, must go before the state committee on finance before any action is taken upon them and you all know what the state finance committee means. I think that Woodstock might get many favors if it were not such a republican stronghold. It might be a good idea if our party encountered some keen competition that would ultimately make somebody sit up and take notice and recognize our pleas.

Leonard H. Healy, a strong republican, resident of Woodstock, who was chairman of the meeting, arose to the floor and said, "I don't think I'm giving away a secret when I say that Woodstock may eventually change its political sympathies."

A motion was then in order for the formation of a local rural road improvement association and upon the recommendation of a committee appointed to draft officers, Mr. Healy was elected president, Frank T. Anderson, secretary and treasurer and a committee comprised of Irving A. Paine, Albert H. Johnson and Albert J. Williams was appointed to represent Woodstock at a meeting of state delegations of rural road improvement associations to be held in the state capitol in Hartford on Friday. It was explained at this meeting that its purpose will be to express the opinion of the Connecticut farmer of the need of converting the slogan adopted "A Hard-Surface To Every Farm" from a myth to a reality.

The purpose of the local organization has the same objective as all others in the state which is to stimulate interest in the state-wide movement for the improvement of rural highways.

Austria's minister of education, Professor Dr. Innitzer, was among the guests of honor who personally attended the ceremony and the president of the republic, Wilhelm Miklas, was among those who sent congratulatory messages to the Prince of Peace church, in Vienna, when Eduard Stindl, a bootblack who has occupied his shoe-shine stand near the opera for thirty years, and his wife recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary together with their ten children.

JEWETT CITY

BOROUGH FORTUNATE WITH PRESENT CONTRACTS

Reckoning the highway construction by the state, and the building being done by local people, the figures are far in excess of those, for any former period in local history. The road contracts, including the Quinebaug viaduct, the Tadpole bridge, the Preston road and three miles of new cement highway begun last week, represent a cost of over a half million dollars. The new Jewett City bank is to cost $80,000, the David Hale Fanning annex to the Slater library, $75,000, a new house for the Fisk Rubber Co., $18,000. The alteration of the Ashland big brick mill into a modern finishing department, the new 75x100 foot Dufresne garage and other minor constructions will involve an outlay of around $25,000.

Finn's tonight, glass ware nite. Marian Davies in Not So Dumb.—adv.

Next Sunday evening's service at the Methodist Episcopal church will be an Easter story and song entitled, "Love Triumphant," a story of the first Easter adapted from Tor, "A Street Boy of Jerusalem" by Florence Morse Kingsley, with music from various composers. The reader will be Rev. J. W. Carter and the music will be given by a chorus-choir under the direction of Everett W. Thornton.

In response to a call for help from Lisbon at 5:30 a. m. Thursday, the big pumper was sent to the top of Bundy hill. A chimney fire threatened to communicate to the house.

FUNERAL

Joseph Musial

Funeral services for Joseph Musial were held at St. Mary's church Thursday morning. Rev. John J. McCabe sang the high mass of requiem. The children's choir sang the regular Gregorian mass, James Olsen being at the organ. The flowers were very beautiful. The bearers were Marein Misiaszek, Michael Solenski, Joseph Szorfave, Joseph Malek, Michael Buduch and Frank Haminski. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, Lisbon, where Father McCabe read the committal service. Hourigan Bros. were the funeral directors in charge.

The cold of the past two days forms a record in this section. Both Wednesday and Thursday before sunrise, the mercury stood from 2 to 4 degrees below freezing. A month ago the silver ran up to 80 degrees for three days in a string.

On account of the necessary absence of several of the chorus, the cantata Life Eternal will not be given next Sunday in Lisbon Community hall but will be sung the following Sunday evening, May 4th.

Lisbon Ladies' Aid society is planning a supper and sale, with an entertainment program in the evening at which Mrs. Olive Adams Potter of Norwich will sing. Mrs. Potter broadcasts from WTIC, and is to sing from that station Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

The Auction Bridge club was entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arnold Mathewson. The guests were Miss Mary Loudenslager and Miss Faith Loudenslager and Mrs. Everett Dawson. INTENSIVE CAMPAIGNS

From the orders which have been issued to the police in Waterbury to give more attention to the defective headlights, one-eyed cars and cars without lights, it is apparent that Massachusetts cities are not the only ones where the need exists for greater attention in this direction and where improvement is to be secured. Where Massachusetts police are intent upon a policy of warning drivers of cars with defective lights, the plan in Waterbury seems to be to have such drivers given a ticket and told to report in court.

While there is great need for insisting upon the observance of proper lighting of automobiles, there seems to be far more justification for the Massachusetts action than for the Waterbury plan. Massachusetts expects to get desired results through warnings with punishment if defects are not corrected, while Waterbury has adopted the other method of arresting drivers for something which the authorities have been tolerating for a long time.

It is an easy matter for a driver to get into his car on a lighted street and move off without throwing on the lights. It is thoughtless, of course, but a reminder, "Put on your lights," is enough to bring him to a realization of the situation. It is the same way with the fellow who is driving with one light. He may be entirely unconscious of the fact that one bulb has burned out. Let him be told what the situation is and be ordered to have it fixed if necessary and there is little doubt but what there will be compliance. A record of such orders with the requirement on the part of the drivers to report repairs gets results, and such is true in regard to the cars without tail-lights.

The one great trouble with all these hot-footed campaigns for enforcing lighting and other automobile requirements is that they are resorted to a few times during the year and for the remainder of the time anything goes. If drivers understood that they would be called to account for not having proper lights or sufficient lights, it is quite certain that there would be far less driving of cars with defective lighting equipment. The Massachusetts idea, if carried out each night in the year, would not only bring the desired relief but would soon mean that the police would have little to do in that direction.

THE SOUND LINES

A hearing in which much of New England is bound to be interested is that to be held before the interstate commerce commission relative to the operation of steamships by the New Haven road. This question is not a new one. It was raised when the Panama canal act was adopted under which railroads were prohibited from operating steamship lines. It was in the air for several years until near the close of the war it was decided to permit the road to continue operating the water lines. There was strong opposition to any change displayed by New England shippers and it was realized that to force the road to dispose of its water lines at that time would involve a tremendous sacrifice. In fact, it was the conclusion of the commission that the joint ownership did not interfere with competition.

For a dozen years the benefit of the rail and water service by the New Haven road has been given to this part of the country. Having reserved the right to reopen the case when normalcy prevailed, the commission has arranged to hold its hearing next month. Whether shippers in New England, the railroad, the public, want the existing relationship continued should be disclosed at that time. What the commission apparently wants to learn is whether it is justified in continuing the permission which it gave back in 1918. In arranging the hearing, notice is served to all interested that a change impends, that the smooth-working service that now exists may be disrupted, that there is a feeling that conditions are sufficiently settled to come to a final decision in the matter. Evidently it remains for New England to show whether there is sufficient reason for the commission to continue its exception to the provisions of the Panama canal act. Naturally New England ought to be interested in the retention of a well-regulated system rather than facing the possibilities of a lot of uncertain boat lines.

FRELINGHUYSEN'S CONVERSION

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen was a former United States senator from New Jersey. He rendered competent service there but when the time came for his reelection he was defeated. He sought the nomination for a second time but again failed to have enough votes and now he has announced that he will be a candidate in the primary which comes in June. Mr. Frelinghuysen is a republican and his announcement comes after it has been known for a long time that Ambassador Morrow would be a candidate for the republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey.

The big surprise in connection with the Frelinghuysen announcement is that he has declared that he will make his campaign as a wet. That wouldn't mean so much in New Jersey but for the fact that up to this time he has been an outspoken dry. He was in the senate when the Volstead act was up for action and he voted for it even as he did for the 18th amendment. It was on a dry platform that he ran for reelection, only to be defeated by Senator Edwards, a pronounced wet. It was also as a strong dry that he sought the nomination a second time but failed to land it.

Now it would seem that he had taken a lesson from the experience of others, that he had been giving much study to the existing situation, that he has put his faith in the poll of the country, that he has undergone a radical change of mind, for he has right-about faced and declared: "My judgment is that those who desire to use alcoholic beverages should be allowed to do so under conditions of national control that would eliminate the element of private profit and prevent the return of the saloon."

The former senator intends to go before the voters of New Jersey as a modificationist. This must be looked upon as an acknowledgment of what he considers the sentiment of New Jersey to be at the present time and his willingness to represent that sentiment if elected. The indications are that he has been convinced of the wisdom of such a flop by the trial that has been given the dry law. At least, he is convinced that he stands no chance of the nomination or the election if he continues to seek either on a dry platform. This would seem to be quite a lusty indication of how the tide is running in New Jersey.

OLD STORY REPEATED

When we stop to note the conditions that exist when the government goes into competition with private capital, there can be no wonder at the opposition that is raised to any further indulgence. Those who are constantly urging government ownership and operation are carried away by a theory which looks rosy enough but which has been tried and found undesirable.

All that is needed is to take a look into the manner in which we have for years been operating those ships with which the government found itself possessed after the war. It was necessary to do something with them but the importance of getting them into private hands has time and again been demonstrated.

Figures have recently been given out relative to the big Leviathan, now owned by private capital, which show that for the first three months of this year the bookings on the ship amounted to $300,000 in excess of what they did for the same period of last year, the vessel having been taken over a little more than a year ago. The vessel has been in the hands of steamship men long enough to get away from some of the handicaps that existed under government control. The indications are that there has been an improvement in the service to the extent that more are traveling on it and, in view of conditions, at a time when a slump in such traffic might have been expected.

The new owners have been working in more than one direction. With the improvement of the service, they have also been reducing the overhead, cutting out the needless employes and doing so without injury to the efficiency of operation. When it is realized that on her initial trip under the new owners there had been a reduction of nearly 100 in the ship's employes, whose pay averaged $90 monthly with meals and lodgings, it can be seen where there was both a substantial reduction in expenses and an increase in the accommodations for passengers. This might have been done by the government, but it is an old story that where the government is involved there isn't the efficiency that is to be found in private enterprise.

SPECIAL COINS

In applying his first veto, President Hoover was not face to face with any momentous question. It was a case where it would have been easier to say yes than to say no, from a politician's standpoint. But it was not from that position that he acted. He considered that the time had come when an end should be put to the practice of asking the government to mint a special coin every time a new anniversary rolls around, and he said so. The position he took fully impressed the house and the veto was quickly sustained.

The occasion for which a special 50 cent piece was sought was the celebration of the 75th anniversary of the Gadsden purchase, which involved the acquisition of a portion of Arizona and New Mexico from Mexico, the treaty having been arranged by Ambassador James Gadsden.

The point raised by the president is that special coins have been authorized so often that in the past ten years there have been 15 instances, or one about every eight months, and it is getting so that it doesn't have to be very much of a celebration to resort to such government assistance in raising funds. The idea has been overworked, as the president says, so much so that there can be little worth to it, while it can be appreciated that such issues tend to clutter up our system of coinage, open the door to counterfeiters and make the practice objectionable in other ways.

This action marks a change in the attitude toward such a plan. It probably means that it will be considered favorably in the future only for outstanding anniversaries. Where to draw the line may be easier thought than actually accomplished, but the interruption of the method that has been followed in the past will undoubtedly get general approval.

MODERNESQUE

Rosalie, in vivid green lounging pyjamas, leaned back against the vivid blue cushions of her modern divan, lifted a long cigarette holder to her lips and blew a puff of smoke at the young man who sat beside her. The young man, in conventional blue serge, with a very mild tie, seemed much out of place in this atmosphere. He glumly looked around.

Blue walls, green hangings, more blue, still more green thrust themselves upon him. The only relief, if it could be called that, was a huge mirror on one side of the room, which only reflected more blue and green. The young man sighed.

"Oh, Eddie, don't be such a stick. Every one else is having a good time. Why can't you? Don't you adore my new studio-apartment?"

"It hurts my eyes."

"Eddie!"

"Rosalie, when we have our home—"

"Don't talk to me. If you can't appreciate modern art. . . . Now, this room expresses Albert (she pronounced it Alberr) Du Quesne's impressions of spring."

"Br-r-r—," blatted the blue and green cradle telephone in Rosalie's apartment. Br-r-r—"

"Hell," said Rosalie.

"Eddie"—said a voice.

"Oh!"

"Listen, honey! I've got a surprise for you. Since you're determined to be modernesque I've decided to follow suit. I'm giving a party Saturday night to show off my modern studio-apartment."

"Hi, there, Rosalie! Welcome to our party!" shrieked a rather wild-looking young man, clad in bright red pyjamas.

This couldn't be Eddie!

"What's the matter, Rosie? Don't you know me? Come, take a look around the studio."

And Rosalie looked—

Walls, ceiling, floor, furniture—all were streaked and striped a brilliant red and orange. Huge bars of light, blinding white, hung from the ceiling. Strange pictures of leaning skyscrapers and distorted forms adorned the walls, ultramodern in their effect. And on one side of the room glared a mirror, reflecting the reds and oranges. Some of Eddie's guests had also carried out the color scheme, dressed in reds and oranges. One girl had on a dress of metallic cloth which sparkled and glittered. Rosalie sat down on a rather uncomfortable futuristic stool and covered her eyes for a moment. She seemed to be getting a headache.

"Nonsense, Rosalie. I thought you understood modern art. Now, these colors represent my impression of a flame—red and orange. DuQuesne himself has told me that the effect is perfect."

He paused—then, picking up a bright red candlestick and gesturing with it, said:

"When we get married, Rosalie, we might as well live here—" The walls of the room seemed to be revolving. Rosalie felt sick.

A few minutes later a young man and a girl were sitting on the commonplace back steps of an apartment house. The young man was trying to keep from smiling as he wiped the tears from the girl's eyes, but he listened quite attentively as she said:

"—And I think we'd better go window shopping tomorrow, Eddie, for some ruffled curtains and some old-fashioned furniture."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 24— What sort of a handle for quick reference can be attached to the tentative London three-power naval pact?

It was a simple matter with the treaty's Washington progenitor. The phrase "5-5-3" aptly hit off the vital elements of the original naval limitations treaty. It expressed thus British-American naval parity and Japanese ratio status to the other two powers.

Difference

It still expresses the battleship ratios, but with different factors involved. The ultimate number of ships, 15 each for Great Britain and the United States and nine for Japan, is the same.

There will be a wide difference, however, between the British and American fleets as the London project would stabilize them for at least six years, and as they would have been in 1942 under the Washington treaty.

The Washington plan called for replacement of all existing battleships by 1942. All the big fellows would have been post-Jutland built, all armed with 16-inch rifles and American and British tonnage would have been the same.

Under the London agreements, the 5-5-3 ratio is to be obtained earlier but only as to number of battleships. There will remain a British preponderance of tonnage of around 20,000 tons, apparently.

The British will have also all 15-inch and 16-inch gun ships while the United States will have one 12-inch gunner, 11 carrying 14-inch batteries and three armed with 16-inch guns.

Gunnery

Assuming that battleships to be scrapped are those which would have been first scrapped under the Washington treaty, there will remain in the British navy 100 15-inch guns and 18 16-inchers. The American battleship fleet will have 12 12-inch, 124 14-inch and 24 16-inch.

The American ships would appear to be out gunned. It so happens, however, that when the navy adopted the 14-inch gun Rear Admiral Joe Strauss was chief of ordinance. He urged 50 caliber weapons. That means that all the American 14-inchers in length, which adds to their range. Most of the British 15-inch weapons are 45 caliber. So there may be much more of a parity between British 15-inch and American 14-inch than the size indicates.

In any event, it is evident that the London idea of what constitutes parity is more of a psychological matter than is the case with the Washington plan. It disregards technicalities entirely on the notion that the two fleets are not going to fight each other anyhow.

YOUR HEALTH

Skin Cancer and Its Prevention

By Everett S. Lain, M. D., Oklahoma City.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

According to public health statistics, skin cancers cause the death of nearly 400 persons in the United States annually; yet physicians know that skin cancer is curable. A recent bulletin issued by the Massachusetts department of public health asserts that, "Ignorance is the chief reason why people die of cancer of the skin. From the point of view of curative treatment, practically 100 per cent of cancers are curable if seen early and treated by a competent doctor. The few cases which may not respond to efficient treatment are so small a number as to be almost negligible."

Skin cancer, like cancer in other organs of the body, is an unnatural and lawless growth of original body cells. Such a growth is, at first, entirely localized, generally appearing upon parts of the body which are plainly visible to the victim or to his family physician. This wild growth frequently begins in such a common lesion as mole, wart, a large blackhead or an ordinary birthmark which has been scratched, bruised or otherwise irritated. Cancer also sometimes begins in an old scar left by the healing of a previous wound or burn from any cause.

It has been repeatedly asserted by experienced experts that 80 per cent or 90 per cent of all such ulcers or sores which do not heal within five or six weeks under ordinary home treatment or by remedies prescribed by the family physician, can correctly be classified as tuberculosis, syphilis or cancer. With this suggestion in mind, the patient himself should be able to reason his need for any examination and correct diagnosis by a competent specialist.

Perhaps one of the most common of all skin cancers has its beginning upon the faces and backs of hands of people who have a tender, red skin with a predisposition of dry, scaly or warty-like patches. Whenever such growths begin to thicken, because tender or look irritated, a qualified physician should be consulted at once. One or mor X-ray or radium treatments, given by a physician specially trained in the use of such agents, is usually sufficient to cure, even after cancer has begun. mole is the most dangerous—and, after injury, the most rapidly growing —of all varieties and should never be treated by other than an experienced surgeon or specialist. Constantly sunburned or cracked lips, or grayish-white patches which form on the lips or in the mouth where a pipe, cigar or cigarette has been carried, should arouse suspicion for such are frequently the forerunners of cancer. A smoker should, at intervals, shift his pipe or cigarette from one side to the other before a gray patch or sore has formed.

The dark-brown or blueberry colored

On account of the numerous lymph and blood vessels supplying the lower lips and mouth, cancer spreads rapidly from such locations and must be skillfully treated without delay. The younger the person the more quickly it spreads. If all persons who have reached mid-life would have a careful, periodic examination of the skin of their entire body, as well as other vital organs, no doubt many precancerous lesions and early cancers might be discovered and completely cured by means of surgery, electric cautery, X-ray or radium.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Baby Disappears

Where careless joyousness you find,
Is sorrow never far behind
—Old Mother Nature.

Mrs. Quack, the Mallard Duck, had a family of ten of the prettiest little babies that ever lived. Anyway, that is what Mrs. Mallard thought. And they were as lively as they were pretty. It was quite a task for a lone mother to find food enough for so many babies. You see, Mr. Quack was still down at the Big River. He was not at all concerned about this big family. He left the care entirely to Mrs. Quack.

Now, Mrs. Quack always keep a watchful eye out for enemies, but now she was more watchful then ever. You see, there were enemies to watch out for for those precious babies that she didn't have to watch out for for herself. There were certain ones who could not possibly kill a fullgrown duck and wouldn't think of trying it, but who could kill a baby duckling and would be only too glad for such a dinner.

Of course, Mrs. Quack taught the ducklings to watch out for the members of the Hawk family and to always be ready to dive into hiding at the appearance of a moving shadow. She taught them that Reddy Fox and Old Man Coyote and Billy Mink and Shadow the Weasel and Bobby Coon and Unc' Billy Possum would be only too glad for a nice little duck whenever they could get it. Some of these she could only tell the babies about, because they didn't come around where she could point them out. One day, however, they saw Reddy Fox, and another day they saw Billy Mink. So they knew that while they were little the wise thing for them to do was to be afraid of any bigger people whom they saw, whether they wore feathers or fur.

Then one day as they were following their mother across the Smiling Pool she stopped very suddenly and looked very hard over toward the shore. The babies all stopped and looked very hard over toward the shore. But, look as they would, all they could see was what looked like the end of a black stick in the water.

"Do you see that over there?" Mrs. Quack asked.

The babies acknowledged that they did. "It's just a stick, isn't it?" asked one.

"No," replied Mrs. Quack, "it isn't just a stick. It is the head of a dreadful fellow. His name is Snapper the Turtle and there is nothing he would like better for dinner than a duckling just about your size. He is one of the enemies you will have to keep a sharp watch out for. Your other enemies are mostly on the land or in the air. Snapper the Turtle is in the water. He spends a great deal of his time in the mud at the bottom. When a careless young duckling comes swimming along above him he swims up from the bottom and drags that little duckling down. Watch out for Snapper the Turtle. Never be so busy eating or playing that you forget to be on the watch for danger."

Mrs. Quack led her little flock to the other side of the Smiling Pool. She wanted to be as far away as possible from Snapper the Turtle. Presently he disappeared and they saw him no more that day. It was the next day that one of the most venturesome of the ducklings ventured out from among the rushes onto the Smiling Pool alone. At the time the others were all very busy feeding. This little duckling felt very important out there by himself. Near at hand was what looked like the end of a black stick. The little duckling hardly noticed it. Presently it disappeared. A moment later the little duckling disappeared. And to this day Mrs. Quack doesn't know what became of that little duckling. If you should ask Snapper the Turtle he might tell you.

Stories That Recall Others

For Years and Years

A lad answered the front door for his mother. An anxious agent said: "Sonny, is your mother engaged?"

"Engaged? Why, mister, she's been married for years and years," said the youth.

Wasted Approval

Every seat in the street car was taken and four-year-old Billy sat silently by his mother watching all the other passengers with great interest. A woman with a large bundle in her arms got on the car and Billy at once stood up to give her his seat.

"Thank you very much," she said, taking the seat. "You are a very nice little boy."

Animal Crackers

Little Marie, age five, had just completed a few lessons in phonetics. Having received a box of animal crackers with pictures of different animals and their names printed on it, she began industriously to sound out the names, telling her aunt what they were.

"Here is a bear and a deer, and a hip-po-pot-a-mus," said little Marie, "and oh, auntie, look at this funny looking Hen-ry-ro-cus!"

Time's swiftest flight is caused by the sight of a promissory note.

Restless Children

Children will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always one sure way to comfort a restless, fretful child. Castoria! Harmless as the recipe on the wrapper; mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than some powerful medicine that is meant for the stronger systems of adults.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is any need. In cases of colic, diarrhea, or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. But it has everyday uses all mothers should understand. A coated tongue calls for a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed to set everything to rights. Genuine Castoria has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper. Doctors prescribe it.

The Lazy Day

Well, this has been a splendid and a very perfect day;
I took my work and worries and I threw them all away—
I took the work I ought to do and looked it in the eye
And said: "You get a holiday, old task of mine, goodby.
I hope you have a pleasant time wherever you may roam.
Now, don't get lost, but just the same you needn't hurry home."

My work stood begging at my side, my elbow Duty nudged,
But with a stern and haughty heart I never even budged.
I stretched myself upon my back with-in the hammock here
And swung and swung and let my soul get babbling full of cheer.
My work went galley-west, I guess—I know it isn't done—
But, friend, to have a Lazy Day is certainly some fun.

I gave them all to understand they might as well take wings.
I'd worried over them in a most faithful, earnest way,
But worry hasn't any place in any lazy day.
Some little worries fretted up and sighed: "What can you do?"
I blew them all to smithereens with one intense "Pooh! Pooh!"

So here I am, with work undone, unworried worries too,
And still the grass is nice and green, the sky is nice and blue,
The world is rolling right along, no doubt the stars will gleam—
I guess I'll linger here a while and muse and doze and dream.
My friend, when Work is fighting you and Worry wants to stay,
Just throw the whole thing to one side and have a Lazy Day.

A History Of Connecticut Industry

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Palmer Brothers Company, New London.

At the close of the Civil war, two northern soldiers found themselves in Washington, D. C. Elisha Palmer, the older of the two, had spent 18 months of the war as an inmate of Libby prison and, as a consequence, had about $1500 in back pay due him from the government. With this amount as capital, Elisha and his brother Edward A. Palmer started a small commission business there, as Palmer Brothers, dealing in cotton batting, twine and allied lines, later moving the business to Montville. The Palmer Brothers must have thrived for in their third year in business they lost twice as much in one bad debt.

A part of the cotton batting which they sold was made by their father, Elisha H. Palmer, in his little plant in Montville, where the family had first set up a mill in 1792.

While in Chicago in 1872, Frank Palmer, a younger brother who had since come into the business, was asked by a customer why the Palmer Brothers did not supply him with comfortables. Frank, with Yankee ingenuity said, "Sir, will you give me an order?" On the way home Frank bought up cloth enough to cover the order.

When he arrived at Palmertown, he told his sister to see how many quilts she could make in a day. She made four. On the basis of four a day, the quilts were apportioned out to the women of the town. When finished, the women brought them back and received 25 cents a piece for the work.

From this modest beginning the business, now a corporation, capitalized at $2,500,000, makes 125,000 dozen comfortables in a year. It is the largest in this country and is one of the largest in the world. There are factories at New London, Montville and Fitchville.

The company uses 10,000 bales of cotton; 5,000 bags of wool; 50,000 pounds of down; 2200 bales of shoddy materials yearly; 12,500,000 yards of cloth; owns its own print works and prints in addition to its own requirements, about 12,500,000 yards for other firms.

The present officers are: George S. Palmer, chairman of the board of directors; Percy S. Palmer, president; J. Reid Johnson, treasurer and secretary; Albert C. Woodruff, assistant treasurer.

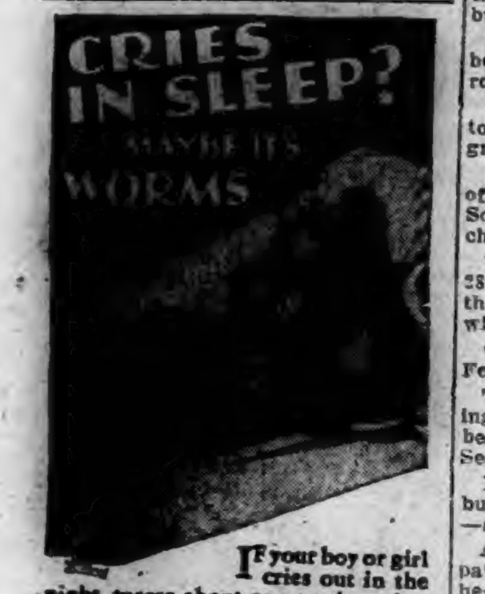
Gas On Stomach Is Dangerous

TELLS HOW TO STOP IT

Gas, Pain, Bloating and a feeling of fullness after eating are almost certain evidence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach.

Too much acid irritates the delicate stomach lining, frequently causing chronic Gastritis and dangerous Ulcers. Food ferments and sours, forming a gas that distends the stomach and often seriously affects the Heart.

It is genuine folly to neglect such a condition or to treat with artificial digestive aids that cannot neutralize the stomach acid. A better way is to get from any reliable drug store some Bisurated Magnesia (powder or tablets) and take a little in water after each meal. Bisurated Magnesia will stop the worst gas attack quickly and without embarrassment. Taken right after eating, it prevents formation of gas and acids so there is no sourness, bloating or pain. Pleasant and perfectly harmless to use—Bisurated Magnesia does give wonderful relief in nine out of ten cases. Ask your Doctor or Druggist. Try it today.



If your boy or girl cries out in the night, tosses about constantly or has frightened dreams—beware of worms. They are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: grinding of teeth, picking the nose, crossness, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

"TACKS" LATIMER HERO IN OHIO PRISON FIRE

"Tacks" Latimer, a former major league baseball player, and at one time a member of the Norwich team in the old Connecticut league, played a dramatic part in the fire which took the lives of more than 250 prisoners in the Ohio state penitentiary in Columbus, Monday night.

Latimer had already acted heroically in one prison break and was one of the foremost trusties in the penitentiary, though serving a life sentence for murder. Monday he was given a shotgun as soon as the alarm became general and stood guard at the outer door throughout the night. A few years ago when thirteen prisoners shot their way to freedom from the institution, Latimer, who was on duty in the office, seized a revolver and engaged in a duel with them.

By some irony of chance, all the prisoners awaiting execution in the death row, according to a dispatch, escaped the fire. When the blaze menaced their cells, they were transferred to the solitary confinement section.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMEN'S ANNUAL COUNCIL MEETING

Miss Sylvina C. Norton, vice-president of the council, will report the activities of the year and at the morning session there will be an address by Professor Robert Senica Smith of Yale university on the subject, "Where Shall We Get Our Missionaries?" and the service of worship will be led by Dr. John Milton Phillips, minister of the First Church of Christ, Hartford. There will be three addresses in the afternoon. Rev. Frank Edmons Henry will speak on "In the Service of Christ in U. S. A."; Miss Grace E. McConnaughey of Fenchow, Shansi, China, "In the Wilderness, a Fir Tree," and Rev. Charles C. Merrill, secretary of the commission on missions will speak on the subject, "Seeing Our Task Steadily and Seeing It Whole." Rev. Warren S. Archibald, minister of the Second church, will close the meeting.

Rev. Frank Edmons Henry was for several years vice-president of the Billings Polytechnic institute, Billings, Montana. Mr. Henry has made numerous trips to New England, speaking on home mission work in Montana. Mr. Henry will speak in the Second church, Tuesday, April 29.

"Miss Sweet" is the name which the Chinese have given Miss Grace E. McConnaughey, who went to Fenchow, Shansi, China, in 1910, where she found that instead of a situation such as exists in American churches, where women church members frequently outnumber the men, two to one, the reverse holds true. There the proportion of women to men is often much less than one in three. Missionaries often find that the children of Christian fathers are growing up in ignorance of Christianity and their father suppressed into heathenism because of the wife and mother.

LAFAYETTE MAIN BATTLES GAME WARDEN'S CHARGE IN LEDYARD COURT

Following an interesting two-hour session of the Ledyard town court at Gales Ferry Thursday evening with Justice of the Peace Walter M. Buckingham presiding Lafayette F. Main, North Stonington farmer, charged with illegal setting of traps, was bound over to a higher court under bonds of $250 upon motion of Billings F. S. Crandall, grand juror. This action was taken following a lengthy discussion pro and con on a technical point in Section 24, fish and game laws, on "use of traps regulated." The entire proceedings had many points of humor, supplied in the most part by the defendant who was acting as his own attorney.

Setting the Stage

Before the warrant was read, charging Mr. Main with the violation, the defendant inquired if there were any objections to his using a table which stood in the club room, where the session was held. As there was none, Mr. Main placed the table in a convenient position and procuring a voluminous satchel, took from it a number of statute books, a large dictionary and other books, all of which were marked with slips of paper, to which he was later to refer. He also had in his traveling bag several other articles that played a big part in the evening's entertainment, as it turned out to be.

With the scene set to his liking, Mr. Main was ready to hear the charge. It was read. It was evidently not clear to the defendant, as he asked to have it read a second time, which was done and he pleaded not guilty.

Woodchuck and Traps

The first witness to appear for the state was Deputy Game Warden George Bliven, who, with Deputy Warden Lillibridge, arrested Mr. Main in North Stonington on the afternoon of April 1, when he had in his possession a bag containing a woodchuck, which they took; also a hammer and seven steel traps which they later picked up. Mr. Bliven testified that four traps were set in paths, which he claimed was dangerous to domestic animals and against the law, and three others in the vicinity of a sheep carcass on Mr. Main's property. He told of several visits to the farm and on two different occasions finding a quail and woodchuck in the traps, the latter remaining in the trap for two days. He claimed that a number of the traps were set 650 feet from the nearest building and others 225 feet from cultivated land, which he said was not in accord with the law.

The witness was then cross-examined by Mr. Main, who asked him many questions about his visits to the traps, where the traps were located, what was found in them and how long he had been in the service.

"Do you know who owns this land?" asked Mr. Main.

"Lafayette Main," said the deputy.

"How do you know?"

"I have been told so and I noticed your name on the posters, warning people to keep out, and I supposed it was your land."

"You supposed it was my land. In this court you are under oath to tell what you know and not what you suppose. Did you see me put up those warning signs?"

"No, I didn't."

Accuses Wardens of Trespass

Mr. Main then explained that the wardens had trespassed on his land, as he had not given them permission to go there, and attempted to prove his contention by reading from the statutes.

Mr. Bliven said that he had been sent there by his superior officers.

"Would you go to my hen house and take chickens, if they told you to?" asked Mr. Main.

There was no reply.

Woodchuck Too Ripe

Mr. Main asked if he had brought along the woodchuck and the answer was that it was "too ripe."

"Oh, you didn't keep it in cold storage, then," said Mr. Main.

Deputy Lillibridge was called upon as the next state witness, and told of finding the woodchuck alive in the trap on two successive days. "Are you sure it was the same woodchuck that I had in the bag?" asked Mr. Main. The deputy was of the opinion that it was. The defendant exhibited a dead woodchuck that he had with him and was about to explain why it was impossible to tell on which leg the animal was caught. He had to stop his explanation, as the grand juror objected to this line, as he thought it had no connection with the case.

The defendant asked the deputy if names were found on all the traps.

"I think so."

"You think so."

"I know there were names on several of them."

"Did you see me set any of the traps?"

"No, I didn't."

"Did you see me tend them."

"No, but I saw you come along the path where the traps were set?"

"Did you see me take the woodchuck out of the trap?"

"No, but you had a woodchuck in the bag."

"How did you know I took it out of the trap?"

"Did you see anybody else there?" continued Mr. Main.

"No."

Mr. Main went on to ask the deputy how many traps were found by them, but Grand Juror Crandall objected to this questioning, as it was a repetition of testimony given by Deputy Bliven.

A witness put on the stand by Mr. Main provided a laugh for the audience when he told about seeing two men in a Ford car, backing out of a side road near Mr. Main's farm.

Main Testifies

Mr. Main then went on the stand himself and explained why he was within his rights in setting traps in paths, contending that the latter part of Section 21 had to do especially with the farmers. He referred to the dictionary in trying to make his point clear. According to him, he had a right to trap in any place on his land within a radius of 100 yards from a building of another.

Summons Dated 1920

He went on to tell of a summons he had received from Mr. Bliven and written by Head Warden Watson of New London county. The subpoena was read and it was disclosed that it had been dated April 24, 1920, instead of April 24, 1930. "That's the kind of a man they have for head game warden," declared Mr. Main with a note of exultation in his voice.

Mr. Main then read a letter from State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown, whom he claimed was the best in the state. According to the contention of Mr. Brown, the defendant did not violate the law in setting the traps, as he was alleged to have.

Grand Juror Crandall moved that the case be bound over to the higher court, but no action was taken and the defendant was again heard from.

Wanted Writ Against Game Wardens

Mr. Main wanted a writ drawn up by the grand juror charging the two game wardens with trespassing on his land.

Reference again was made to the letter from Attorney Brown. The grand juror wanted to see it. Mr. Main refused, saying, "I paid good money to get this letter, and if you want a letter from a lawyer why don't the state pay for it? But I will let the justice read it." Mr. Main then presented it to Justice Buckingham.

The defendant made the contention that the game wardens didn't have any more right to trespass on his land than they did to take chickens from his coops. He also charged the game wardens with being cruel to animals in allowing the live woodchuck to remain in the trap for two days.

Mr. Main again insisted that the grand juror make out a warrant charging them on these two counts. The grand juror did not accede to his demand.

Just before court adjourned, Mr. Main asked the two deputy wardens where they stayed on the farm while endeavoring to apprehend the persons responsible for the illegal setting of traps. It was found that they had waited in an old cellar hole.

Bottle in Cellar

"Were there any indications that anyone had been there before you?" asked Mr. Main.

"No."

"Did you leave anything there?"

"No, I don't believe we did."

With a smile on his face Mr. Main dug down into his satchel and exhibited a bottle partly filled with a whitish liquid. "Will you tell me what this is," asked Mr. Main.

The wardens smelled of the bottle and remarked that it had a strong smell. It was then passed to the grand juror and justice.

Mr. Main wanted the justice's opinion on the contents of the bottle, as he said "he was no judge of liquor."

"I would say that it was intoxicating liquor," said the justice.

Pestered By Game Wardens

A few minutes before Mr. Main was bound over he charged that the "whole bunch" of game wardens had been pestering him for ten years and had stolen property from him valued at over $300. He claimed that Warden Watson had "stolen hundreds of traps from him and had not returned them after cases in which he was involved had been finished."

Justice Buckingham informed Mr. Main that he was bound over to a higher court under bonds of $250 and asked him if it was alright. "You can make the bond $2,500 if you want to," said Mr. Main. Court then adjourned.

BURNED FREIGHTER THAMES FORMERLY GLOUCESTER BOAT

The freighter Thames, reported burned to the waters edge on Long Island sound Thursday night, is one of the two boats of the Thames River line of this city, which operates the Carisco between here and New York and uses the Thames between New York and Bridgeport.

The burned freighter has been owned by the Thames River line since December, 1927, and was formerly the famous old steamer City of Gloucester which put in 44 years of service between Boston and Gloucester with such regularity as to win the nickname Old Reliable, for it was said coastwise dwellers used to set their clocks by her.

When the Thames line bought the boat, she was reconditioned, re-named and put on the line betwen this city and New York while the Carisco was being overhauled in the spring of 1928. Later she was put on the Bridgeport branch line.

Officials here were not able Thursday night to give any estimate as to her tonnage or value, but said they believed there were no Norwich men in the crew of the boat.

$68,000 YEARLY WILL BUILD AND MAINTAIN JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOLS

Less than a tax of one and a half mills, or $68,200 annually, will provide for the entire cost of construction and maintenance of the two junior high schools, advocated by the town school board, Supt. Edward J. Graham made this statement Thursday evening at a public meeting held at the Broadway school building for the people of the Central school district at which time the school board outlined the necessity and benefits of the junior high school. It was one of several district meetings arranged by the town school board for the purpose of explaining the junior high school idea.

The attendance was not as large as expected but the junior high school plan was enthusiastically received by those present.

Walter F. Lester, president of the school board, called the meeting to order and, after explaining the reason for the holding of the district meetings, turned the meeting over to Superintendent Graham. The superintendent told of the crowded conditions in the grammar schools and at the Norwich Free Academy and said that something will have to be done whether the junior high schools are voted for or not. Secondary schools all over the country are becoming overcrowded, he said. Mr. Graham said that the school board feels that the junior high school idea is better than spending money for additions to the present old buildings.

Members of the school board, Mrs. A. H. Chase, Edward G. McKay, and Robert McNeely spoke of the junior high plan and expressed the hope that when the matter comes before a town meeting it will be favorably acted upon.

Superintendent Graham stated that the meeting was open for questions. One woman present asked if the town was going to use the Broadway school building until it falls down. Another spectator asked how many rooms there would be in the new junior high school buildings. Mr. Graham said there would be 26 rooms in each building, a total of 52 rooms. Another spectator referred to the Broadway and Greeneville school buildings as fire traps.

Supt. Graham said that the junior high school idea is the greatest step Norwich has undertaken, in education, in the last 20 years. Mr. McKay suggested that better schools would attract more people to Norwich.

It developed during the meeting that provision would be made for out of town pupils at the junior high schools at a cost of $150 per pupil per year. The junior high schools would take care of the first year pupils at the Norwich Free Academy, in addition to the 7th and 8th grades at the grammar schools. The out of town pupils coming to Norwich to attend the Norwich Free Academy, would be taken care of at the junior high schools at the tuition cost mentioned.

As to the cost of the junior high schools, Supt. Graham said the construction cost would be $800,000. Bonds could be issued at four and one quarter per cent, which would mean $34,000 interest annually. Each year $20,000 could be paid off on the bonds. The present seventh and eighth grade teachers would be transferred to the junior high schools. There would be needed eight additional teachers, and their salaries would approximately $15,000. Janitor service, heat, light and water would cost another $10,000 a year. For possible increase in teachers' salaries, $10,000 should be provided. All teachers in the 9th grade, which corresponds to the first year in the Norwich Free Academy, would have to be college graduates. The total operating cost per year would be $89,000.

At the present time the town of Norwich pays $31,000 for tuition of Norwich students at the Norwich Free Academy. Out of town students pay to the Academy $150 a year each.

The town would have left $20,800 towards the operating expenses of the junior high schools and this amount subtracted from the total cost of $89,000 a year, would leave the actual cost to the town at $68,200 a year. A mill and a half town tax amounts to approximately $72,000. The meeting adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock.

BEFORE COMMISSIONER HERE IN FEDERAL LIQUOR CASE

John T. Cudworth of Southbridge Mass., waived examination when he was presented here Thursday afternoon before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson on the charge of transporting and possessing liquor. The commissioner bound him over to the federal court and Cudworth furnished bonds of $500.

Arrested In Putnam

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 24.— Informed by federal prohibition agents that his automobile, which had been confiscated by the enforcement authorities some weeks ago after his arrest on a liquor violation charge would be returned to him if he would meet Stanton L. Briggs, a Willimantic government enforcement officer, at the railroad station here this morning at 9 o'clock, John T. Cudworth of Marcy street, Southbridge, appeared as instructed this morning only to fall into the toils of the law.

Instead of receiving his automobile which he had used to transport liquor, the youth was informed by the agents that he was under arrest on a federal violation charge. Cudworth was identified and taken into custody by Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil and after questioning was turned over to the federal officer and taken to Norwich for arraignment before the United States commissioner there.

Cudworth was cleared of charges pertaining to violation of the federal currency laws which were pressed against him following his arrest in this city several days ago. Cudworth was operator of the car in which Socrates George, Southbridge liquor racketeer, was transporting 60 gallons of alcohol, when stopped by Putnam police at the Dam Tavern corner on the Providence road. George and Cudworth, together with Miss Christine Ryan, 26, of Webster, were taken back to Providence on a charge of having possessed and passed counterfeit notes. After a hearing, this charge was nolled against him. Returning to Southbridgee last week following the federal hearing, he applied to the Hartford bureau of the federal prohibition enforcement department for the return of his automobile. Cudworth was in company with two women, who were placed aboard a Southbridge bus, after he was ordered under arrest.

SOMERS SUIT BEGUN IN SUPERIOR COURT

John J. Somers of Bridgeport was on the stand most of the day Thursday in the superior court at New London testifying before Judge Allyn L. Brown in a suit against his brother, William A. Somers of this city.

The Bridgeport man is suing for an accounting from his brother in connection with the property at 212-216 Main street. Prior to 1909 the brothers were in partnership in Norwich and then the plaintiff sold his interest in the business to the defendant. Complications arose over a lease which the brothers obtained while in partnership and further complications arose over the power of attorney alleged to have been given the defendant by the plaintiff.

Randolph W. Whaples, of Norwich, county club agent of the Connecticut Farm bureau, gave an interesting talk on 4-H club work before 60 members of Konomoc grange at a meeting in Firemen's hall, Jordan Village, this week.

Queen bees ordinarily spend their lives as prisoners of the hive, but more than 100 queens recently "flew" from Florida to California in a plane.

Three cities are competing to become the first in Italy with 1,000,000 inhabitants. Rome, Naples and Milan are trying. All now have more than 900,000.

Paul L. Carpenter, a member of the staff of the Aero Corporation of California, has owned three airplanes and never has had an automobile. He is a licensed transport pilot, but has not a California driver's license.

The old donkey which once carried Georges Clemenceau has died, just a few weeks after its famous master. This donkey, which was more than thirty years old, formerly pulled the small cart which carried the Tiger about the small town of Bernouville, where he was a councillor.

Told she had inherited $200,000 from an uncle, Mrs. Augusta Westermann, at Memphis, Tenn., said: "I guess I'll just keep it. I haven't much time to think about it. My washing was on the line when I heard about it and I have to get the clothes ironed. My three grandchildren certainly get a lot of clothes dirty."

If you address a letter to some one in Constantinople you will get it back from the postoffice with an inscription asserting there's no such city. It is now Istambul. Turkey refuses to accept mail not addressed properly and so this government is stopping it on this side of the Atlantic. Similarly, Gallipoli is now Gelibolu; Angora is now Anakra, and scores of other less-known cities have new names.

Perfume worn in the buttonhole or on a band strapped around the wrist like a wrist watch is a part of the dress of an ultrasmart Parisian today. The sale of perfumes for men is as great in Paris as the demand for liquid scents for women. The only difference is that men take their perfumes in solid form. It comes in lozenges which are put in the breast pocket or in flower wax designs which are worn in the buttonhole. The wrist watch is a neat idea, for the perfume is supplied in little cakes which last a day. Each morning a new cake is fitted into the gold receptacle on the black wristband.

Take a Good Critical Look at Yourself

Too many tired out, depressed, discouraged men and women, looking older than their years, needlessly endure misery and discomfort due to neglected kidney and bladder irregularities, sleep-disturbing night calls, backache and dull headaches, when just 2 Foley Pills diuretic taken at intervals as directed would regulate urinary processes and clear the system of those lurking poisons that cause the distressing aches. SAVE the clothes—save yourself—with Rinso! Its live, active suds loosen dirt. Clothes actually soak whiter than they can be scrubbed.

The makers of 38 famous washing machines recommend Rinso for safety and for whiter washes. Get the BIG household package. It's thrifty to use Rinso for dishes and all cleaning—a little gives such a lot of thick, creamy suds.

MACK CLAIMS HE WILL NEVER BREAK UP TEAM AS HE DID BACK IN 1915

By EDWARD J. NEIL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, April 24—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the world today, may become the greatest team in baseball history but Connie Mack is certain he will never have to break up another all-conquering combination as he did back in 1915.

The ageless leader of the new wonder team of baseball, healthier at 67 than he has been for several years, revelled in the opportunity today to talk of the old days and the new as well. Like a silver headed patriarch, the tall kindly leader gathered the young disciples of the press around him. It was cold outside and for the second straight day there was no ball game with the Yankees.

"Times have changed entirely in baseball," he said among a multitude of other things, "since the breaking up of the old Athletics. There may be some misconception of the facts, too.

"I broke up what they called the $100,000 infield, McInnis, Barry, Collins, and Baker, because I couldn't afford to keep them any longer. The Federal league, just under way, was offering them three times what I could pay to jump from organized baseball. Philadelphia was a 25 cent baseball town then—that's what admissions cost—and the fans weren't turning out. So I traded my champions after they lost the world title to the Boston Brves because they were due to leave me anyway. They were getting no younger.

"That will never hapen again in baseball. No one will ever have to break up another club because it gets too powerful and overshadows the rest of the clubs in baseball. Admissions have been increased to $1 in Philadelphia and everywhere else. Now you can't win too many games to suit the fans.

"It's better, of course, for the leagues as a whole if the pennant races are close. But there has been a change in home-town sentiment since the old days. Now the more games you win the more fans turn out. They'd like you to win them all."

The patriarch of baseball, soft spoken and razor-keen despite his years, has no illusions as to the problems that face him in winning another American league pennant and another world series.

"The race will be very tight right to the last," he said. "The dark horses in our league are the White Sox and Washington, both greatly strengthened clubs and slightly under-rated. Cleveland and St. Louis are known to be strong and the Boston Red Sox are much better off than last year. The Sox have some fine young pitchers and lots of fighting spirit.

"While it's still too early to judge the league as a whole, the poor start of the Yankees can be thrown out of consideration. The Yanks haven't played bad ball and a couple of good breaks would have won them ball games. You can't keep the Yankees down over the season. They're too powerful.

"One of my own chief problems is to ward off over-confidence. We have all of last year's strength plus several fine youngsters but over-confidence and injuries can be more damaging than lack of confidence."

Connie Mack—Mr. Mack to all his ball players—smiled a bit sadly as he talked of his youngsters.

"It's surprising enough to get one good young pitcher but I have suddenly acquired three in Glenn Liebhart, Al Mahon and Le Roy Mahaffey. Eric McNair will develop into a great shortstop and Dib Williams will be a star second baseman. Young Keelsey is a good infielder."

Mr. Mack lapsed into the New England vernacular he has almost forgotten as he thought of the plethora of riches that has come to him since the ten lean years that followed 1915, when he needed talent most.

"It's the truth," he said, "them as has, gits."

WEISGRABER MAY PITCH SAT.; NEW BAND TO PLAY AGAIN

It will be Capt. Fred Hewitt of Chapman Tech against somebody for the Academy on the pitching points in tomorrow's Academy-Tech baseball battle at the campus. That somebody will most likely be Boots Greene but it also may be Butsy Weisgraber.

A slight shift in Coach Brigham's plans of using Weisgraber, the mainstay of last year's staff in this game as his first real start of the year came when Butsy turned his ankle in the Stonington game Wednesday in scoring one of the 22 runs by which the Wildcats slaughtered the downstaters. Butsy had been groomed for Tech but now it is doubtful if his ankle will be in shape for this important game. Butsy was around with a cane Thursday, reporting the leg as pretty sore.

Coach Brigham will shove Greene into the gap in case Butsy cannot answer the call, however, and local fans can feel just as safe with him in there, if his two previous starts are any criterion. Boots has twirled in brilliant fashion against Deep River and Stonington within the last week and should be just as much of a puzzle to the Whalers as Butsy was last year, when, acting in a relief role he beat them, 4 to 3, in 11 innings.

Bud Fontaine, suspended catcher, was returned to good standing in time for Thursday's practice and will be in Saturday's game, it was announced yesterday. This will give the local mentor a chance to place Les Crowell back in right field and adds much to the offense of the club. It is not known yet whether Speed Reardon, second-sacker who has also been under suspension, will be ready.

The new school band will play again Saturday and the time of the game has been advanced to 3 p. m. from 2:30. This will be the second appearance of the popular student-musicians and they expect to make even a better showing this week than they did in their debut at the Deep River game last Saturday, when conditions were not of the best.

Hartford umpires, Central Board men, will handle the tilt.

North Street Pirates Win

The North Street Pirates defeated the Boswell avenue All Stars Thursday at the Hickory street campus, by a score of 7 to 5. The lineup for the winners was, Frank Romanski, c; Vitold Zawislinski, p; Tony Koreakovex, ss; Frank Gwiazdowski, 1b; Charles Gwiazdowski, 3b; Henry Zawislinski, f. The heavy hitting was by Frank Gwiazdowski, Vitold Zawislinski and Frank Romanski. An extra pitcher was Stanley Romanski.

POWERFUL BATTING ATTACK GIVES BROWN VICTORY

ST. LOUIS, April 24—(AP)—The combination of a powerful batting attack, which reached its height in the sixth inning, and some fine relief pitching by Chad Kimsey gave the St. Louis Browns a 12 to 4 victory over the Detroit Tigers today. It was the third straight victory for the Browns.

Kimsey went to the mound after Herman Holshauser had been nicked for home runs by Gehringer and McManus to send the Tigers off to a 4-1 lead. He turned Detroit back without a hit in four innings.

After five innings of failure, the Browns fell on Elon Hogsett in the sixth and continued against Carroll and Sullivan for a seven run rally. They got four more off Phil Page in the eighth. Fred Schulte had a perfect day with three hits in three times at bat, driving in four runs.

FISHER CONTINUES HIS HIGH POWERED HITTING

CHICAGO, April 24—(AP)—George Fisher, young St. Louis outfielder, continued his sensational hitting streak today and led the Cardinals to a 9 to 2 victory over the Chicago Cubs in the odd game of the seven the teams have played this season. Only about 3,000 chilly fans watched the one National league game of the day.

Fisher hit two doubles and a single in three official trips to the plate and sacrificed on one other occasion, driving in four of the Cards' runs. One of his doubles cleared the loaded bases to give the Cards the lead. In the seventh St. Louis scored five runs to make the victory safe. Another double let Fisher score the first Cardinal tally.

Sheriff Fred Blake was driven from the mound in the seventh and was charged with his first defeat of the season. Moss, Osborne, and Nelson followed him. Sylvester Johnson was nicked for nine hits but kept them scattered.

BATTALINO-GRAHAM BOUT EXPECTED TO DRAW 10,000

HARTFORD, April 25—Bat Battalino, world's featherweight champion, tonight in the big state armory here, faces the hardest test of his career, meeting Bushy Graham of Utica, former world's bantamweight champion and now rated by many the best featherweight in the game.

Graham, victor in 87 of his 103 ring battles, is predicting a win by kayo while Battalino, taciturn as ever, contents himself with saying merely, "I am in good shape and expect to win."

Both boys are in great shape. Yesterday Battalino had a hard workout while Graham, fearful of falling below the featherweight limit of 126 pounds, took nothing but limbering-up exercises. Dick Burns, Graham's trainer, says Bushy, seeing this bout as the first big gun in his campaign for the title, was never in better shape while Battalino, as ever, is in the pink.

As the boys get into the ring tonight, there will be the unusual situation of the hometowner and a champion being on the short end of the betting. Graham is a warm favorite, largely because he has two decisions over Taylor who in turn beat Battalino less than two months ago.

It is expected that close to 10,000 will see the bout bringing a gate of $30,000.

"Listen, Mame, whatcha going to do tonight? Oh, yeah? Well how about me and you parking our tired dogs in front of that old four tube set of yours and listening to the Norwich broadcast, huh.

"What? You say you gotta a date with the boy friend. Listen, you half-pint, ain't you got no patriotism? Oh, well, have it your own way, maybe I should have said civil pride but that ain't the question. Do we or don't we get an earful about Norwich?

"Well, what's the matter with making it a foursome, you and the boy friend and me and some other drug-store cowboy? Yeah? Well, if he ain't he's got all the qualifications.

"Listen, you female Lothario, a half hour listening to something educational ain't going to hurt that mind of yours. And just because there ain't no love stuff in that broadcast it ain't no sign you shouldn't listen to it.

"A half hour before the radio tonight at 10 o'clock will tell you more about the old home town than you'll learn in 10 years parked in an ice-cream parlor. I heard it last week and learned who it was that was responsible for Norwich being Norwich and where it is.

"No, they don't tell you nothing about the new traffic rules, they don't go in for puzzles in this broadcast. But they do tell you what a good town you're living in and why.

"And say, that feller, John Richardson, what takes the part of the professor has got a voice better'n Rudy Vallee which I admit ain't saying much for Mr. Richardson. I just mentioned Rudy because you know how goofy you get when you hear him.

"I hope they get Mr. Richardson to sing that old song, "When You and I Was Young, Maggie", which was written by a Norwich man. That would be a knockout 'cause they say Mr. Richardson has got some voice.

"All right I'll be up then about 9:30."

PUTNAM HIGH TAKES GAME FROM TRADE SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 24—Putnam high school's baseball team, in its home season opener today against the State Trade school nine, came out on the long end of a 16 to 14 score. The outcome of the slugging match, in which every player on the squad participated at one time or another, was in doubt until the last inning, as the score indicated. The trade school infield was weak and the high school boys, still showing signs of the trouncing received last week in Pomfret, easily matched strides with their well-selected opponents. The only spectacular exhibition of baseball during the game was seen in the third inning when Reynolds, high school shortstop, came to bat with the bases full and drove out an infield fly that seemed like a certain hit. Coming from nowhere, Zazaftaski, trade school shortstop, came under the ball and circling around twice, made a backhand catch, throwing Reynolds out and retiring the side.

The Weiss brothers, Harry and Louis, pitched for the high school with LaBonte catching and for the opposition Connolly hurled. Dzienciney was the receiver.

FISHER TOPS BIG SIX OF BASEBALL IN BATTING

By the Associated Press

Due principally to cold weather only one member of baseball's Big Six played a ball game yesterday but he did plenty. Young George Fisher of the St. Louis Cardinals, batting leader of the National league placed himself securely at the top of the Big Six by hitting a single and two doubles in three official trips to the plate, as the Cards defeated the Chicago Cubs. Rogers Hornsby's injured heel kept him from taking part in the struggle. The three hits placed Fisher's batting average at .563 with 18 hits in 32 times at bat. Charley Jamieson of Cleveland, American league leader, held second place although he did not play. His mark is .533.

PLAINFIELD TEAM AWARDED BULLETIN CUP IN EASTERN CONN. SOCCER LEAGUE

At a meeting of the Eastern Connecticut Soccer league held last night at the home of Fred Laycock at 500 Boswell avenue, the Plainfield soccer team was officially declared league champions for 1930 and were presented the Bulletin cup, emblematic of the title.

The cup will be held by Plainfield for one year and then will go to the winner of the league in 1931. The team to win the cup three times will take permanent possession of it.

Plainfield played brilliant soccer all during the season, winning the first round and then when it was decided to play a second round they went out and won that one giving them an undisputed claim to the title. The Plainfield club is composed of young players who played hard soccer and defeated teams of experienced players. Those who comprised the Plainfield team were Korab, Allard, Mette, Mercier, T. Heys, Wilkinson, Fenton, Lang, J. Heys, Barrett, Pechie, Cotnoir and Smith.

At the league meeting last night plans were made for the enlarging of the league to include at least two other teams and the possibility of enlarging the league to eight teams. Teams mentioned as possible prospects for the league were Wauregan, Jewett City, Bradford and Westerly.

Much enthusiasm was manifest at the meeting and it is hoped that the league will open next year about the first of October and continue through to the middle of April giving plenty of opportunity for two rounds of play.

The final standing of the league is:

	W.	L.	D.	Pts.
Plainfield	8	3	1	17
New London	6	4	2	14
J. B. Martin	6	4	2	14
Putnam	1	10	1	3

GERMANY TAKES BIG LEAD OVER ENGLISH

LONDON, April 24—(AP)—Germany's Davis cup tennis team, showing surprising strength, took a commanding lead over Great Britain in their first round encounter today. The invaders captured the opening singles match and led by two sets to one in the other when it was called on account of darkness.

Undismayed by the fact that the British team was generally favored to win the series, the Germans took the offense from the start and never relinquished it.

After a desperate battle, Dr. Heinz Landmann of Germany downed the youthful Henry Wilfred Austin by scores of 6-3, 5-7, 4-6, 6-4. The slender Englishman was bothered by cramps in the final set. Before British supporters had recovered from the downfall of their principal standard-bearer, Germany was well on its way to victory in the second match of the day, Daniel Prenn, Germany's first ranking player, leading H. G. N. Lee at 6-4, 7-9, 6-5, when the umpire suspended play because of the lateness of the hour. The match probably will be finished tomorrow when the doubles event also will be decided.

ACADEMY RELAY TEAMS AT PENN. RELAY CARNIVAL TODAY AND SATURDAY

The Academy's two relay teams, mile and 440 yard sprinters, nine athletes in all, are this morning safely encamped in Philadelphia where today and tomorrow they will compete against some of the best high school athletes in the country in the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival at Franklin field.

Coach John P. Murphy and his little squad left Thursday after school, by auto, in high spirits and confident of upholding the honor of the Rose of New England against the exceedingly stiff competition that can be expected in this meet. The following boys made the trip: 440 yard relay—Capt. Sam Berkman, Ralph Rootes, Charles Holden, John Lenkiewicz and alternates, Joseph Serra and Harold Lazeroff; mile relay, Harold Mahoney, John Lenkiewicz, Sam Berkman, Ralph Rootes and alternate, John Wood.

The Academy is entered in Class B, bringing them against several of the leading New York schools in addition to various other outfits of the east and middle west. Coach Murphy had made entry for Class C but evidently the local school is rated pretty high because of its impressive work in the past year or so for they were moved up one division.

The Academy won the league championship last spring for the first time in its history and then copped the New England relay title at Brown university in addition to winning a majority of its dual meets. This was under the direction of Matthew J. Sheridan.

After Mr. Sheridan left the school, John P. Murphy took over the reins and proceeded to guide the Wildcats through a successful indoor season, the first in the annals of N. F. A. The relay teams, in particular, showed up well, defeating Suffield prep in a meet at the armory and copping the mile event at the Hartford National Guard games. In the Boston A. A. meet the Red and Whitesters finished fourth in a field of ten in the college freshman mile event, they being the only high or prep school entered with the college men.

The Penn relay carnival will be broadcast both Friday and Saturday afternoons over the Columbia Broadcasting system.

Each team scored a single run in the eighth but Holy Cross made the game safe with a two-run rally in the ninth.

SCHMELING LEAVES FOR HIS BOUT WITH SHARKEY

BERLIN, April 24—(AP)—Max Schmeling, with a small dachshund in his arms and the cheers of friends and fans ringing in his ears, left tonight for New York where he battles Jack Sharkey for heavyweight supremacy the night of June 12.

"The German Dempsey" declared that the longer the fight lasts—even if it goes the full 15 rounds—the better for him as then his youth would tell over Sharkey. Schmeling is 24 and Sharkey 27. Max also pointed out that he is used to long bouts whereas most of the Boston boxer's more recent matches have been of brief duration.

WESTERLY

TOWN GETS MINER LAND TO IMPROVE HIGH ST. CORNER

A signed agreement has been reached between Miss Jennie B. Miner, owner of the property at 101 High street, corner of High street and Grove avenue, and representatives of the Westerly highway commission, whereby some 400 square feet of land will be deeded to the town of Westerly. There will be sufficient property thrown into the street at this junction to enable a corner to be rounded out with a 23-foot radius. Under direction of Highway Engineer Adolph L. Leon, work will be started immediately upon the removal of one shade street, the setting back to the new location of the boundary fence at this corner and the re-location of the curbing and sidewalk.

New Four-Track Project

The steam shovel of the New Haven railroad with work train and crew is parked nightly in the Westerly freight yard. The shovel was brought from Midway the first of the week to begin work on the new four-track project which the railroad has undertaken from Wickford to Westerly and on some sections of which there are now three tracks, a siding being in operation besides the two main line tracks. During the winter months filling material has been taken from the Bradford, R. I., gravel pits and moved in freight trains to Mystic for the embankment near the drawbridge.

A posse of Westerly police scoured the northern section of Westerly in search of a dog which had been reported as the one which gave members of the department concern recently when it traveled about, dragging a trap fastened to one leg. The police were successful in securing a litter of pups, but a shot from a revolver only served to have the dog make tracks faster. With the apprehension of this dog it is thought that the disappearance of chickens from coops in a number of cases may be accounted for.

The condition of Miss Elizabeth Haswell, who has been confined to her Oak street home for a number of days in alternating coma and consciousness, continues to show no improvement.

This (Friday) evening a large delegation from Narragansett lodge, No. 7, I. O. O. F., of Westerly will attend the get-together meeting of Washington county Odd Fellows to be held with Beacon lodge, Wickford. The Westerly men will leave in private automobiles from the Odd Fellows' rooms on High street at 6 o'clock.

ALICE WHITE explains why some girls are so Enchanting

ALICE WHITE, petite First National star, in the bathroom created especially for her in Hollywood. She says: "Lux Toilet Soap gives my skin that peach-bloom smoothness that is so important to a girl's charm."

Alice White

"WHEN a girl is fascinating," says dainty Alice White, whose vibrant charm carried her so swiftly to stardom on the screen, "you may be sure of one thing. Her skin is lovely!

"Beautiful skin always attracts. It is certainly the most important charm any girl can have.

"In Hollywood, you know, the directors all found out long ago that if a girl is to win millions of admirers on the screen, her skin must have that peach-bloom smoothness that is so ravishing.

LORETTA YOUNG
"It's very satisfactory!"

"The glaring close-up lights would reveal even the slightest imperfection in the skin. And so, of course, every star in Hollywood guards her complexion most carefully.

"So when I say we use Lux Toilet Soap—almost all of us—you may be sure we think it is a splendid soap. Such soothing lather, and it leaves the skin so exquisitely smooth and soft.

"It is such a simple way to keep the skin lovely! Any girl can follow it, with the same good results."

9 out of 10 Lovely Stars use it—in Hollywood—on Broadway—in Europe

Of the 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 511 are devoted to Lux Toilet Soap. All the great film studios have made it the official soap for their dressing rooms!

The lovely Broadway stage stars, too, have discovered that Lux Toilet Soap gives their skin just the gentle care that is required.

And now the European stars are using this fragrant white soap! You, too, will want to try it. Order several cakes—today.

HOW TO MAKE THE OLD FARM PAY

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

One thing that makes discussions of the well-known "farm problem" so baffling and inconclusive is that most of the disputants can't seem to agree just what it is.

They're like a parcel of doctors setting out to cure a patient without knowing what's the matter with him. Some think he should be treated for gall-stones and some for arthritis and others for spring fever. As for the patient, he knows where he aches but isn't expert enough in the 'ologies and 'isms to tell 'em what to call it.

Now, I don't really think I'm the wisest man in the world, as Mr. Borah does. Nevertheless, I believe I can state the case so that every farmer between Casco bay and Vancouver sound will understand it, and 99 out of every 100 will agree with me.

The great, universal, unsolved "farm problem" which faces every working farmer in the country is just—

HOW TO MAKE THE OLD FARM PAY.

His particular old farm, on his particular range or prairie or hill, under his particular conditions of soil and climate and markets and labor etc.;—not somebody else's "average" farm, existing only in some professional economist's imagination.

My personal belief is that there aren't seven farmers in the whole United States who are facing exactly the same conditions in all these and other pertinent particulars. There are several hundred thousand who grow wheat but not in precisely similar soils or under precisely similar conditions of rain-fall, frost, insect pests, labor costs, marketing advantages, etc., etc.

So with corn; so with cotton; so with pears and peaches and apples and grapes, so with cabbages and cucumbers and onions and okra and peas and asparagus.

Each one has to face a question, more or less different from that which his fellow is confronted by.

Seems to me this fact is so self-evident that the wayfaring man, though a congressman, needn't make any mistake about it.

Being so, what really thoughtful man can assume, even for a moment, the possibility of finding any single formula for any single dose which will fix everybody up in the twinkle of a lamb's tail?

When the country doctor starts out on his daily round to visit a couple of dozen patients, he doesn't plan to give quinine to the whole caboodle. He intends to find out, first, what's causing the disturbance and then prescribe the pill or bolus or tablet or drops which that particular disease seems to call for. He doesn't give paregoric to the man with a broken leg, nor put the teething baby into splints. He doesn't expect the same drug to cure both typhoid fever and laziness.

In ruder and more ignorant times even some doctors used to hunt for what they called "panaceas," i. e., universal cure-alls. Quacks sometimes act like that, now-a-days. But intelligent people usually want intelligent doctors, and intelligent doctors have outgrown that middle ages superstition.

When it comes to prescribing for the admitted ills which affect many farmers, however, the agricultural and economic doctors go at once "into a huddle," and begin to shout out the virtues of their various nostrums as "sure-cures" for anything that's the matter with any farmer, anywhere.

Dr. Snooks avers that his "equalization" pills will cure 'em all: Dr. Nooks maintains, on the contrary, that his special "debenture" drops are the only sure-fire: Dr. Pooks advocates the immediate use of a "revolving fund;" and so on and so on.

Now it is quite probable that each of these treatments has merit and would help in certain special cases. But to say that any one or all of them would solve the problems of eight or ten million individual farmers is equivalent to saying that castor oil will cure cancer and lumbago as certainly as bellyache.

They grow quite a few potatoes up in Maine, for example. And the Maine potato-growers have their troubles. If you don't believe it, ask one! How much help will it be to them if the government "stabilizes" the wheat market for the Dakota wheat man?

All over the country thousands on thousands of farmers are keeping cows and selling milk, butter, etc. Things aren't any too easy for them, either. But how much would it help them to have the Iowa corn-growers get government insurance on their crops?

Did you notice a little inconspicuous item in The Bulletin, the other day, in the form of a dispatch from St. Paul? It read:

"Minnesota's hens, diligently sticking to their nests, produced almost twice as much wealth in 1929 as did the state's wheat-fields. The year's egg crop is valued at $40,292,000, while the wheat figure was $21,005,000."

How much would it avail the Minnesota poultry keepers if congress should stick a high tariff on sugar to help out the Colorado beet growers?

If government sets out to remedy all the ills of all the eight or ten million farmers of the land, it will have to pass just about eight or ten million separate and distinct bills, providing an equal number of different "cures."

Putting it thus baldly, everyone sees its impossibility. Yet anything less than just such wholesale communism means favoritism to one class or another.

Who started this idea, anyhow, that congress can nullify the laws of material nature and make over all human nature by a simple "Be it enacted?" There are a few old-fashioned and trite sayings which might well be dusted off and put into circulation, once more. Such as, "You can't make water run uphill," and "Round pegs won't fit square holes," and "You can lead a horse to the tub but you can't make him drink," and Sancho Panza's famous discovery that "Every man is as Heaven made him, and sometimes a good deal worse."

There have been several attempts by well-meaning zealots to establish Utopias among men and women on earth. With all the driving power of benevolent zealotry behind them, and working on volunteer subjects, they all have ended in dismal failure. Yet the country is chock-full of fanatics who think—or pretend to think—that human nature can be haltered and hog-tied into a state of perfected angelhood, if only congress and the legislature will pass laws enough.

There are, as a matter of fact, about 'steen thousand things that congress can't do. It can't, for instance, make a Methodist into a Mohammedan by legislating him such. Not if he is of the true Methodist blood with the grace and grit of John Wesley in his system.

Nor can it make a marathon winner out of a wooden-legged cripple by law. Nor a profitable egg-producer out of a black crow by law. Nor a really first quality evangelist out of a Tammany sachem by law. Nor a thrifty farmer out of a "go-day, come-day, God-send-Sunday" neer-do-weel by law. The law can put him in prison, or confiscate his property, or even hang him, but it can't make him something he isn't capable of becoming.

So, in this "farm problem" muddle, there's a vast deal too much windy talk about law, law, law, and altogether too little use of common sense.

As I think I have asserted, once or twice before, there isn't any such thing as one all-embracing "farm problem." There are just about as many special farm problems as there are farms and farmers. It is as impossible for congress to cover them all with legislation as it would be for that body to enact that oranges and grapefruit shall grow in Maine as luxuriantly as in Florida or Southern California.

Each individual problem is and must always be up to the individual farmer on whose acres it rises. If he can't solve it, that may be either his misfortune or his fault; nobody else can. If his own brains and brawn are unequal to the job, he may find help in voluntary co-operation with other farmers working under more or less similar conditions. He may find help in the investigations and tests carried on by experiment stations. He may get worth while advice from some more successful neighbor. He may get a bit of a lift from protective legislation. But that's all legislation can do for him, help him to help himself. The job is on his own doorstep and he must tackle it in his own way.

There are a whole lot of utterly unnecessary hardships which farmers have to bear. Don't I know some of them? Haven't I sweat under my chase? But congress didn't make them, nor can congress abolish them. Some of them are in the very nature of things. Some of them are due to our failure to see opportunities. Some of them are due to a supine habit of doing the same old things over and over in the same old way. Some of them we can't help. Some of them we can.

It's up to us, in the end, and to any congress or legislature or president or farm board.

I rather suspect that there will always be some fairly prosperous farmers and some not so prosperous. It's so in business and in law and in every other phase of human activity. Congress can't make a successful doctor out of an unsuccessful one by law. Why should it be expected to make a successful farmer out of one who hasn't the makings of success in him?

THE FARMER.

WESTFORD

The eighth grades go to the Warrenville school this year to take their tests.

At a school board meeting Monday evening it was decided to ask all the teachers of the town to remain another year.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Dawley, of Norwich, were at C. D. Chrism's Easter Sunday.

Two Recent Deaths

The passing of Frank Green, within a few days after that of B. H. Gardner, was a shock to the town. Ashford can ill afford to lose such reliable citizens. Poor health for some time made it impossible for Mr. Green to take part in public affairs lately, but friends recall former days, when he was prominent in social and other affairs, a member of the Babcock band and one of a group of singers in great demand on festive occasions. Others of the group were Miss Ella Bartlett, later Mrs. Frank Green, Mrs. Henry Robbins, sometime of Ashford, later of Norwich, now deceased; the Howards of North Ashford, and probably others.

PROFIT-TAKING AND BEAR SELLING TURNED MARKET HEAVY AT THE CLOSE

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—An increasing inclination to take profits on advances, together with a revival of large-scale bear selling, turned the stock market conspicuously heavy before the close of today's session, although pools made powerful efforts to retain control of the price movement and succeeded in sending some of their favorites among the amusement and specialty shares to new high levels. Trading was active, although sales of 5,232,640 shares fell about 220,000 short of yesterday. The index of 90 leading stocks showed a net loss of 1 4-10 points.

For the most part, the market moved independently of the day's news, which contained little in the way of surprises. A reduction in Chile copper annual dividend from $3.50 to $3, the first such reduction since the slash in red metal prices, and reports of reduced first quarter earnings for such companies as A. M. Byers, National Cash Register and Electric Autolite, probably contributed to the selling.

The weekly brokerage figures, published after the close, were not encouraging. Loans increased $32,000,000 in a trading week in which the price index of 90 leading stocks lost about 2 points, tending to indicate that stock has been passing from strong to weak hands. Credit conditions were unchanged, with call loans again ranging from 4 to 3 1-2 per cent.

Radio was again a strong feature, rising 2 1-2 points to a new 1930 high at 69 2-3, while Radio Keith mounted about 2 to a record for all time at 50, but about half these gains were lost before the close. Pathe and Shubert sold up about 3 and 6 points in response to rumors that they would be taken over by Radio Keith and Warner Brothers, respectively. Diamond Match shot up 10 points to another peak level at 237, making a gain of nearly 100 points this year, and Worthington Pump and Vanadium, normally fast movers, were sent up a few points.

J. I. Case reacted 15 points, and closed off 10. Allied Chemical lost 7, and American Water Works, Byers, Canada Dry, Colorado Fuel, DuPont, Eastman Kodak, Lambert, Marmon, Nash, McKeesport Tinplate, United Aircraft, Union Carbide, and Western Union lost 2 to 5 points. Motors were under pronounced pressure, Studebaker and Hudson selling at new lows for the year. Gillette, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Julius Kayser, and National Cash Register also touched new 1930 lows.

Commodities were irregular. Wheat lost 5-8 to 3-4 of a cent, reflecting bearish weather, and corn lost 1-4 to 1-2 cent. Cotton futures advanced sharply in short covering, only to react later, and close $1 a bale higher to 25 cents lower.

Foreign exchanges were steady to firm, with sterling cables moving up 1-8 to $4.86 7-16.

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed steady, 20 points higher to 5 lower; spot steady; middling 16.50.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, April 24 — (AP) — Treasury receipts for April 22 were $5,067,091.85; expenditures $33,120,029.97; balance $216,883,769.80.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—Prices on the New York Curb exchange developed further irregularities today, stocks in the same group moving in opposite directions, but the general undertone was steady, with strong underlying support for most of the leaders. At least a score of issues were whirled up to new high records for the year, a few of the gains being of a rather spectacular nature, and there were but few points of real weakness. Trading was in fairly heavy volume, the day's sales running over 1,500,000 shares.

Electric Bond and Share ran into further profit taking, closing 1 3-4 points lower at 114 1-4. American Gas and Electric dropped 3 points and there were losses of a point or two in Electric Power and Light optional warrants, United Light and Power "A" and a few other recent favorites. Cities Service crossed 44 to another new high on a heavy turnover. American Commonwealth Power "B" and Brazilian Light and Traction, reached new high ground.

Columbia Pictures Corp. voting trust certificates, only about 150,000 shares of which are outstanding, crossed 47 to a new high and closed at 46 1-2 for a new gain of 4 points. Earnings for the year ended June 30 are unofficially estimated in excess of $6 a share. Fox Theatres also reached a new high and Loews debenture rights advanced fractionally to a new top.

Signer Manufacturing soared 25 points to a new high at 540 in odd lot transactions, but lost 5 points of its gain. A. O. Smith crossed 249 to a new high for a gain of about 8 points. Bohack stores closed more than 6 points higher at 71 after setting a new peak at a point above that figure. Acme Steel, American Hard Rubber, Copper Bessemer, Dresser Manufacturing, Federal Bake Shops, General Alloys, General Fireproofing, Metal & Mining, Pacific Coast Biscuit preferred, Pitney Bowes and U. S. Dairy A also registered new 1930 peaks.

Talk of an early advance in California crude prices, coupled with the reported formation of a large holding company for natural gas properties, brought fresh buying into the oil group, but the gains were not fully maintained. Continental Oil of Maine, American Maracaibo and Standard Oil of Kentucky broke through to new highs and Ohio Oil approached to within a small fraction of the year's top, but Humble and Cosden turned heavy.

Deere & Co. broke about 10 points but recovered half its loss. Heaviness also was apparent in some of the investment trusts, Securities Corp. (new) falling more than 4 points and Goldman Sachs dropping 2 5-8.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—Irregularity prevailed in listed bond trading again today, many of the prime rails found that the easiest course was downward, although declines generally were limited to about a quarter of a point. United States governments firmed in dull trading, while utilities and industrials, in small demand, remained quiet.

Amusement bonds were popular. Pathe Exchange 7s climbed to 75, five points above the previous high, closing 2 points below the top for a net improvement of 3 3-4.

Philadelphia, and Reading Coal and Iron convertible pushed into new high ground for the second successive day, reaching 107 3-4. The last quotation was 106, a half point net rise. American Telephone 4 1-2s were comparatively dull, for the turnover fell below $1,000,000 par value and the debentures sold off half a point net.

The most active listings of the day were the Chile 6s, whose prices were readjusted to meet the offering figure of 91 1-2 on the new $25,000,000 issue.

Most of the rails were extremely dull. There was a flurry in Erie improvement 5s, when issued, but the bonds failed to move.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 24.—(AP)—Indications that government sponsored agencies were selling wheat on price bulges led to a maximum set-back of 2 3-4c a bushel at one time today.

Generally favorable crop reports from the northwest as well as forecasts of showers in drought districts southwest, counted also as a bearish influence. Meanwhile, estimates were current that the grain stabilization corporation now possesses ownership of as much as 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, and Secretary of Agriculture Hyde was quoted as acknowledging that the federal farm board had made a mistake in following economists' figures on world supply and demand.

Provisions responded to hog market declines.

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP)—The weekly gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank, covering the period from April 17 to 23, inclusive, shows imports of $2,430,000, of which $2,392,000 came from Peru, and $47,000 chiefly from Latin-American countries and no exports, and no net change in the amount of gold earmarked for foreign account.

Although business has been quiet this month the Baldwin Locomotive Works has a good back log of orders which will be sufficient for an output of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 a month up to and including September, George H. Houston, president, said today.

Two seats on the New York Stock exchange were sold today, one for $479,000, an increase of $12,000 over the previously reported transfer of memberships, and the second for $480,000.

The March net operating income of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was $376,768, compared with $469,284. For the first quarter the railroad reported an aggregate of $1,555,547, as against $1,870,713 for the corresponding quarter of 1929.

Unrealized market appreciation of the holdings of Continental Shares, Inc., an investment trust sponsored by Otis & Co., New York and Cleveland bankers, as of March 31, totaled $29,487,091, a gain of $21,211,069 during the first quarter. Total investments as of March 31, were carried at a cost of $123,867,368. The market value on the same date totaled $153,354,456.

Unofficial estimates of the earnings of the Continental Baking Corp. for the first 15 weeks of the current year place them at between 40 and 50 cents a share on the 391,813 shares of class A stock. During the corresponding period of last year the profits were equal to $2.18 a share. A decrease of between 8 to 10 per cent in sales volume during the period was given as the main reason for the reduced earnings.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

With today's showings one of the Broadway's most popular programs comes to a close, with Zane Grey's famous cow-country epic, "The Light of Western Stars," featuring Rirchard Arlen, Harry Green, Fred Kohler and Mary Brian, the ever-comical Gleasons in "Don't Believe It," Laurel and Hardy in "Below Zero," their latest scream, a Paramount song-reel novelty and the latest Fox movietone news. Today's matinee starts at 2 o'clock, in order to permit of an extra showing of the feature for the school children at 4.

Tomorrow inaugurates the spring and summer season at the Broadway with a program of solid joy, the feature starring William (Bill) Haines, in a hectic comedy-feature, "The Girl Said No," in which the ubiquitous and sassy William has the able assistance of Marie Dressler in a typical rowdy role that is good for a gale of laughs, and dainty Leila Hyams as the demure but stubborn blonde who resisted every effort of the fresh young broker's clerk to make her say "Yes." The Haines-Dressler combination is a guarantee of a thousand hearty laughs, and with Polly Moran added to the team, the result is irresistible. The "Joy Week" opening also includes an Our Gang all-talking comedy, "Shivering Shakespeare," and featured comedy that will appeal to every golfer, amateur, "dub," or "pro," entitled "Match Play," in which Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel, the two best known golfers in the world, put on a hilarious battle on the green with the title of the golf course as the stakes. The latest Paramount sound news and other short features complete a fast and enjoyable program.

Capitol Theatre, Willimantic.

Al Jolson returns to burnt cork for at least a part of his latest Warner Brothers picture, "Mammy," which opens next Monday at the Capitol theatre, Willimantic.

Jolson made his first great success as a black faced singing comedian and it is in this happy choice of a medium that he is seen first in this new picture—a picture made for laughter—with the star at his uproarious best.

No one enjoyed the return to the old minstrel show background as much as Jolson himself who at one time was a minstrel. He dug into his old bag of tricks and brought out the gags that used to get him the biggest laughs and the most applause. These he revamped and modernized and used with obvious relish.

"Mammy" is an adaptation of a play by Irving Berlin, and the songs and incidental music are also the product of the Tin Pan Alley genius. Jolson and Berlin have long been close personal friends but this is the first time they have collaborated on a show.

Burton's Agency Sells Another.

Mrs. Ida Herrick has sold her property located at No. 62 Hobart avenue to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Cooney, of this city, who will take immediate possession.

The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

WINDHAM

The annual meeting of the Ecclesiastical society of the Congregational church was held in the chapel Saturday evening. Family doctor's laxative instead of harsh purges; trial bottle Free

Dr. Caldwell's prescription cannot form the cathartic habit. It can be given to the child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is fetid; or has a little fever. Or to the older people whose bowels are clogged. Its ingredients stimulate muscular action and thus aid the bowels to more normal functioning. The pure senna and laxative herbs in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are good for the system. Don't hesitate to use when there's biliousness, headaches, or any sign of constipation. Your druggist has this world-famous prescription ready in big bottles. Or, write Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Monticello, Ill., and a free trial bottle will be sent to you, postpaid.

OUTBOARD RUNABOUTS

The fastest newcomer on the waters this season is the Johnson Aquaflyer powered by swift, silent electrically started Sea-Horse Motor and neatly concealed with a covered hatch.

Steered with an auto-type wheel. All controls conveniently at hand. Shallowest waters are navigable, because propeller tilts automatically on contact with logs, rocks, etc. As much usable space as inboard boats one-third larger, because motor is outside instead of inside. Greater speed because of great weight reduction—this 2-cycle Sea-Horse has power equal to inboard motors weighing twice as much.

Water-cooled Underwater Exhaust discharges fumes and noise below the surface. Johnson Release Charger cuts starting effort in half; enables motor to start on weak starter battery or with auxiliary rope.

Deep, luxurious upholstery, trim, and smart colors make the Aquaflyer comfortable and racy. It outperforms any inboard boat and costs but a fraction as much.

Other Johnson Matched Units, Sea-Horses and Boats, electrically started and rope-started, the latter as low as $260.00 complete, f. o. b. factory.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre.

Imagine a picture that is all talking, singing and dancing: a picture that has a cast including Harry Richman, Jean Bennett, James Gleason, Aileen Pringle and Lilyan Tashman; a picture which has five song hits written especially for it by Irving Berlin and the answer is "Puttin' On The Ritz," which comes to the Palace theatre Saturday where it will be shown until Tuesday of next week.

Harry Richman as Harry Raymond, the lead in "Puttin' On The Ritz," is one of Broadway's most popular versatile masters of song and comedy. He is a pianist as well as a singer and he is given a splendid chance to demonstrate his ability through the songs which Berlin has written for him.

Joan Bennett, the leading feminine role as Dolores Fenton, has starred [in] many recent successes among which were: "Bulldog Drummond," "Three Live Ghosts," and "Disraeli."

"Puttin' On The Ritz," tells the story of Harry Raymond, a song-plugger who is employed by a publishing house. He has a hard time trying to compose hits, but after many trials and disappointments strikes one which is the best yet. He joins a group of troupers and they play the small-time circuits until they get a chance to do some big stuff on Broadway. Prosperity is too much for Harry and he attempts to keep up a fast pace.

He opens a night club, drinks and has a good time generally with society people who are interested in him only because he is someone new and different.

"Puttin' On The Ritz" is one of the pictures to be presented by Warner Brothers as part of their Spring Festival. This was begun April 20 and will continue until June 5. Warner Brothers at this time will set the standard for the pictures to be shown in all the theatres during the coming year.

The Palace will present for the last time today, "Rich People," starring Constance Bennett and Robert Ames, and "Officer O'Brien," a thrilling, gripping tale of the underworld with William Boyd and Dorothy Sebastian.

NEW LONDON WOMEN TURN BACK— ARE STRUCK BY BURKE MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 26. — Mrs. John J. O'Meara, 61 Franklin street and Miss Catherine O'Brien, of Division street, were injured late this afternoon when they were struck by an automobile driven by Bernard Burke, of 34 Starr street. The women, although knocked down refused to go to a hospital and be examined that the extent of their injuries might be determined.

Mrs. O'Meara and Miss O'Brien were walking on the crosswalk leading from Hempstead to Broad streets when the automobile traveling south approached. Believing that the woman would continue in the direction in which they were headed, Burke continued, but the women evidently became confused and turned back with the result that they were struck and knocked down. Patrolman William Manice was nearby and he endeavored to induce the women to be taken to a hospital, but they again refused. A passing automobilist conveyed the women to their home and Burke reported the accident at police headquarters. He was ordered to appear in court Saturday next at which time the boat upon which he is employed will be in port.

Checking Up On Drivers

Another movement was started in New London today to compel drivers of automobile to adhere to the state motor vehicle laws. Inspector Hulette came to New London and accompanied by Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin, went to Truman street where all cars and trucks were held up. In spite of the vigilance of the officers but two drivers were apprehended. Loreman P. Davis, R. F. D., Waterford, was ordered to present himself in court tomorrow, charged with driving with insufficient brakes and William T. Elliott was ordered into court on a like charge.

FRANK REDDEN IS SORE— COMPLAINS AGAINST OFFICER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 24.—Frank Redden of 361 Bank street, was convicted in the police court earlier in the week of a charge of intoxication and was fined $10 and costs. Now he has filed notice of an appeal to the next term of the court of common pleas and has made a charge against Patrolman Edward Skoczylas, although only verbally, to City Manager William A. Holt, alleging that the officer arrested him without cause. City Manager Holt will probably refrain from taking any action in the matter, for he is without authority to take the case out of the hands of the court. The fact that Redden was found guilty and disciplined is sufficient to cause adherence to the law rather than the grievance of the person disciplined. Redden was in the pharmacy of the Whelan Drug company, corner of State and Bank streets several nights ago and while there, it is alleged, he accused Officer Skoczylas, who was on duty and went to the soda fountain to make a purchase. Redden is declared to have threatened the officer with dismissal from the force if the bluecoat made an arrest. Skoczylas took the defi and arrested Redden. Redden submitted a statement of employes of the drug company, to the effect that Redden appeared sober and was not creating a disturbance and that when the officer and Redden left the store they were not aware that an arrest had been made. Skoczylas has also witnesses other than those who testified in the police court and he will produce them if the appeal is carried into effect.

Over 500 attended the reception and ball given at the state armory last night by Murphy-Rathbun post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in honor of Governor John H. Trumbull. A glider which was one of the features of the decorations was built especially for the ball by the following five boys: Annio Belluca, Clarence Olsen, Brewster Buxton, Thomas Sergeant and Philip Daghlian. The evening opened with a fine concert by the Coast Guard Academy band, under direction of Bandmaster C. W. Messer.

INFANT DAUGHTER CHOKED UNDER PECULIAR CONDITIONS

Marguerite Coleman Redden, aged six months, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Redden, 361 Bank street, died suddenly of asphyxiation at the residence of her parents yesterday afternoon and in a manner rather unusual. The child had been placed in its crib about 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon and when she fell asleep the mother went to another part of the house. About two hours later, Mrs. Redden went to the bed room and noticed that the baby had experienced nausea during the mother's absence. Investigation revealed that the child was dead. Acting Medical Examiner George P. Cheney, after investigation, determined that the baby had choked during the period of nausea. The child was buried this afternoon in St. Mary's cemetery.

OVER 500 LOCAL DOGS REMAIN UNREGISTERED

Although but another week remains for owners of dogs to register the animals, less than 200 have been registered up to the conclusion of business for the day at the office of the city clerk Thursday. There are over 700 dogs roaming the streets of the city, so it would appear that there is likely to be a rush to obtain licenses for the animals during the final two or three days, within the allotted time to do so.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Sarah Strickland Crumb, 78, widow of Oscar F. Crumb, formerly of Old Mystic, died last night at the residence of her niece, Mrs. Eunice Crumb Crandall, 232 Williams street, death being caused by a weakened condition of her physical system, aggravated by a shock suffered two years ago. Mrs. Crumb is survived by a brother, William H. Strickland, residing at the Odd Fellows' home, Groton. A brother of Mrs. Crumb, Capt. Martin S. Strickland, former master of the Central Vermont steamer, New York, died ten days ago. Mrs. Crumb resided in Old Mystic until she suffered the paralytic stroke. She was born in Ledyard, the daughter of James and Sarah Strickland, and was a member of the Old Mystic Baptist church.

WEDDING

Santangelo—Zeto

Anthony Santangelo, an expressman, and Miss Anna M. Zeto, daughter of Mrs. Michael Zeto, were married this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley and was witnessed by a large number of relatives and friends.

The following have applied for marriage licenses at the office of the city clerk: John F. Miller, fish cutter, Groton, and Gladys Augusta Tucker, Groton; Douglas Hills Borden, salesman, of Fall River, Mass., and Dorothea Benton Taudvin, school teacher, of Providence; Clayton L. Firmin, dairyman, of 59 Riverview avenue, and Lois Evelyn Wilcox, 21 Reed street.

Fined $100 and Costs

Two autoists were presented in the police court this morning. One case was disposed of, the driver being penalized, and the other was continued. Boleslaw Sefcik, 324 Main street, was fined $100 and costs. Sefcik was arrested on Main street last night by Sergeant George Webber and Patrolman William Elmer MacKenzie of Groton state police. The other driver, Harry A. Wheeler, 13 Briggs street, was also arrested on Main street by Patrolmen George Bruhns and Dennis Murphy. Wheeler's case went over until Monday next and he furnished a surety on his bond of $150.

Salvatore Sylvester, a laborer, residing at 14 Tenth street, was charged with breach of the peace and was sentenced to 60 days in jail by Judge Daniel M. Cronin for beating his wife.

Benjamin E. Bouge, 15 Water street, Mystic, was charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving without a license. He was fined $10 and costs. Bouge was arrested last night.

Cases Finally Nolled

The continued cases of William Mason of Shaw street and Frank Delaporta, Archer court, were disposed by a nolle being ordered. Mason and Delaporta were arrested Feb. 23, last, charged with attempting to steal an automobile, and the case has been continued from time to time. The young men were arrested when they attempted to drive away in an auto owned by Edward McLaughlin of Shaw street. McLaughlin had experienced much annoyance because of the disappearance of his auto from its parking place, only to be found abandoned in another part of the city. To put a stop to the practice, McLaughlin made a complaint to the police and was instructed to park the machine on State street, near Main, at which point an officer is on duty almost constantly. When McLaughlin parked his auto he notified Patrolman Lawrence Fardy. A short time later Mason and Delaporta were seen to enter the car and start to drive away. The youths were then arrested.

The only other case tried was for intoxication. The offender, a man not presented in court frequently and who was arrested on Williams street early today by Patrolman William Riordan, was given suspension of judgment.

FUNERAL

Mrs. John J. Jerome

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah E. Jerome, wife of John J. Jerome, of 68 Washington street, who died in Albany, N. Y. earlier in the week, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 62 Washington street and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev George R. Atha, pastor of Groton Heights Baptist church. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Dr. Manning K. Rose, of 108 State street; Mrs. Harry Kay, Groton; Ray Lee, 16 Pacific street; Ellen Beshesy, 310 Vauxhall street; Rita Gainor, Waterford; Philip Morrison, Groton; Herbert Manwaring, Niantic, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Patrolman George Laboue was unable to perform duty last night, being confined to his home, 196 Jefferson avenue, as a result of a severe cold.

To Be Married May 10

Lieut. Harry Warren Halterman, U. S. A., and Miss Julia Stanton Main, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald MacNeil Main, of Groton, will be married Saturday afternoon, May 10, at 4 o'clock at Groton Congregational church.

Henry J. Howard, 23 Walden avenue, last night made complaint to the police that mischievous youths had smashed several windows in his work shop. The boys are known and they will be tried in the juvenile court within a few days.

A certificate of corporation has been filed at the office of the secretary of state, Hartford, and at the office of the city clerk, by the Thompson Aero-Marine Station, Inc. The corporation has a capital stock of $10,000, divided into 100 shares of common stock of the par value of $100 per share. The corporation will start business with capital of $5,000. The incorporators are Clarence W. Thompson, Minnetta F. Thompson and Gertrude M. Thompson, all of New London.

S. Landow Co., Inc., of New Haven, has brought suit for $1,000 damages and foreclosure of mortgage against Abe Katz. The action is returnable before the next term of the superior court. The plaintiff some time ago endorsed a promissory note of $2,500 for the defendant and there is $500, with accrued interest, claim to be due and which could not be collected by means of several demands. The property involved is on Harrison street.

Salvatore Mugovero, former proprietor of a restaurant, 5 Railroad avenue, who recently filed a petition in bankruptcy, has been made the defendant in two more suits. Today, Coffey & Co., wholesale meat dealers, brought suit for $1,100 for meat furnished the restaurant and the Central Coal Co. brings suit for $75 for fuel furnished the restaurant before it suspended business. Two building lots owned by the defendant on Raymond street were attached.

At the April meeting of the trustees of Groton Congregational church last evening, the resignation of the pastor, Rev. Henry W. Hulbert, was received. Rev. Mr. Hulbert announced several weeks ago that he would tender his resignation at last night's session.

Several releases of attachment were filed today at the office of the city clerk. Francis DeGange, architect, released an attachment against Francesca and Maria Ferrigno and Henry A. and Cecelia J. Johns, Max Snitkin and the estate of Dr. Carlisle F. Ferrin released attachments against Thomas M. Kearney.

The deed transferring title in the property, corner of Woodbridge and Division streets, from the Bridgeport Brass company, Bridgeport, to Louis Lubchansky, of this city, and Morris Levine and Jacob Copans, of Newburgh, N. Y., was received for record today at the office of the city clerk. The building was formerly owned by the city of New London, having been sold to the brass company about 15 years ago.

George Silva has sold the business at 159 Main street to Walter Music, of Westerly. The purchase price was $1,300. Silva had conducted the business but a few months.

WOMAN WENT INSANE, COMMITTED TO HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 24.—May Barnes, colored, residing at 25 Douglass street, and with a long police court record, principally on charges of conducting a disorderly house or house of assignation, was committed to Norwich State hospital today. She has been on a debauch about two weeks and her mental condition had become such from her over-indulgence in alcoholic drink that she was violent and in order to prevent her from harming herself or inflicting injury on others, her commitment was made. The woman had been drinking heavily since the death of a male friend and yesterday when her condition became such as to warrant medical treatment a physician was summoned. Today the woman's condition was violent when the doctor visited the house and he decided to place her under restraint. The police were notified and went to the house to take charge of her until such time as arrangements could be completed to take her to Brewster's Neck. Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Sergeant John Courtney went to the house, where the woman was violent, but not ugly. She was scantily clad and when the officers entered the woman attempted to make her escape through a rear entrance. She was prevented from doing so and restrainers were then applied, the woman being taken to the hospital by friends, but under restraint. The police took charge of her effects, which included a wrist watch, two neck chains and six rings, one of the last named being a diamond, surrounded by six chip diamonds.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Good Will Associated Stores

David D. Russell, of Hartford, district manager of the Good Will Associated Stores, Inc., after a careful survey of store locations in the state of Connecticut, considers that he has made a very good choice in selecting No. 46 Franklin street, Norwich, Conn., as one of the first stores in the state of Connecticut.

The purpose of the Good Will Associated Stores, Inc., is to supply the residents of Norwich and surrounding towns with tires, tubes, automotive accessories, radio, supplies, storage batteries, home paints and varnish, and a few fast moving items in the sporting goods and hardware line.

Mr. Russell has spared no expense in opening this branch and is giving to the patrons one of the most modern and finest equipped stores. All merchandise will be displayed attractively and prices marked very plainly.

In appointing the manager for this branch, Mr. Russell considers himself very fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Leon C. McIntyre who has had a wide and varied experience in this line. The Good Will Associated Stores, Inc., are featuring Brunswick Tires manufactured by one of the world's largest tire manufacturers at Akron, Ohio.

It is a great pleasure to invite the public of Norwich and vicinity to the opening of this Good Will store to be located in the Sunlight building. In opening this branch it is our aim to make it an occasion of profit saving for the people. Our great purchasing power backed by our foresight in purchasing makes it possible for us to save you a great deal of money on standard merchandise. Our purpose is never to leave a stone unturned in endeavoring to give our patrons their full measure of value. Large turnover, cash buying, and our policy of giving the people the long end rather than the small, will make thousands of loyal patrons for us and we are more than anxious to gain their good will rather than make an immediate profit.

Throughout the next two weeks we are offering unheard of values that should appeal to your sense of thrift. In many instances we are selling standard staple articles at prices that will make it very hard for you to resist purchasing them.

Our turnover will be terrific and our main concern will be to give each of our new friends all the merchandise they wish to buy. In any event, we want you to know that every thing possible will be done to see that every one will get his share of our sensational opening values.

Come to our opening if you can. A full line of auto supplies, tires, radio accessories, house paint, varnishes, storage batteries and allied lines will be our display.

Details of a plan to modernize 27,000 factories in the metropolitan area of New York, were outlined to 900 members of the Electrical association of New York at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor, by Louis Kallscher, general chairman of a movement to that end.

TESTIMONY IN HUBER CASE BRINGS BIND OVER ON CHARGE OF ARSON

Testimony by firemen, policemen, an internal revenue agent and an accountant made up the bulk of the evidence produced in the city court Thursday morning before Deputy Judge H. H. Pettis when William S. Huber of 243 Broad street was presented on the charge of arson in having set fire to the Turner-Stanton company mill at 251 Broad street on the night of Saturday, Jan. 25.

After a hearing which took all the morning and at which no defense testimony was introduced by Attorney Harry Goldstein of Bridgeport, counsel for Mr. Huber, Judge Pettis found probable cause and bound him over to the superior court next criminal term. A bond of $8,000 previously furnished by David A. Wilson was continued.

City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy, who prosecuted the case, called Walter Udel of the Houghton studio as the first witness. He showed eight photographs he had taken at the mill on Feb. 4 and Feb. 15 in the presence of State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh and another person, whom the witness did not know.

Testimony that the bell alarm for the Turner-Stanton fire came in at 11:59 p. m. was given by Acting Chief Dennis Brennan of the Norwich fire department and there was also testimony from Adam Ensling, another Norwich fireman. The fire, they said, was mostly in the basement, off the boiler room, but worked up to the second floor.

Police Officers Testify

Sergeant John T. Casey of the Norwich police force testified that Huber went by him at about 11:55 o'clock on the night of the fire while the sergeant was talking to Officer Joseph Farrell as they stood at the corner of Broad street and Boswell avenue, about 150 feet away from the Turner-Stanton mill, and Huber's home which is next door to the mill.

The two policemen walked past the mill to Spaulding street, the witness said, and were there told that smoke was pouring out of the mill by a man who drove up in an automobile. The sergeant rang in the alarm and Officer Farrell went to Huber's house to notify Huber and met Mrs. Huber who said her husband was inside and that she would call him.

The witness said he later talked to Huber, who told him that he had gone into the mill shortly before the fire was discovered in order to put out a light that was burning in the basement. Huber said he did not notice any smoke at that time, the witness said. Sergeant Casey testified he went back to the mill at 1:20 on Sunday morning, when ordered to do so by Capt. Thomas Murphy, following a report that the safe had been found open.

Officer Farrell gave corroboratory evidence upon some of the testimony of Sergeant Casey and was followed on the stand by Sergeant Mathew T. Delaney who stated he found the safe empty when he was sent to the mill after the report about the open safe. Huber, he said, gave him a list of books missing from the safe and one of these was found under a rear seat of Huber's automobile. The list included: Cash book, sales book, sales classification book, 2 check books, general ledger, accounts receivable book, financial stock book, journal, a book containing the minutes of the corporation meetings and inventory books.

Government Agent Sought Books

Testimony that he was at the mill on Jan. 21 to investigate income tax returns for 1928 was given by James V. Duffy of Brookline, Mass., an internal revenue agent. At that time he saw Huber, who was the bookkeeper, and Huber told him the bookkeeping system had been changed and the old books were in the attic. They looked in the attic, but did not find the books wanted, and Duffy told Huber he would come back on Monday, Jan. 27, when Huber said he would have the books on hand.

Charred Books Found

After testimony by several of the company employes that the books were in the safe before the mill closed down at noon Saturday, City Attorney Cassidy produced a bundle of charred account books of the Turner-Stanton company, which State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh testified he had found three days after the fire, covered over with boxes, broken timbers and rubbish in a corner of the basement of the mill. Huber was with him when he found them, the state policeman said.

Discrepancy in Figures

Testifying as to an examination of the company's books he had made at request of the state police, shortly after the books had been found, Hibberd N. Alexander of New London, a certified accountant, said he found a difference of $71,000 between the company books and the income tax sheets.

Edward H. Hall, treasurer of the company, completed the testimony for the state, telling the court that Huber had entire charge of the books before the fire, that he made out the income tax returns, which the witness signed without studying the figures. Mr. Hall said that the officers of the concern had complete confidence in Huber as bookkeeper and they had not questioned anything he had done.

Attorney Goldstein argued that no case had been made out against Huber, but Judge Pettis ruled against the claim and bound Huber over.

The corporation was formerly in business in this city, but a number of months ago moved to a location in the former Briggs mills at Voluntown. HOUSE PASSED $111,000,000 RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL

Wild Session, During Which Charges of Deception, Bribery and "Pork Barrel" Legislation Were Made, Preceded Approval Without Record Vote—Belief Prevails That President Hoover Will Not Approve Appropriations of More Than the $55,000,000 Fixed By the Budget Bureau For Such Expenditures.

WASHINGTON, April 25—(AP)—A $111,000,000 river and harbor improvement program was approved by the house today in a wild, dramatic session that bristled with charges of deception, bribery and "pork barrel" legislation.

Even while the house was passing the bulk measure, the expectation gained credence that President Hoover would not approve appropriations of more than the $55,000,000 fixed by the budget bureau for such expenditures in the fiscal year 1931.

The projects in the measure are expected to be considered in three classes, as necessary and urgent, as necessary but not urgent, and as projects which in time will become necessary.

A study of the projects in the measure is being made to place them definitely in these three classifications but it became known that the Erie canal project was considered as belonging in the third class.

Final passage of the omnibus bill, carrying authorizations for about 154 projects and 346 surveys, came after supporters of the measure had turned back repeated assaults against its provisions, including that authorizing the federal government to take over the Erie-Oswego barge canal from New York state.

This provision was retained by a vote of 148 to 59 in the face of a bitter onslaught by a determined group of members from northwest states.

The northwesterners branded the entire bill as "a pork barrel," and charged Chairman Dempsey of the house rivers and harbors committee with "deception" for not providing more information concerning the demands likely to be made in the future for development of the barge canal.

This controversy had hardly subsided when Representative Laguardia, republican, New York, shouted an accusation of "bribery" in opening a successful fight for eliminated of a provision to permit the assistant chief of army engineers to retire as a major general.

Brigadier General Herbert Deakyne holds this post and passes on all river and harbor recommendations.

Laguardia insisted such a provision did not belong in the bill, that the rivers and harbors committee was exceeding its authority, and finally shook his fist toward Dempsey and shouted: "That's not legislation. That's bribery."

Dempsey defended the provision with an explanation that it was intended to reward faithful and efficient service, and that the fact that Deakyne did not have final jurisdiction over river and harbor recommendations was evidence of the committe's honest intention.

The provision was stricken out by a vote of 112 to 89.

As finaly sent to the senate, the more important projects in the house bill included $29,266,400 for deepening the channels in the Great Lakes; $180,000,000 for starting development of a 27 foot channel on the St. Lawrence river between Lake Ontario and Ogdensburg, N. Y.; $7,500,000 for completion for the Illinois waterway; and $15,000,000 for the Missouri river between Kansas City and Sioux City.

HARRISON HEWITT PRESIDENT OF CONN. STATE BAR ASS'N.

NEW HAVEN, April 25—(AP)—Harrison Hewitt, of this city, was elected president of the Connecticut State Bar association at its annual business meeting, held here today in the county court house. Mr. Hewitt succeeds Arthur M. Brown, of Norwich, the state's attorney for New London county.

David Day, of Bridgeport, was elected vice president, to succeed Judge John K. Beach, and James E. Wheeler was re-elected secretary and treasurer. Ordinarily, the vice president of the previous year is elected to the presidency, but Judge Beach, a retired justice of the supreme court, told the association he felt that a man active in legal affairs should be chosen, rather than a man who has retired.

Several resolutions were adopted at the business session in the afternoon. Later the members met at the Hotel Taft for the annual banquet. Homer S. Cumings, of Stamford, and Col. Norris G. Osborne, editor-in-chief of the Journal-Courier, were the principal speakers, the retiring president, Mr. Brown, was the toastmaster.

CONDITIONS IN INDIA ARE GROWING SERIOUS

BOMBAY, April 25—(AP)—The atmosphere of India continued ominous today, with evacuation of all European women and children from Peshawar the most serious feature of the situation.

Peshawar lies far up on the northwestern frontier, commanding the entrance to the famous Khyber Pass. The hills around it are the home of the most dangerous Indian tribes, chief among them being the Afridis and Mohmands, who are born fighting men. They are well armed and are a perpetual embarrassment to the British.

These tribes have no direct connection with the civil disobedience movement of Mahatman Gandhi but they have always been ready to take advantage of any difficulties facing the British. Thus the fear here is that the whole frontier may blaze—possibly on the Afghan side as well as the British—and Peshawar itself may be threatened.

TWO HARTFORD WOMEN HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

MERIDEN, April 25—(AP)—Two Hartford women were injured here early tonight when a truck laden with crushed stone crashed head-on into the sedan automobile in which they were riding on the Berlin road.

The injured are Mrs. Beatrice L. Fritsch, of 192 Church street, the driver of the sedan, and Miss Alice Hartung, of 85 Homestead avenue, both of Hartford. Mrs. Fritsch sustained lacerations and abrasions of the arm and two fractured ribs and is confined to the Meriden hospital. Miss Hartung was dismissed from the hospital after receiving treatment for hand lacerations.

NEGRO SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR BURGLARY

WINTON, N. C., April 25—(AP)—Harvey Lawrence, 19-year-old Negro, was convicted in Hertford county superior court today of first degree burglary, a capital offense in this state. He was sentenced by Judge Garland E. Midyette to die in the electric chair on July 23.

Lawrence was charged with entering the home of a prominent farmer, firing several shots and attempting to attack the farmer's wife. A detachment of state militia, a machine gun unit from Wilson, stood guard outside the courthouse during the trial.

MAN INSTANTLY KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

BANTAM, Conn., April 25—(AP)—Benjamin Parcells, 64, was instantly killed tonight in front of his home near here, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Silvio Celadon, of Torrington.

Parcells had just stepped from his truck and was crossing the highway when he was hit. Celadon, in an effort to avoid the accident, applied the brakes hard and the automobile skidded off the road into a boulder and then overturned. He was not hurt.

CLERGYMAN ON TRIAL FOR SHOOTING SEXTON

OTTAWA, Ill., April 25—(AP)—Sobs from the gallery—made up of women members of his congregation—mingled with his own today as Rev. James A. Wilson, Methodist preacher, took the witness stand to admit shooting the sexton of his church, but to deny intent to kill.

The minister described in detail the shooting, which took place when he and the sexton, Amos Elliott, and the sexton's wife, struggled for possession of a letter written by the minister to Mrs. Emma Wagner, a widow of his parish.

The letter, which the pastor said he sought to "get out of circulation," was read by him from the stand.

"Mrs. Wagner," it said, "This letter asks forgiveness. The matter has worried me more than anything else in my life. I have made a mistake—I wouldn't have been human if I had not and I won't be right with God until you forgive me.

"I have gone to Chicago to see a physician. While there I intended to end it all, but couldn't face my Maker without your forgiveness. I have meditated on the matter and have decided to ask your forgiveness.

"If you will give it to me, I will be the happiest man in the world. If you do not, I don't know what will happen."

He wrote the letter, Wilson said, because he had offended Mrs. Wagner with criticism about keeping a roomer.

"Isn't it because she became angry with you after you asked her to lead a life of shame with you?" he was asked by a cross-examiner. He was not allowed to answer.

LOBBY COMMITTEE ENDS EXAMINATION OF CURRAN

WASHINGTON, April 25—(AP)—Concluding a seven day examination of Henry H. Curran, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, the senate lobby committee, announced today that it would not inquire into confidential reports of the organization which discuss the attitude of certain members of the house of representatives toward prohibition.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, who made the announcement, said the reports were "so remotely connected with lobbying, if there was any connection at all, that the committee reached the conclusion that they ought not go into the record."

Newspaper Owners Oppose Five Day Week

Have Written a Letter to the I. T. Union Denouncing the Plan As Uneconomical.

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)—[illegible]erating its stand against the fiv[illegible] week, the American Newspaper P[illegible]lishers' association at the closing session of its annual convention today approved a letter written to the International Typographical union denouncing the plan as uneconomical.

The letter, written by Charles H. Taylor, of Boston, of the association's standing committee, was in reply to a request of Woodruff Randolph, secretary of the International union, that the publishers endorse the five-day week.

Mr. Taylor said that the plan was "unsound" and if adopted would be carried out at the expense of the publishers.

This action followed the acceptance yesterday of the standing committee's report carrying the recommendation that no publisher enter into a five-day week agreement with the printing trades unless a national policy is adopted and approved by both the A. N. P. A. and the International union.

New York city printers, who have demanded a five-day week with six-day pay, are seeking permission of the International union at Indianapolis to call a strike vote because the publishers have refused to grant their request.

The association adopted a resolution condemning the Minnesota "gag law," declaring it to be a violation of the first and 14th amendments of the constitution.

The publishers will hold their fall meeting at Sea Island Beach, Ga., in November, and voted to hold the 1932 fall meeting in Southern California.

A motion asking that next year's annual spring meeting here be lengthened to four days was referred to the board of directors.

For Transfer Of Dry Law Enforcement

S[illegible] Judiciary Committee [illegible]o Urges "Free Hand" For the Attorney General.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP)—Unanimously reporting the house bill for transfer of prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the justice department, the senate judiciary committee today urged upon the senate a "free hand" for the attorney general in administering the dry law.

The only change made in the Williamson bill as it was passed by the house was the removal of a provision for the transfer of employes and attorneys of the dry unit under Secretary Mellon to the prohibition bureau in the justice department. This was done, Chairman Norris explained, in order to give the attorney general freedom in the selection of his staff.

At the same time, the judiciary committee reported favorably to the senate measures authorizing four additional federal judges, including one for the southern district of New York and another for the southern district of California.

Chairman Norris said the judges were to meet emergency situations and this particular legislation was not necessarily involved in the prohibition program. Other bills for the relief of court congestion are still pending. The judge bills would give an additional circuit judge for each of the third and fifth circuit districts.

The Trademark.

Old silversmiths, in order to help people to tell pure silver from cheaper imitations, marked the real thing "sterling."

In a like manner manufacturers, who stand back of their wares, identify them with trademarks that are your guarantee of quality. By advertising these trademarks, they focus on their products the searchlight of attention.

Only good goods, fairly priced, can flourish in this light of publicity. For no merchandise and no business can thrive under the weight of public condemnation. That is why a merchant or a manufacturer places the whole reputation of his business at stake every time he advertises. His goods must be as advertised.

So in looking through The Bulletin remember this: The man who spends his money to invite your consideration of his wares backs up his belief in his goods and leaves the final decision to you.

It pays to read The Bulletin's advertisements. It pays to buy advertised products. Advertising is your protection.

SENATE SENDS HARRIS BILL BACK TO COMMITTEE

WASHINGTON, April 25—(AP)—After two weeks of debate and a score of roll calls, the senate today returned to committee the Harris bill proposing to place quota restrictions on immigration from Central and South America.

The vote, which was 34 to 30, killed the legislation for this session, in the opinion of leaders, and leaves the present immigration policy of the United States unchanged.

Senator Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota, moved to recommit the bill by Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, to the immigration committee after the senate became tangled over the basis for restriction of European immigration.

Consequently, European countries will be limited hereafter to 150,000 immigrants annually into this country, allotted among the various countries on the basis of the newly established national origins provision. No restrictions will apply to nations of this hemisphere.

FINED FOR THREATENING TO SHOOT PATROLMAN

BRIDGEPORT, April 25—(AP)—David C. Sanford, sixty, president and treasurer of the David C. Sanford Deoxidized Smelting Works here was fined $200 and costs by Judge W. J. Buckley, when arraigned in city court today on charges involving a threat to shoot Patrolman Daniel W. Dunn, if he dared enter Sanford's home, last February.

The patrolman had been summoned by Sanford's wife, who claimed she was being mistreated by her husband. As the policeman came to the door of the home, it was thrown open by Sanford, armed with a revolver and he is alleged to have threatened to kill Dunn if he made any attempt to enter. Dunn went for help and while absent Sanford left the house. Early in March Sanford surrendered to the police.

PROTEST DEMONSTRATION BY MERIDEN HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

MERIDEN, Conn., April 25—(AP)—About 30 boys absented themselves from the Meriden high school today and held a demonstration as a protest again against the board of education's recent action in failure to offer renewal contracts for the coming year to 15 local teachers on the ground that their places should be taken by Meriden men and women.

Almost three hours after the demonstration, which the insurgent pupils chose to call a "strike" started, police came to the school and, destroying a series of pasteboard signs the boys had made, chased them away from the building.

LOSS OF LIFE ON BURNED FREIGHTER THAMES FIXED AT 16; ONLY 10 SAVED

STAMFORD, April 25.—(AP)—Loss of life in the burning of the steamer Thames, freighter, of the Thames River line, New York to Bridgeport, in Long Island sound last night was fixed at 16 today through the fact that only ten of the crew were saved.

Coast guard vessels which cruised the sound near and wide off Sound Beach all day found no signs of missing men or wreckage which might have given a hold for a while to some sea or before he sank below the waves. A rough sea and low temperature made it unlikely that a man could have floated long unless in a boat and there were no traces of either lifeboat which had upset with their occupants.

The hulk of the Thames, driven on a reef off Tod's Point by its own power, steered possibly by a man at the wheel who died in the enveloping flames, burned all day. It was understood that the cargo included sugar, which accounted for the intenseness of the blaze which kept coast guardsmen and others from going aboard to see if any died on her. Seafaring men were of the opinion that any bodies would have been incinerated, as the fire destroyed almost the entire hull.

Six men were drowned in the upsetting of one boat, Chief Engineer Clarence Tibbetts, who was saved by a small craft, having seen them in the water without life belts and watched them go down one by one as he clung to the edge of the boat for an hour. He was hauled over the side of an oyster boat in the nick of time and today suffered little inconvenience from the exposure.

Pilot Leonard Hancourt, of Bridgeport, is among the missing and he may have been in the pilot house when the fire broke out and stayed there to beach the craft. Mr. and Mrs. Aren Larsen from their home in Sound Beach watched the steamer as it came a true course, all ablaze, from far out in the sound to the reef, but they saw no one leave the vessel.

Most of the men saved were off watch and when the fire was seen they made for the two lifeboats, which were on the windward side. Both upset when dropped overboard and those in Tibbetts' boat lost their life belts.

COMMUNISTS AND BANDITS ARE DEVASTATING CHINA

In Several Provinces Missionaries Were Said to Be In Danger—A Dispatch From Hankow Says a Red Army Has Sacked the Town of Shinte and Massacred 1,800 Men, Women and Children—Military Officers Have Offered a Reward of $100 For Every Communist Captured.

SHANGHAI, April 25—(AP)—Communistic and bandit armies today were reported looting, burning and slaying by wholesale in several provinces of China. Numerous missionaries were said to be in jeopardy and thousands of Chinese were reported massacred.

Nationalist government officials, whose troops have been ineffective, offered rewards for the capture of communists, who in turn offered prizes for the capture of foreigners, being quoted by missionaries as saying that "all foreigners should be killed." No deaths of foreigners, however, were reported.

Fresh from the bandit-scourged province of Kiangsi, Fathers Gately and Flaherty at Hongkong substantiated tales of depredations told by fellow priests, and gave no assurance of safety of sixteen American Catholic missionaries held in the city of Kanchow, besieged since early March by red armies. Nothing has been heard from them since April 4.

A red army, said dispatches from Hankow, had sacked the town of Shinte, Hupeh province, and massacred 1,800 men, women and children. Two thousand farmers, it was said, who had been compelled to join the communists army in that province, were killed by government troops in battle. Entire populations of nearby towns were evacuated to looters.

Transportation facilities in Shanghai were tied up in the foreign section by a strike of tramway and auto bus Chinese crews, who demanded increased pay and rice allowances. The authorities ascribed the strike to agents of communism, saying that it was but a part of the unprecedented disorders in various provinces.

Bandits and soldiers were reported battling in the coastal province of Chekiang. Routed by troops after a fight in which 300 bandits and fifty soldiers were slain, the bandits threatened to return and sack the town of Szenn from which they had been driven.

The governor of Kiangshi province was reported to have tendered his resignation to the Nanking government, professing inability to cope with bandit and red armies which for many months have looted and killed the populace.

Meeting at Chungking, province of Szechwan, military leaders offered a reward of $100 for every communist captured.

QUICK ACTION DEMANDED ON VETS' COMPENSATION

WASHINGTON, April 25—(AP)—Demands for quick action on the house bill to liberalize World war veterans' compensation, were made in the senate today by Senator George, democrat, Georgia, who threatened to move discharge of the finance committee if it did not quickly bring the measure to the floor.

The bill was passed yesterday by the house after more than 20 hours' debate. Senators Bratton, of New Mexico, and Ashurst, of Arizona, democrats, joined in the call for early action by the senate committee.

"I am not approving of all that is in that bill," George declared, "but much veterans' legislation has been held back by the finance committee of the senate without action although repeated demand has been made for action from time to time as to many important measures."

MIAMI, Fla., April 25—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at the Pan-American airport here at 4:57 p. m., today, after a flight from Washington. He will leave here tomorrow to inaugurate a new Central and South American air mail route.

Lindbergh announced that he would leave here at 2 p. m. tomorrow for Havana and will fly from there to Cristobal, C. Z., Sunday with one scheduled stop at Porto Cabezas, Nicaragua. He will leave Cristobal Thursday on the return trip, arriving in Miami on Friday.

MOVEMENT TO WITHDRAW NOMINATION OF PARKER

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP)—Moves to attain withdrawal of the nomination of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina to the supreme court were initiated today in the senate after leaders reached the conclusion that his confirmation was most doubtful.

With debate on the nomination due to open Monday, senate chieftains were busy lining up their forces today and at nightfall foes of Parker claimed a victory and his friends conceded they faced an uphill fight for his confirmation.

However there is no indication from the white house that Mr. Hoover will ask for the withdrawal. Hoping to avoid an open rupture in their party ranks, republicans are importuning friends of Judge Parker to seek the withdrawal.

FEVER EPIDEMIC TRACED TO GROUP OF AMAZON PARROTS

GENEVA, April 25—(AP)—The league of nations health department, following a world wide survey of psittacosis (or parrot fever), issued a report today saying that the epidemic of some month ago was traceable to a group of Amazon parrots exported from Brazil in the summer and fall of 1929.

The survey found that last year's epidemic produced a mortality rate of from 35 to 40 per cent.

TWO MEN KILLED IN SPEAKEASY BY YOUTH

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)—An admonition to a youth to "put away" a revolver he was brandishing cost two men their lives and put their brother into a hospital with serious wounds tonight. The shooting occurred in an alleged speakeasy in the heart of "Hell's Kitchen." Lawrence Lawlor, 28, who police said was acting bartender in the absence of his brother-in-law, Bartley Cronin, alleged owner of the resort, fell dead. Michael Lawlor, 35, died three hours later of wounds in the head and chest, while William Lawlor, 30, suffered wounds in the abdomen.

Michael and William Lawlor, sitting in a rear room of the resort, saw a youth enter with a revolver in his hand. Above the noisy music ground out by a player piano, they shouted to him to put it away. For reply he started firing.

Michael and William fell wounded. Lawrence, coming from behind the bar, called to the youth and the latter turned and fired at him. Lawrence fell dead. The youth then fled.

The Lawlors had first been reported as the owners of the alleged speakeasy, which is located at 500 Eleventh avenue, but police later corrected this report.

MADE 7,000-FOOT DIVE BY PLANE IN PUBLIC TEST

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., April 25.—(AP)—The mere thought of doing a 7,000-foot high dive, even in an airplane, would make most people turn pale. To Bill Crosswell, from Georgia, it's just part of the day's work.

Ten thousand feet above this army flying field today Bill kicked up the tail of his little silver biplane, pulled his throttle wide open and leaned over on the stick. Some 15 seconds later and 7,000 feet nearer earth he pulled the stick back again. He had been going 300 miles an hour.

"Get a thrill, Bill?" he was asked as he taxied up to the hangar and climbed smiling out of his plane, a two-place fighter being developed for the United States navy and today given its first public test. Bill just grinned.

Under the watchful eyes of R. L. Cacobs, civilian inspector for the navy department, Bill twice took aloft the little ship, which when fully equipped will carry three machine guns, make a speed of 150 miles an hour, and, it is hoped, do a power dive of 10,000 feet that would pull the ordinary airplane to pieces. The flights were its final tests before the navy pilots start trying to pull it apart.

HISTORIC CONFEDERATE LOCOMOTIVE DENIED TO FORD

ATLANTA, Ga., April 25.—(AP)—"Texas," the Confederate locomotive that made history when Sherman was marching through Georgia, cannot go north even for a visit to Henry Ford's museum.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale revealed today—the eve of Memorial day in Georgia—that he had refused representatives of Mr. Ford the privilege of taking the old iron rebel to his Detroit shops for rejuvenation.

Mr. Ford sought the engine recently for his museum, but was told it was the property of Georgia and must stay. Then representatives of Mr. Ford tried to borrow the locomotive but got the same answer.

Texas went north one time—north Georgia. Federal troops captured its sister, "General," near Marietta, and ran it north, destroying the road as they traveled. "Texas" figured in recapture of "General" and is dear to the heart of Georgia.

"General" stands in a railroad station at Chattanooga.

Trucks of the city street department will cover the entire city Friday, May 2, and they will carry away anything in refuse or rubbish, except garbage, left on the sidewalks.

Arnold and H. A. Bugbee, a committee to select the accountants to do the work, and appropriate $10,000 to defray the cost. In order to clear the records a vote will also be taken to reconsider the action taken at the special town meeting April 9, in reference to an audit and examination as recorded in the minutes of the town clerk.

District Forest Fire Warden John M. Riley and Deputy Warden Elmer H. Foote had a force of about a dozen volunteers at work early Wednesday evening fighting a brush fire which swept over a tract of about five acres on the old Strong property just north of the town woods, in the northern section of town. Quick work with the hand pumps resulted in the blaze being extinguished before it had destroyed any of the thickly wooded areas nearby.

In 1875 she was united in marriage with Arthur Bill of Norwich, who died many years ago. Surviving is a sister, Mrs. Ida M. Abel, of Lebanon; four daughters, Mrs. Florence Barrows and Miss Lucy Bill of Hughsdale, R. I., Mrs. Alice Starr of Lebanon and Mrs. Fannie Hazelwood of Boston. ANNOUNCEMENTS

In keeping with the joy and brightness of the spring season, heralding the playtime of the year, the Broadway has booked one of the liveliest attractions of the year for the opening today of William Haines in his latest uproar of merriment, "The Girl Said No." In this festive story, the saucy "Bill" is a brash young college grad who attempts to crash the gates of the business world via a broker's office and his bungling attempts to put over important business deals, his lack of deference to office superiors, his rash advances to the lovely secretary of the boss, are responsible for gales of laughs. That "Bill" is not only a comedian but a first-class actor as well, is demonstrated, when on returning from a whoopee party he finds his Dad has suddenly passed away, and the responsibilities of the family are his, in which Haines puts across a memorable bit of real acting. Fun is paramount, however, throughout the picture, and the wise-cracking William is aided and abetted by Marie Dressler in a typically rowdy role, and Polly Moran, weeping more copiously than ever, Leila Hyams is the blonde menace who "No's" when

WILLIAM HAINES

Bill "yesses," but he solves his problems as only Haines can do. Francis X. Bushman, Jr., William V. Mong, Clara Blandick, and Junior Coghlan are prominent in the cast. The surrounding program is equally joyous, including the famous "Our Gang" in "Shivering Shakespeare," a riotous comedy which introduces some of the new members of "The Gang," and a featured comedy specially booked for the benefit of the golfers of Norwich and vicinity, with Walter Hagen and Leo Diegel, the world's greatest, in "Match Play," a fast and side-splitting story of the mashies, the niblicks and especially the "19th Hole." A Paramount song novelty, "After the Ball," with Chas. K. Harris, the author, leading in the singing, and the latest Paramount Sound News completes the bill. Announcement is made on the Broadway screen of a young lady's complete summer outfit, which is soon to be given to a patron of the theatre, and consisting of a latest style gown, lingerie, stockings, and red fox scarf.

Palace Theatre

New scenes of backstage life and something entirely different in motion pictures is promised in "Puttin' on the Ritz," which will be shown at the Palace theatre today and which will continue to play there until Tuesday of next week. "Puttin' on the Ritz" is a rollicking screen romance which has a large cast of well-known stars headed by Harry Richman and Joan Bennett with music written especially for the picture by Irving Berlin.

This production shows not only the backstage lives of the stars and the lesser actors but it depicts the struggle which is carried on by a large majority who are living in low class hotels and the nooks and corners of boarding houses which they call home. It shows them in poverty and riches, some happy and some despairing.

Harry Richman plays the part of Harry Raymond a song plugger in a publishing house. He struggles along until he joins a troupe of vaudeville performers. There are two girls in the act, Dolores and Goldie, and they travel the small-time circuits. Harry and Dolores get a chance to perform on Broadway and their prosperity is too much for Harry.

Christmas Eve Harry throws a big party for his friends. The old troupers are invited, too. Goldie overhears a group discussing him and when they call him a clown and drink to his health as such it is too much for the loyal Goldie and she tells him. This is a great blow to Harry and he gets very drunk to forget it all. When his own liquor is finished he seizes a flask belonging to someone else. He drains the flask and suddenly everything becomes a blackness. He has been blinded by the poison.

Times get worse and worse for Harry after this and he looks for nothing except adversity. He can no longer act or compose and were it not for the good friends of this trouping days he would have been destitute. Dolores in the meantime has risen to stardom and one evening while at the theatre the sound of her voice gives him the strength and courage that he needs. The story ends with many surprises and the charming and irresponsible Harry makes right the folly of his former days.

This picture is part of the Spring Festival which began in all Warner Brothers theatres April 20 and which will continue until June 5. At this time Warner Brothers set the standard for the pictures which will be shown in their theatres throughout the coming year. And don't forget, hold everything. The famous Al Jolson in Mammy is coming to the Palace next Saturday.

Pontiac Six on Get-Away

One of the most essential features of the present day motor car, according to Albert C. Hine, president of The A. C. Hine company of Hartford, state distributor of the Oakland V eight and the Pontiac Six is fast get-away. "The car that is slow in getting under way in traffic is in the way," said Mr. Hine. "And if it is a little slow on the road it is also in the way. Present day conditions demand speed with safety, in other words traffic has become largely a matter of keeping out of the other fellow's way. One slow car on the road may tie up a mile of traffic.

"The owner of a Pontiac six will not have to worry about being in the way for this new six is fast on the getaway and will show its heels to many of the larger and more powerful cars. We have demonstrated to our own satisfaction that Pontiac is more than ordinarily a powerful and fast car. A series of tests which we conducted last week proved conclusively that Pontiac will do a mile in 54 4-5 seconds. From a start of ten miles an hour it climbed the west slope of Avon mountain in 1 minute, 39 4-5 seconds. At the top of the grade it was making 52 miles an hour; from a standing start it climbed the same elevation in 1 minute and 45 seconds and finished the top of the grade at 51 miles an hour.

"Acceleration tests were also interesting. From a standing start to 30 miles an hour required but 6 seconds. Forty miles an hour were reached in 9 2-5 seconds, 50 miles an hour in 16 1-2 seconds and 60 miles an hour in 27 seconds. These figures tell a convincing story." The Uncas Motor company is the Norwich associate dealer of The A. C. Hine company.

SPRING FESTIVAL WEEK AT BRADLEY STARTS APRIL 27

Along with other theatres on the circuit, the Interstate Theatre corporation is running Spring Festival Week from April twenty-seven to May 3, at the Bradley theatre at Putnam. The interior and exterior of the house is decorated in gala style with pennants, banners and special signs for the occasion. Jim Mahoney, manager of the Bradley, announces that programmes of unusual merit have been booked for the entire week. Top notch features, comedies and news reels have been carefully selected and everything is in readiness for the big celebration. This festival week is the opening gun of a campaign to keep all the latest hits playing in rapid succession, week after week.

Spring Festival week will start off Sunday, April 27th with a bang, with "The Golden Calf," starring El Brendel, Sue Carol, Marjorie White and Jack Mulhall, as the feature attraction. On the same bill will be seen, Laurel and Hardy, cinema's princes of mirthmaking, in their latest comedy riot, "The Brats."

THE GARDEN

By REX REES

Iris

Yesterday a lady customer came into my gardens and said: "I have not come to buy, but for advice. I am a great lover of iris and I have begged iris from my friends and have been given iris by the surload almost until my garden is over-run with it, and it is all of it old-fashioned and out of date, but I can't bear to dig it up; and yet I know I will have to or there will be no place for any other flowers. I am in a rut; you must please help me out. Tell me what to do, and make me do it."

I replied: "First let your iris alone until after it has bloomed. Enjoy the flowers this coming June and then dig them all out, reset those that you love best and give the rest to your friends. In the meantime, visit iris gardens; the very best, by all means. You are in close proximity to two of the finest iris gardens in our country, the Glen Roads Iris Gardens at Wellesley, Mass., and the Hartford Iris Garden, and you can visit the Pilgrim Iris Gardens where a very choice collection exists. Then you can make a selection to suit your mind and your pocketbook. A few of the very latest and some of the older standard varieties which have not been excelled by any of the newer and, of course, higher priced ones. One thing you will want to observe in your choice of newer varieties is whether the flower is fragrant or not. Fragrance should always be taken into account in the points upon which an iris is rated because this is an important factor in determining its beauty and desirability just as much as it is in the rose and the peony. But too little regard has been paid to it in the past.

"The symposium published by the American Iris society in 1928 is, on the whole, a valuable reference for anyone interested in iris. In this symposium there are listed 679 varieties and rated as to their exhibition and garden value. Of these 679 varieties, 236 are rated higher as an exhibition flower than a garden flower, 118 as of even value, and 235 are rated as having a higher value as a garden flower. What you are to understand by exhibition rating is being cut, put in a milk bottle set on a shelf, to be admired by a crowd. Garden rating is the iris as it stands in the garden surrounded by nature's setting, and one of the things I cannot understand is why a flower on exhibition can have a higher rating than a flower in the garden. Now you see why you want to see the iris you are going to buy to stock your new iris garden. Now you cannot go wrong in buying the following varieties, because no American hybridizer has produced finer iris than William Mohr, Frieda Mohr, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, and San Francisco. I speak of American iris rather than European iris, because the importation of iris is a risky business, and is tied up with a lot of red tape, and accompanied by the hazard that some of the rhizomes will rot or become practically dead en route. The U. S. government controls the stock for two years, and you cannot sell or give it away without permission. It is far more satisfactory to buy of American hybridizers than to try to get stock from abroad. I would not discourage you, however, in that, because M. Cayeux stands at the head of the world's hybridizers of iris. He has long made iris his study and has bred some wonderful varieties. We Americans cannot envy him when we realize that the Fleur de Lys has for hundreds of years been embroidered upon the banners of France. It is indeed most fitting that a Frenchman should be the world's most famous hybridizer of iris.

"When you are ready to buy your new iris after your garden has bloomed I will give you a list of the newer and better iris which you can plant immediately after, as iris will grow if planted any time from April to November. You want the list now? Well, here it is, and I can recommend it because you can buy the rhizomes in groups of three for $1 per variety. You perhaps can buy them even cheaper than that, and, furthermore, I would advise you to see the gardens at Wellesley when in flower. You will get what you order and you are not always sure of that if you buy here and there, as I have proved to my entire satisfaction.

"Because of the low price of this list do not think the quality is cheap; for when you can secure Madam Gaudichau Dream, Phyllis Bliss, Kashmir White Crusader, and Delicatissima you know you are getting the very finest of iris quality.

"I think it would be a hard task to furnish a finer list than the following: Aurora, Black Prince, Cluny, Corrida, Crusader, Delicatissima, Dream, Georgia, Hautefille, Kashmir White, Lent A. Williamson, Lord of June, Mary Orth, Medrano, Nancy Orne, Phyllis Bliss, Prospero, Queen Caterina, Sindjkha, Troost, Zua and Zwannenberg.

"If you want higher priced iris it can be bought all the way from $5 to $100, and up. I am glad you are going to have your new iris garden for next year. For $100 you ought to get what you really want."

JEWETT CITY

STATE STANDS READY TO AID IN ROAD IMPROVEMENT

Warden E. J. Jodoin has received a letter from Division Engineer John Smith in Norwich that the state of Connecticut is willing to cooperate with the borough of Jewett City in building the new cement state road, to extend from curb to curb, at points on Main and North Main streets from Slater avenue to Green avenue. It was also learned today that probable resetting of some considerable extent of the granite curb, made necessary on account of change in grade at points on Main street and Park square, may be taken care of by the contractor, if the state's proposition is accepted.

Borough officials state that the shoulders, if put in by the borough, the curbing reset and new grades established, the cost would be likely to exceed the amount asked by the state. Warden Jodoin has decided to call a special meeting for Monday, when the free men will have an opportunity to act.

Local trout fishing ardor, along with the weather, has cooled to a considerable degree since the season opened less than two weeks ago. An angler fished two miles of brook Friday and reports not meeting a man, while on the same stream the day the law went off, "The fishermen," he says, "Were near enough to borrow matches and swap bait the whole distance."

He says some of the party missed a meal or two during the trip, as they ran into a two-day storm coming across from the canal, adding, "We shall all be glad to see home again!" The Ross party is now registered at the Hotel McAlpin, New York.

The time goes back to standard, September 28th, at 2 a. m.

White Leghorns The Favorites

With one man receiving two shipments of baby chicks with a total of 4,000, a pretty near check-up shows that to date, close to 15,000 have been received by parcel post at the local office. Of this number fully 90 per cent were white leghorns. One man calls attention to a change in people's fancy, when he says that five years ago over 75 per cent that were received locally were R. I. reds and Plymouth rocks. Three years ago one man bought 50 black Minorcas from Pennsylvania. Today a careful search would be necessary to locate one of this breed in Griswold. The buff cochin, once to be found on any farm in this vicinity, is now seldom seen. The Wild Acres farm in Lisbon, which once handled several standard breeds now raises only white leghorns, and is shipping thousands every week.

During the recent insurance campaign being conducted at the Ashland mills, "Bub" Benjamin called Amos Philips on the telephone at the Hopeville power plant. "Who do you want to make beneficiary?" asked Bub. "Oh, I haven't caught any yet," replied Amos.

Early spring flower hunters, find that the right of way for the approach to the new Quinebaug viaduct, on the Sylvandale end, runs right through one of the very few places in eastern Connecticut, where spring beauty grew, flourished and blossomed, being a close second to trailing arbutus, that grows on the Read hillside not far away. One woman, this week searched a little off the beaten track at the bottom of the bank and did find two stray blossoms. On the 13th of April, 1898, a party of amateur botanists came here from Norwich in a two horse carry-all, for the sole purpose of seeing spring beauty in blossom. E. F. Burleson piloted the party to the spot, which is near his home, where they saw hundreds of the delicate blossoms. One woman from Norwich Falls, a semi-pro botanist, "took up" a few plants to set out near her home. Ten years later she reported that they never blossomed after the next spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel L. Phillips are home from a short visit in Florida. The wonderful descriptions the former gives of the Bok singing tower and other points of interest in the Peninsula state that afforded especial pleasure to his party are worth while to hear.

Mrs. W. A. Richardson, when she returned earlier in the week from a month's visit in Orange City, Fla., brought a dozen cuttings from the seminole cactus, which she has distributed among her friends.

The local schoolboys entered in the Grammar School league, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A., have already played several games. Wednesday they went to Sterling and were defeated by a narrow margin; Thursday they played Moosup at Wauregan and were badly beaten. It looks at this time as if Moosup will walk away with the championship of this district.

The local P. T. A. is especially active, these days, getting ready for a public supper at an early date.

Monday next, April 28th, in connection with the monthly Well Child conference, there will be a Summer Roundup. All parents who have children expecting to enter school in the fall are being urged to bring them to the Men's club rooms between 2 and 4, when Dr. A. E. Ingraham of the state department of health will give them a thorough physical and mental examination. Those who have regard for their children's welfare will certainly avail themselves of this opportunity offered by the state.

Complaints of unsanitary conditions in a lot opposite Evergreen cemetery, where rubbish of many kinds is dumped on private land. Notices have been posted by the owner of the land but they have no effect. At a recent meeting of the North Plainfield Cemetery association the matter was brought up as persons living out of town, owners of local cemetery lots have complained of the conditions. The caretaker has interviewed people while they are dumping there, and they give excuses about it, which have proved to be untrue.

DANIELSON

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND FUNERAL OF MRS. SHIPPEE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 25—This afternoon relatives and many friends were at East Killingly for the funeral services for Mrs. Emeline Shippee, mother of State Bank Commissioner Lester E. Shippee of Hartford. Prayer service was at home, conducted by Rev. Walter B. Greene, pastor of the Woodlawn Baptist church, Pawtucket, and a former pastor at East Killingly.

Rev. Mr. Greene also conducted the service at the Union Baptist church, where the funeral congregation was large. During the service Bernard L. Mullins of Hartford sang Abide With Me, and Lead Kindly Light. The organist was Ralph M. Lowry of Hartford. Benediction was by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong, pastor of the Danielson Baptist church, and regularly conducting services at the Union Baptist church in East Killingly.

Burial was in Westfield cemetery, Danielson, the committal service conducted by Rev. Mr. Greene. Bearers were three sons, Lester E., Dana and Arthur Shippee; two sons-in-law, Walter Card of Athol, Mass., and Bernard Brown of Providence, and a nephew, Frank Place of Chepachet.

The floral pieces, coming from relatives, friends, banks and other institutions throughout the state were in great number and of surpassing beauty. Three automobiles were required to bring them from the church to the cemetery. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Very beautiful new lines of dresses in prints, georgettes and chiffons, exceptional values—at $10.50, $16.50 and $25.00. The Alice-Eleanor Shop.—Adv.

John Higgins, who has covered the eastern section of the town from the vicinity of Old Killingly pond southward along the Sterling and Plainfield borders, reported in this afternoon that he has finished the census taking for that part of Killingly. He has enumerated 1150 people in what is largely an agricultural area. No comparative figures were available today to check up on what the population in that section was in 1920. However, of the approximately 40 farms on which Mr. Higgins checked 20 were idle farms; that is, the people living on them are not producing crops or doing other ordinary farm work. It is a matter of interest, nevertheless, that out of the 1150 enumerated only five were unemployed, so things can't be so bad in that part of Killingly.

Newly elected officers of Warren chapter, R. A. M., for the ensuing year are: High priest, John T. Ashworth; king, Horace Burdick; scribe, Ernest Dyson; recorder, John Marland; treasurer, Frank T. Preston; captain of the host, Louis S. Ingalls; principal sojourner, Hubert Taylor, royal arch captain, Marion C. Young; sentinel, Arthur W. Logee; trustee for three years, A. M. Thompson. Appointments by Mr. Ashworth as grand masters of the veils are: Charles Carver, Arthur F. Bruton, T. Clifford Davis.
F. Burton, T. Clifford Davis.

Attorney Harry E. Back, Danielson, Miss Abby Keith, Putnam and Rev. J. W. Carter, Jewett City, were the judges last evening at the final contest of the members of the junior class of Plainfield high school for the awards offered each year for superiority along this line. The event was at the high school in Central Village.

The judges were agreed that first award should go to Miss Isabelle Heneault, whose parents formerly were residents of Danielson; second to Frances Babcock and third to Maybelle Carpenter. These contestants were selected to compete in the final test after an elimination contest in which all members of the junior class of the school were privileged to compete.

The playing of the high school orchestra was a special treat to those attending the affair.

All was set this evening for the change of time at the week end. Clicking along on standard time until midnight Saturday, the business, banking and manufacturing interests of Danielson have made their arrangements to be at work an hour earlier Monday morning, though the timepieces by which they will continue to measure the working day will read as though an hour had not been temporarily stolen from old Father Time. The little operation of taking out the hour for the time being will be performed either Saturday night or Sunday, as one wills. On Monday morning, however, fast time will be in effect, and until the fall season is here again.

Newly elected officers of Minnitexit Hook and Ladder company are: Captain, Vincent Gartland; Adrian Macdonald, lieutenant; Harry W. Clarke, treasurer; Chester Billington, secretary. Captain Gartland is to make the committee appointments.

The name this company bears—Minnitexit—dates back a great many years, far beyond the memory of anyone now living here and is historically connected with the early days of Danielson.

Officers of the Brooklyn Fire district, once a part of the borough of Danielson, but long since set off by itself, are making ready their annual reports for presentation at the annual meeting on May 5. This fire district is just across the bridge over the Quinebaug bridge from Danielson proper. While it all actually is within the limits of the town of Brooklyn, it is to all intents and purposes, insofar as the things of everyday life go, a part of this community.

In addition to hearing reports of district officers on the date mentioned the voters will elect officers for the ensuing year.

Newly elected officers of Montgomery council, No. 2, for the ensuing year are: T. I. M., Homer C. Brown; I. D. M., Horace Burdick; I. P. C., Louis S. Ingallas; C. G., John T. Ashworth; C. C., Ira A. Warren; treasurer, Frank T. Preston; recorder, Howard G. Franklin; steward, Charles B. Carver; sentinel, Arthur W. Logee; trustee for three years, Frederick E. Bitgood.

Delegates from towns in this section will be in Hartford Saturday to discuss with other delegates from various parts of Connecticut a Better Roads plan, which undoubtly will be before the state legislature when it convenes for the 1931 session. The idea is, in effect, to put properties, especially farms, on what may be considered state highways. This does not mean concrete highways, but highways that have been improved to that degre, where they will be comfortably passable at all times of the year—good serviceable roads throughout every twelve months. In Killingly, for example, there is a motor car at about every farm place. Many of them have trucks. Conditions are not dis-similar in other nearby towns. Owners of these properties feel that they should not be subjected to the chance, during the winter and spring seasons, of having their machines tied up because of poor roads, not to mention the handicap imposed upon them and the work they are trying to do. It is generally admitted they have a good argument. The plan now is to consolidate sentiment in sufficient degree to impress the legislature when it meets again.

NO. GROSVENORDALE

Under the auspices of the junior class "Chintz Cottage," a three-act comedy by Beulah King, was presented at Tourtellotte Memorial high school Thursday evening at 8. Following was the cast: Minty, a charmingly attractive girl of 20, (Miss Gladys Evans) bored with society, cames from the city to rusticate in the remote village of Meadowbank. She brings with her a maid (Miss Doris Bousquet) and settles down for a stay in peace and quiet. Then the lid blows off and one exciting event follows another. Minty does not rest but gets a change and incidentally falls heir to a husband. Minty's aunt, Miss Tillingtop, (Miss Sara Rhodes) is "a boss" with a matrimonial eye on Mr. Kent. Mr. Kent is played by Peter Demeter. George Tefft is the innocent cause of most of the trouble while his sister, Grace (Miss Mary Brew) helps him in and out of several predicaments. Mrs. Dean, Mr. Kent's sister-in-law (Miss Sylvia Dartt) has a part, excellent though short.

PUTNAM

RESIGNATION OF REV. ENGLISH IS EFFECTIVE JUNE 1ST

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 25—At a meeting of the Congregational church held last evening in the parlors of the church on Main street, the resignation of Rev. James F. English was accepted with regrets. The resignation of the well known clergyman is to become effective on June 1, at which time Mr. English will leave to become pastor of a Congregational church in Manchester, N. H.

Attorney Ernest C. Morse was appointed chairman of a committee, of which State Attorney H. C. Bradford and Miss Gertrude Warner are members, to select and extend a call to Mr. English's successor. A meeting of the trustees of the church took place immediately after the church session.

Agents of the Providence, R. I., division of the U. S. Secret Service bureau are continuing their investigation of the circumstances surrounding the arrest of Socrates George, Southbridge bootlegger now under arrest in Providence on a charge of passing counterfeit money. George, with John T. Cudworth, also Southbridge, was arrested in this city several days ago when an automobile in which they were riding was found to contain 60 gallons of alcohol. Putnam police waived charges against them, when the federal officers presented their more important case against George and Cudworth. Since his arrest the Providence officers have endeavored to bring about the apprehension of the counterfeiters, said to reside in New York, who make regular visits to Springfield, according to information, and unload the spurious federal reserve notes at a price of $40 for hundred dollar lots. George is being held in Providence awaiting disposition of charges through federal channels. Cudworth who was arraigned in Norwich before United States Commissioner Mathewson yesterday following his arrest in this city, is awaiting trial in the federal court.

Piscatory "mess" was sounded yesterday for all the fish in Windham county waters when County Game Warden Thomas G. Daniels of Plainfield and Warden George H. Liard of this city, acting as chef and headwaiter respectively, served the hungry fish, who have found it hard picking this season so far, with a full course dinner consisting of 5,200,000 perch eggs.

The undeveloped fish of the perch species were sent out from the state hatcheries to be released in the ponds and brooks as food for the older water citizens. The fry, which are not matured are very small in size. They are contained in mesh baskets and a quantity was set out in every water body to be released from their confining quarters at a later date to be swallowed for food by the larger fish.

So small and numerous were the eggs that they were described by Warden Liard as presenting the appearance of tapioca pudding. However, the perch will solve the food question for the county fish who to date have been unable to find only worms on anglers hooks, which apparently are not as tasty and as relishing as they might be.

The plan of feeding the fish with spawn is comparatively new. In this way the food will serve to make fish more plentiful, since the fry perch fortunate enoug lto escape the jaws of a hungry bass or pickerel will upon reaching maturity, become perch, a species appealing to most anglers.

Time will steal an hour's march on Putnam as well as the rest of the state at two o'clock Sunday morning, so in order to be on time for Sunday services in most churches, theatres and other places of public gathering, it is suggested that clocks be advanced one hour Saturday evening upon retiring. Unofficially, daylight saving or fast time will be recognized and abided by Sunday. The railroad schedules will be advanced an hour, according to announcements made last week from the executive offices of the New Haven road. Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin in commenting on the prospective naugaration of daylight saving time today said, "Presuming that the town of Putnam advances its clocks Sunday to conform with the summer fast time schedule, Putnam high school sessions will open Monday morning at 8.30 o'clock daylight saving time."

The statement of the school officials will be of interest to the residents of Putnam Heights, Sawyer district and Pomfret, where standard time will be observed throughout the summer season. In past years the school board has made it a point to conduct the high school sessions on standard time in order that the pupils attending school from the outlying districts might not be put to any disadvantage. This year the school committee changed the opening regulations from 8 o'clock to 8.30 and will operate the school on fast time, believing the opening hour to be satisfactory to everyone concerned.

There will be a number of nautical sports fans seated at vantage spots along the Cotton river bridge course of the Quinebaug river, Saturday, when the boat crews of Pomfret school shove off in their shells for the first time this season against the Columbia university freshman oarsmen. The semi-final races will be between Pomfret and the Springfield college crews. The Pomfretians in recent workouts on the Quinebaug have shown excellent form and have set satisfactory time marks.

J. Dyer Potter, treasurer of the Cargill Trust company said yesterday that contractors do not expect to complete work on the new bank quarters on Main street until about June 1. The stone workers haxe experienced a handicap by delays in the shipment of sone and marble from the quarries.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Patent Button Co. Waterbury

In 1799, the founder of The Patent Button company, Alfred Platt, came from his native town, Newtown, to locate in Waterbury. He was of an inventive and mechanical turn of mind as were his two sons, William S. Platt and Clark M. Platt. William Platt acquired the art of rolling sheet zinc and was the first to produce it successfully in Waterbury. He also invented machinery for manufacturing buttons from sheet zinc, and on April 1, 1847, Alfred Platt with his two sons, began the manufacture of buttons. This was the beginning of The Patent Button company.

There is probably no place in the Naugatuck valley where the progress of inventive skill is better illustrated than in this factory, where William Platt and Clark Platt were active during their entire lives, patenting many inventions in machines and various styles of buttons. Today there are nearly 200 patents for buttons and machines registered in the name of The Patent Button company.

We might well say that the manufacture of metal buttons was the foundation of the great industry of Waterbury, from which it derives its title "The Brass Center of the World," and the first concern in the world to produce those metal overall buttons as fastened with machines, was The Patent Button company. To this day, they hold the leadership in the manufacture of such buttons.

The present officers of the company are: Lewis J. Hart, president and treasurer; Leonard R. Carley, vice president; Alfred Hart, secretary.

OUR FOREST AND PARK LAND

Evidences continue to pile up, to show the approval and appreciation of the work that is being done by the Connecticut Forest and Park association for the preservation of natural beauty spots, park and forest land. The latest contribution to the People's forest, in Barkhamsted, up in Litchfield county, permits the acquisition of 33 acres to that public camp ground, bringing it up to over 65 acres as a part of the forest itself, which has 1,550 acres. This gift by Mrs. Harris Whittemore of Naugatuck, in memory of her husband, may well serve to inspire others to similar efforts, even as many in the past have been encouraged to similar contributions. That the forest as it now stands represents the gifts of more than 300 individuals and associations shows with what favor the idea has been received.

Gradually is Connecticut reaching the goal that has been set by the association for its forestry program. With the 17 state forests covering 51,000 acres, there is more than a quarter of the desired acreage secured. It may be some years before the entire amount is secured but through steady growth and increased interest the goal is by no means unreasonable, and when it is reached it will mean that there will be preserved for future generations those areas of native Connecticut which should bring forth due appreciation of the foresight of those who conceived and carried out the idea.

Already there is opportunity for such appreciation as we note the various park and forest areas which have been provided for the enjoyment of all those who are interested. It is always easy to despoil forest land by axe or by fire. It is by no means as easy to restore it. Reforestation work requires years of effort and while the restoration is underway there is no recompense for the finished beauty.

Thus while there is much merit in the work of restoring forest lands, there cannot be overlooked the importance of preserving that which ought to be reserved for the pleasure of this and coming generations. Connecticut is doing in its own way what is most commendable. It is following a policy which is manifesting itself in one way and another in different states, but all striving for the same general results.

JUDGE PARKER'S CASE

Next week the senate will take up the report of the judiciary committee to which was referred the nomination of Judge Parker as an associate justice of the United States supreme court. The report is against the nomination. Ordinarily committee reports are respected, but there promises to be a fight on the floor of the senate for confirmation. Inasmuch as that is to be made there must be some prospect of success.

Judge Parker's nomination was regarded as an excellent one, but aside from the apparent willingness to embarrass the administration, even as in the case of Chief Justice Hughes, objections have been raised to the decision of Judge Parker in one labor case and opposition has come from Negro organizations. Apparently the committee has accepted these objections. Just why the committee did not carry out the plan to call Judge Parker before it to ascertain his attitude direct has not been made clear, except that there was fear that he would quickly eliminate all objections and make it impossible to send in an adverse report.

In the labor case it has been shown that the decision which was made by Judge Parker was based upon a decision of the United States supreme court which dealt with a similar situation to that involved. Certainly it is to be expected that a judge will be controlled by the law, and the law that has been upheld by the supreme court, rather than the appeal of some organization to go contrary to the law.

As for his attitude which has developed objection from Negro organizations, it doesn't appear that he has been unfair to them in his position as judge. As a matter of fact, he held unconstitutional a step that was undertaken in Richmond which would have excluded Negroes from certain sections of the city, but it doesn't appear that he was given any credit for upholding the law in such a circumstance. As a matter of fact, the opposition to the judge appears to be more a matter of votes in the coming election than the desire to put on the bench of the highest court a man who has demonstrated his fitness. Certainly the need is for one who can and will interpret the law without favoritism and the determination to carry the fight for his confirmation to the floor of the senate is only what is justified.

DR. OLAYA'S VISIT

As if the visit of President Hoover to South American countries, following his election but before inauguration, had been his inspiration, President-elect Olaya of Colombia is making a visit to this country. He makes it clear that it is for the purpose of cementing the friendship of the people of the two countries, and there is certainly reason for any move that can be made in such a direction.

There was a time when such a visit would have been out of the question. The relationship between the United States and Colombia has not always been what it should have been. There were the days when Colombia was feeling anything but friendly. It was unwilling to ratify the treaty that was negotiated relative to the canal and, as a result, it lost Panama and it never got over that until it was agreed that the United States should pay Colombia $25,000,000. That adjustment has been made, improved relations have followed and now we see the president-elect of that country coming here on a mission of good will. Even though it is evident that there is back of it the fact that Colombia is desirous of securing a loan for the development of its resources, it none the less demonstrates a different attitude and one that should prevail among the nations of the western hemisphere.

It must have long since been apparent to Colombia that the position of the United States was not that of an overpowering nation, seeking to benefit at the expense of the smaller ones. What it has done has resulted to the great advantage of all involved and many more. The benefit of the canal cannot be questioned. It has contributed benefits to international shipping, to the entire western coast of South America, to the Central American countries and while it has secured advantages itself they have by no means been withheld from others.

Colombia, there is reason for believing, has had an opportunity to see the error of its attitude. It may have been slow to acknowledge it but it is a significant act on the part of Dr. Olaya that he should come here and express himself as he has. It should mean much for the future.

RURAL ROAD ORGANIZATION

It was inevitable that those interested in the betterment of rural roads should perfect just such an organization as that which was formed yesterday at Hartford. It is apparently made up of those who are interested in such road improvement in the various sections of Connecticut and it discloses a serious effort to get results through organized efforts.

Just what the policy and program of the organization will be will be awaited with interest. As for the need of better country roads there is no question. It has been manifested repeatedly but it has suffered from the lack of organization and the development of a fixed policy.

Whatever is undertaken it must be apparent that greater progress will be assured through the presentation of a reasonable program. The idea of doubling the tax on gasoline or loading down the state with a huge bond issue, when such excellent results have been obtained under the pay-as-you-go policy, can hardly be expected to make a convincing appeal. The problem should be tackled and the solution sought with a desire to get the fullest benefit possible for country highway work but with due regard for the need of preventing the piling up of burdens. If a certain portion of the funds which are now available each year for state highway construction could be employed for the improvement of country roads it would be possible to accomplish beneficial results, and such funds would go much farther in the building of such highways than it does now in the putting down and rebuilding of permanent highways.

No one expects a boulevard of cement on the back roads, but there is justification for the desire that there be built and maintained a type of road that will permit of highway use during all seasons of the year and that will aid in the development of sections of the state which are now handicapped by lack of proper highway facilities.

DAYLIGHT SAVING

It is such an old story now that most of the people of Connecticut will automatically turn their clocks an hour ahead tonight when retiring, thus placing them on the daylight saving schedule so that they will arise an hour earlier Sunday and succeeding mornings, without being obliged to stop and figure every time they look at a time piece that the daily routine is being advanced 60 minutes.

Throughout this state there are very few communities but what will adhere to the daylight saving schedule, therefore overcoming much of that confusion which prevails while an effort is made to stick to standard time during the next few months while most everybody is on the other schedule. And what is being done in Connecticut is generally being followed in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Thus southern New England and such communities as desire in New York state are on a common basis, while many other states and cities will be found getting the benefits of daylight saving.

Putting the clock ahead the last Sunday in April and turning it back an hour at the end of September has been followed for so many years that it has become a habit. It cannot be said that all opposition to it has disappeared and it is so long since the war that its benefit on that score is no longer needed, but there has developed an appreciation of the added hour of daylight which automatically comes through an adjustment of the clock, which there is no willingness to abandon. It is an arrangement which makes a favorable appeal to the great majority in this part of the country.

EDITORIAL NOTES

April made it possible to revive the annual claim that the peach crop will be a failure.

Now that the dawn mower has been put into operation, it will not be possible to keep the straw hat in restraint much longer.

With another American kidnaped in Mexico, our neighbor to the south isn't making a very strong bid for American tourist trade.

Don't forget to turn your clock ahead an hour tonight and thus put daylight saving into effect until the last Sunday in September.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

There are some people who have loomed up so big in human history that posterity cannot afford to let their names perish. The writer has particularly in mind the Marquis de Lafayette as he pens this sentence. On April 26, 1777, this great lover of liberty sailed from his native land to become a volunteer in the Revolutionary army. No one but an ardent lover of liberty would have undertaken such a perilous step for Lafayete knew perfectly well what would have been his lot had the insurgents lost their cause. There are reasons for believing if the American patriots had not been blessed with such consummate tacticians as Lafayette, the Frenchman, and Baron Von Steuben, the German, Washington a few years later would not have received the sword of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown. As it was a case of liberty versus tyranny it might have been the invisible hand of Infinite Justice that was guiding events.

It would be difficult to name any three consecutive days in our calendar that have given to the world such important men as the Marquis de Lafayette, Professor S. F. B. Morse, Gen. U. S. Grant and James Monroe. Their birthdays were April 26, 27, 28. On April 27, 1791, Prof. Morse first saw the light of day. Every schoolboy from Maine to California knows about his wonderful invention of the electro-telegraph. It was immediately taken at its full face value, and we all realize what an advantage it has been to all business concerns. It has been said that there is not a phase of human activity that has not felt the importance of the telegraph system. No word here need to be spoken of General Grant, who was born on the same day of the month in 1822. It may be in a century that he will stand in the same category as Washington. His relation to the Civil war is not unlike that of Washington's to the Revolutionary war.

From the standpoint of April 26 we can look back on the Lenten period whose outward observance terminated last Sunday. One wonders if the human mind can really grasp the great thought that underlies the Lenten idea and especially its culmination in Easter Sunday! The strongest possible evidence that there is a life beyond the grave is furnished by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. If this crowning event in the earthly existence of our Lord had not taken place with tangible evidence would there be that death does not end all? The Bible records instances where the dead were brought back to life again, but by no stretch of the immagination could this be called a resurrection because they all died again. It was only resuscitation, not resurrection. Christ came forth the Conquerer of death and the grave and entered into his eternal reward.

Did you ever think that the resurrection was necessary if "Christ is our pattern in all things?" Mark, if you please, how many things there are in our lives that parallel his: Like Him we came into the world little helpless babies; like Him we needed a tender mother's care; like Him we grew in body and mind; like Him we are subject to fatigue; like Him we shall be talked about and bitterly criticized, we shall be misjudged and misunderstood; we shall have more or less the bitter cup of Gethsemane to drink; and while in all human probability, we shall not be crucified, we must pass through the gates of death. Now there is only one thing in which thus far humanity is unlike him (always excepting the matter of holiness). Man has not yet risen from the grave. Now must not this come sometime if "He is our pattern in all things?"

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when He shall appear, we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is." This is a grand sentence from whatever viewpoint you look at it. Whether you look at it from the standpoint of our present relationship with the Master, of what we shall be when we come into full fruition of our future relationship with Him. If there is any meaning whatever in this language it is that sometime in the future He is coming again. Also we are going to develop more and more of His moral likeness, by getting more and more of His spirit into our hearts. If we are "to see Him as He is" we are to be living spirits. And if such language does not emphasize the fact of immortality, then human language is wholly inadequate of doing it.

Of course this whole question of living again after death, that is physical death, is of such a nature that we cannot dogmatize about it in relation to its details. The bright Sunday school boy asks the question: "Where is Christ now?" or, "What is His present occupation?" "Has He ever appeared on earth in bodily form since his ascension at Bethany?" These of course are questions that the acutest minds cannot answer with certainty. We believe that the Holy Spirit, or Comforter, is an active, though unseen, personality who is active in extending and emphasizing the principles of Christianity. "I will send you the Comforter," said Jesus, "and He shall guide you into all truth." It has been the consensus of belief in all the ages of the church that the Holy Spirit has been with and blessed his people both as individuals and as a church.

There are many agencies in operation to day that can claim credit for extending the average of human life more than 20 years from what it was 50 or 75 years ago. Scientific gymnastics that have become a part of the regular instruction of our high schools and colleges have been of immense value in giving to their students muscular bodies. The Boy Scout movement falls into line here and supplements the indoor gymnasium work. Scientific games like baseball and football, hiking and boating, and other forms of athletic exercises that bring one into healthful activity outdoors. All this tends to the building and preserving of more muscular bodies.

Thank God that the stupid day is gone when pious people believed that by "keeping the body under" the spirit would soar correspondingly high. The theory now is to let both body and soul develop, as far as possible.

Of course these popular games that appeal so strongly to the young, and so interesting to the general public, are out of the question to men who have not even reached middle life, but who unfortunately have eaten themselves out of shape. Sometimes these older chaps at a picnic, longing for a brief touch of their younger days, try their hand at baseball. If they give the ball a whack, it would be amusing, were it not so tragic, to see them waddle toward the first base wheezing like porpoises! Why should this be so for men comparatively young? Simply because—in too many instances—they have been over doing the knife and fork act! But only give us time and we will all of us naturally get beyond those games that require great exertion. But there are forms of exercise that all of us sedentary fellows can do without inviting angina pectoris, in which we can find great pleasure.

LOOK FOR NIGHTHAWKS, CATBIRDS, PEWEES, PHOEBES, WARBLERS, DURING MAY

Herewith is a descriptive list of the birds that may be looked for in this section during May. This list is arranged from Ralph Hoffman's "Guide to the Birds of New England and Eastern New York," edition of 1923, published by Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston and New York. The figures at the left indicate the length of each bird in inches. A robin is 10.00 inches long; an English sparrow is 6.33 inches. The first list is for use only in southern Connecticut and the lower Hudson valley; the second list is usable throughout all New England and eastern New York.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, April 25—On a July night in 1918 at Chaumont, France, Pershing's headquarters, Destiny abruptly stepped in to change the whole course of life for James G. Harbord, then commanding the gallant Second Division.

Harboard had been summoned by Pershing. He was asked to make a weighty decision.

As a combat commander, after his great services as Pershing's chief of staff in the organization period of the A. E. F., command of a corps at the front, perhaps the triple stars of a lieutenant general's rank, seemed just ahead for him.

Disturbing

But a new and disturbing suggestion had reached Pershing from Washington. Secretary Baker had writen that a suggestion was presented for the commander-in-chief's consideration that General Goethals, builder of the Panama canal, come over to assume entire responsibility for the supply services, reporting direct to Washington. Mr. Baker requested Pershing's views. It would have divided authority in France between Pershing and Goethals.

"From his (Pershing's) comments that July night on the fatal consequences certain to result from such an arrangement, I have yet to hear dissent from the lips of any professional soldier," Harbord said addressing a war college class 12 years later, telling his own story of the S. O. S. in France. "He felt that a suggestion of myself (to command the S. O. S.) might be acceptable to the authorities in Washington and avert action which he believed invited disaster."

To The Rear

So here was Harbord, leader of a victorious division, yet asked "to turn my face to the rear." Pershing recognized the sacrifice he asked, making the assignment contingent on Harbord's own acceptance and deferring final decision over night although Harbord at once indicated his "readiness to go anywhere he wished."

Pershing even held out a promise of return to the front when a successor in the S. O. S. could be trained.

"But the next combat division I commanded was the reorganized second division at Camp Travers, Texas, in 1920," Harbord said, sadly, to his war college audience.

What Harbord actually did that July night the Bystander has heard from his own lips. He went out into the streets of Chaumont and walked for hours, every soldierly impulse battling against acceptance of that face-to-the-rear assignment; every reason of loyalty to Pershing demanding his assent.

Without doubt it was the contacts of his terrific days in the S. O. S. that paved the way for the Harbord of today, a big gun of the business world.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Congress

Mr. Editor: To say from the sublime to the ridiculous, would be putting it rather mild, when referring to the gabble and actions of that august body known as the congress of the United States, that boasted land of freedom. Aided and abetted as they are, by those world reformers and allied forces now seeking to put an embargo on the manufacture and sale of all glass retainers, etc., it would be aiming a death blow to one of our great industries and incidentally bringing down on their heads the ire of all respectable canners of fruit and other delectables. Also undermining one of our most cherished institutions, the rights and privileges of a free-born American citizen and thereby playing direct into the hands of that much dreaded and detested party of communism. The communist is the child of wealth and plutocratic oppression. The child hates the parent, the parent fears the child. Still they go on side by side, the one intent on imperialism, the other on unrestrained license, plunder and ruin. No great reform was ever effected by force. Our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ, greatest reformer of all, never resorted to force. His methods were love, appeal, invitation, to have faith and belief in His testimony. Few today will either see, hear or believe. A [illegible] greater than all o'ershadows the land. God from on high looks down. His spirit will soon be made manifest, bringing in its trail retribution and [illegible]. In the cloud of trouble now [illegible] He will hold out a staying hand. The good and faithful will be saved, the ungodly and wicked will perish in the fire of His wrath and the earth will be made safe for the true and faithful. His promise will come true, His word is never void.

As all men shall eventually come to realize that that justice is laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet (Isa. 28-17), they will also learn that the strict rules of justice alone can secure the blessings which all desire. It is written, "The desire of all nations shall come"—the kingdom of God, under the absolute and unlimited control of Jehovah's anointed Christ.

We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling
To be living is sublime.
Hark! the rumblings in the nations,
Iron crumbling with the clay,
Hark! what soundeth? 'Tis creation
Groaning for a better day.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

The Disciples of Christ Asleep

"And He cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, 'What, could ye not watch with me one hour?'" Matthew 26:40.

The mount of olives rises before us in serene moonlight, and the olive trees seem sobbing with every breath of wind. There, our guide prays apart and lifts His hands in agony, crying: "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me!" There is something noble in seeing the head of a strong, stern man bent over a weeping child; and there is sweet tenderness in the tear that falls for another's woe. But we feel so comparatively little, and are so selfish; we forget so easily, or at best our hearts are so small. But this sorrow, this sympathy was so different! Christ had in Him the feeling of God, in the shade of the olive trees, His disciples lay and slept. A fit type were they of the careless, heartless world; and yet He was about to lay down His life for them and the world. How eloquent of pathos is His rebuking question: "Could ye not watch with me one hour?" He thought of all that He had done, and of all that He was going to accomplish for them; and yet they lay and slept.

O, souls that go into place of sorrow, that bear silently burdens of which the slumbering world has no knowledge—souls that grow very sick, and from whose strained brows the blood of inward agony seems to ooze! O, souls weary with the dullness of unlifted pain, and sore with the cruel blows of unfeeling fortune impatient, chafing on the rein of discipline, quivering to be free from the load and crying pitifully in your despair: "O, Lord, how long! How long!" Ye whose tents have been pitched in gethsemane, and for whom the years do but prophesy added grief. Your guide stands there in the gloom; no sorrow can come to you that He has not known; all your griefs are twin-born with His. He went into gethsemane for you and you should not hesitate to follow Him even there, for He will bring you forth again purified by sorrow you have undergone.

YOUR HEALTH

The Overclothed Infant

By Dr. Elizabeth M. Anderson, England.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

There has been a very marked tendency to simplify women's clothing during recent years, but many mothers, while whole-heartedly adopting more natural and hygienic clothing for their babies. Fashions and prejudices rooted deeply in tradition are taking long to overcome.

It is quite as important for a baby to wear light, loose short clothes, which allow air and light to reach the skin, as it is in the case of their mothers. The idea that a baby is so susceptible to sudden changes of temperature that no air must reach its skin lest a "cold" result has led to many an unfortunate infant being tightly wrapped in many layers of flannel or almost airtight materials, the result being that the baby often becomes uncomfortably hot and is frequently bathed in perspiration which cannot evaporate, and is in itself a menace to health.

The young infant is certainly more susceptible than older children or adults, owing to the larger area of skin in proportion to its size and weight, to the fact that the heat-regulating mechanism of the body is not yet fully developed, and to its inability to take exercise to stimulate its circulation. But these factors are to a great extent counterbalanced by the thick layer of fat under the skin of the normal infant, which helps to retain heat within the body. It also takes a very large amount of food in proportion to its size, this food acting as fuel for heat production. The fear of under-clothing colds and chills in infancy has been greatly over-stressed. Such catarrhal disorders are really due to direct infection in nearly every case.

Light, porous, easily washable clothing is required, which should be approximately the size and shape of the infant, and consist of as few garments as possible. The binder, if worn, should not be the tight strap, generally slipping under the armpits, which is so commonly seen. Free access to light, air, and sun is one of the best methods of promoting and maintaining health. Free play to the limbs during the waking hours is particular is invaluable in allowing natural development of muscles and bone to occur. All babies should be allowed to lie naked on their backs kicking freely, for about ten minutes after the bath, in a suitably warm temperature.

READINGS AND MUSIC MADE DELIGHTFUL PROGRAMME

The April meeting of the Woman's federation of Park Congregational church was held in the parlors of the Osgood Memorial on Friday afternoon with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. W. Tyler Browne, read a poem and prayer by John Oxenham, in thankfulness that the signing of the treaty in London had been completed. After a short business meeting the following programme was presented by Mrs. John Rogers, chairman of the programme committee:

Longfellow's "King Robert of Sicily" was read by Miss Hannah M. Crowell, the chants being given by Mrs. James A. Bidwell and Mrs. Charles E. Schwenk, with Mrs. Charles A. Saxton at the piano.

Two songs, "The Little Green Leaves," by Charles Gilbert Spross and "The Alpine Rose," by F. Sieber were rendered by Mrs. Schwenk and were followed by Miss Crowell's interpretation of "The West Wind", a poem by Masefield, which expresses his love for England. She also gave a group of Italian dialect poems by T. A. Day, "Pasquale Passes," "The Blossom Barrow," "Da No Good Work-a-man."

Tea followed this delightful programme, Mrs. H. R. Branch and Mrs. Allen Latham pouring. The yellow daffodils and snapdragon gave a lovely touch of spring.

VON LUCKNER LECTURE THRILLS CAPACITY AUDIENCE

For two hours and fifteen minutes Count Felix von Luckner, "the Sea-Devil", thrilled and amused a capacity audience at Slater Memorial hall Friday evening under the auspices of Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, in one of the most highly interesting and entertaining narratives here in a long time. The count received a tremendous ovation as he leisurely walked upon the stage, made up in a fitting background of palms and an attractive floral form, the gift of Otto Ernst, the florist, to the count.

Before he had completed his discourse the count, the man who sank nearly a score of enemy vessels freighted with raw materials of war and emerged with a record unblemished by spilling a drop of human blood, covered the entire surface of the stage in acting out his narrative with the gusto of a star. He was here, there and everywhere. He proved himself to be a born actor, with a rare gift of pantomime, that part alone being well worth the price of admission. At times he was full of mimicry, and appeared to be unaware of his large audience, who were held spellbound.

At the outset Count von Luckner recited his adventures in his youth—he ran away from home at the age of 13—and of his escapades in his early teens which, starting as a revolt of school examinations, led him to the sea, finally to Australia, where he shipped to San Francisco on the "Golden Shore." He told of his long hike over a thousand miles of railroad ties to the home of Buffalo Bill in Denver, there to discover that Buffalo Bill was wild-westing in Germany with his show and was at the time the guest in the castle home of his father.

His recital of meeting his uncle, an official in the German navy, and his subsequent reception of a German naval commission and his return to his family who thought him dead preceded the most interesting part of his tale, that of his exploits as a raider in one of the last of the Yankee clipper ships. He lived again the long months in disguising the clipper that was eventually to ride through the triple blockade of the British in the North Sea on the wings of a ferocious tempest and later destroy a score of enemy vessels carrying cargoes of war.

In telling of precautions taken on the clipper so that it would appear as a Norwegian sailing vessel if it ever happened to be inspected by British officers at sea, the count was at his best and time after time was compelled to halt as the result of sustained laughter. The count stated that this boat was the only sailing vessel that played a military role in the World war and thrilled his audience by predicting that it probably was the last to figure in the history of warfare.

After using up an hour and three quarters in his talk the count asked his audience if it had had enough, . . . there was a request for "more" and so he continued for another twenty minutes, carrying his audience through the successful running of the blockade.

The committee in charge of securing the count's appearance before a Norwich gathering comprised Commander Patrick F. McMahon, Capt. Charles Colt, H. F. Powers, Imbert Fellows, Joseph F. Daly, Earl Taggart and Walter T. Clark.

The reception committee, Legionnaires McMahon, Colt, Powers, Fellows and Clark, met the Count and Mrs. von Luckner at New London and escorted them to this city, Friday afternoon. On the way to Norwich the delegation stopped off at the Uncas-on-Thames, where the count spoke for 30 minutes in an interesting way to 300 patients and the staff.

HAD "SEADEVIL" CAKES AT VON LUCKNER DINNER

Covers were laid for 20 and those seated at the tables besides Count and Countess Von Luckner and his secretary, were Post Commander Patrick McMahon and Mrs. McMahon Capt. Charles Colt, committee chairman, Dr. and Mrs. T. F. O'Neil, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bradlaw, Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Imbert Fellows, Mr. and Mrs. F. Russell Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter T. Clark.

The tables were beautifully decorated with cut flowers and a pleasing feature was introduced in the work of the Wauregan hotel chef when little cakes were served with the ice cream, each frosted in the name of the "Seadevil", the nickname which Count Von Luckner's exploits on the sea won for him.

The menu served was fruit cocktail, celery and olives, tomato bisque, broiled halibut steak, half broiled spring chicken, sweet potatoes, string beans, lettuce and tomato salad, ice cream, cake and coffee.

NORWICH TOWN FAMILY DRIVEN OUT BY FIRE

Awakened by smoke shortly after 12:15 o'clock this Saturday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer F. Farnham and two children barely escaped suffocation in a fire which badly damaged their home, No. 16 Old Cemetery lane, Norwich Town. The flames practically gutted the house, a two story wooden frame structure.

Acting Chief Dennis J. Brennan and Engine No. 3 of the local fire department and the Yantic fire department responded to telephone calls for help. Two lines of two and a half inch hose, a line of inch and a half hose, and a chemical line were used on the blaze which had a good start when the firemen arrived. Most of the furniture on the ground floor was carried into the yard. Mr. and Mrs. Farnham and children found refuge in a nearby house. The blaze is said to have started from a fireplace.

NORWICH RADIO BROADCAST AGAIN HOLDS INTEREST OF AUDIENCE

The second night of the Norwich broadcast from station WTIC, Hartford, was carried out Friday evening from 10 to 10.30. Reception here was good, and again the "Doctor 'n the Schoolmaster" scored a hit with their listening audience as they turned back the pages of history in an entertaining way.

This is the way they did it:

ANNOUNCER: For a second time, ladies and gentlemen, the strains of "Yankee Rose" bring to you a program sponsored by the Merchants Bureau of the chamber of commerce of Norwich, Connecticut, the Rose of New England. Excellent trolley service, a most complete bus schedule, and modern highways are all contributing factors in conveying large numbers of people from the surrounding villages and towns to Norwich to trade, thus making it the retail shopping center of eastern Connecticut.

Norwich is located about midway between Boston and New York city, and is frequently called the Memorial City because of the many memorials standing here. The royal burying ground of the Mohegan Indians, situated on Sachem street, is visited annually by thousands of tourists. Norwich, the Rose of New England, has produced many great men and women, and five former presidents of the United States, Filmore, Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Cleveland, claim Norwich ancestry.

Outside of Norwich, just a stone's throw from a main highway over which passes 2,000 motor vehicles daily, stands the new Norwich Inn. Once again we find the Doctor and the Schoolmaster seated on the porch, contemplating the beautiful Thames river. The sun has dropped below the horizon, leaving only broad banners of scarlet in the west. Overhead, in a rapidly darkening sky, huge stars are popping out, to mirror their reflection in the water below, an hour of calm content, a July evening in Connecticut.

DOCTOR: I hope you're appreciating the view, professor!

SCHOOLMASTER: Somewhat, though tinctured with vain regret. With that course I should have done better than one-forty-five.

DOCTOR: Your golfing needs something more than vain regret. A little putting practice now and then, has broken par for many men.

DOCTOR: Maybe not, but I was wondering, as I sat here, what old Uncas would have thought of that golf course.

SCHOOLMASTER: He'd have been knocked speechless before he got out this far. This country has changed a great deal since Indian days.

DOCTOR: About three hundred years ago, the state of Connecticut was wilderness, held by a few scattering tribes of savages. Where are they now? Some of them are extinct, some are divided and are living far from the lands of their fathers. A few, a very few, still cling to their ancient lands.

SCHOOLMASTER: Like ghosts at the banquet.

DOCTOR: In their day, Connecticut was nearly all forest. Paths led here and there through the trees, winding foot-paths used by men and beasts alike. Of the animals that roamed this country, many were valuable for fur. Flocks of wild turkeys roosted at night by hundreds. Herons fished along the banks of the river, or in the marshes. There were quail and partridge in abundance. And I've read that at certain seasons of the year, wild pigeons collected in such numbers as to darken the light of the sun.

SCHOOLMASTER: In other words, a sportsman's paradise!

DOCTOR: It was all of that. The ponds, creeks, and rivers swarmed with water-fowl, and every spring thousands of shad and lamprey eels ascended the river.

SCHOOLMASTER: And also, doctor, it would still be in the same rude state had white men never landed upon its shores.

DOCTOR: Yes, we have made far better use of the land than the Indians.

SCHOOLMASTER: I don't regret the lost music of the war-whoop and the tom-toms. For a great American symphony, give me the factory whistle and the school bell.

DOCTOR: I always had an impression that you educators leaned quite heavily in the direction of the public press as an uplifting force, a cultural urge, so to speak.

SCHOOLMASTER: We do, and if the medical profession doesn't, it should. I don't know where you'd find another single agency that has played so important a role in this nation's struggle upward. You had a newspaper here in Norwich before the Revolution.

DOCTOR: A scant two years before. The Old Norwich Packet began making weekly appearances in 1773. But that's all I can tell you about it.

SCHOOLMASTER: I can tell you a little more. The printers were Alex. and James Robertson, and John Trumbull. And the paper actually existed for 50 years. I think, perhaps, its head-piece carried it along.

DOCTOR: I think I call to mind what you mean. You're referring to the crude wood-cut of a ship under full sail. That was a packet-ship. And the paper, the Norwich Packet.

SCHOOLMASTER: It was more than that, doctor. The reason the ship was under full sail was because of the heavy cargo of names she carried. The formal name of the paper was the Norwich Packet and the Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island Weekly Advertiser.

DOCTOR: That paper must have covered a lot of territory!

SCHOOLMASTER: Their first office was in a building at the foot of the Green, near the court house, but two years later, the Packet was moved to another building near the meeting house, and there, in Trumbull's printing office, it was issued regularly, for more than 50 years.

DOCTOR: That would bring its death along in the twenties. Too bad the old Packet sunk!

SCHOOLMASTER: But you have its competitor here today, and very much alive. The Bulletin and the Courier are nothing more nor less than direct descendants of Ebenezer Bushnell's Weekly Register, first published on the town green of Norwich, in 1791.

DOCTOR: I wonder where I got the idea that the Bulletin and the Courier were quite recent in date.

SCHOOLMASTER: I don't know, but you're wrong. Sixteen years after the Packet began sailing, Bushnell opened up the Weekly Register. He had no street number, and the best he could do in the way of an address, was to advertise that he was to be found 20 rods west of the meeting house.

DOCTOR: He was in a good neighborhood, at least. No wonder he made a success of it.

SCHOOLMASTER: Five years after he began, he renamed the Register, calling it the Courier. That's the name it bears today. Just why Bushnell made the change no one knows.

DOCTOR: They tell us there's nothing in a name, but does the change of names suggest anything to you?

SCHOOLMASTER: I'm afraid not, doctor. You're running to theories again!

DOCTOR: The name "Register" connotes a very local circulation. The name "Courier" implies a very widespread distribution. And I wouldn't be surprised if that were the case. When Bushnell was printing his paper near the meeting-house, there wasn't a road in the country better than an Indian trail.

SCHOOLMASTER: There may be something to your theory, doctor.

DOCTOR: Our first highway, or turnpike, as they used to call it, was the one between Norwich and New London. It was the first in New England, and the second in America. It was built by a lottery, authorized by the legislature. The opening was in June, 1792, and that toll-road gave the newspaper their first chance for extensive distribution. Doubtless, there is where the name "Courier" came from.

SCHOOLMASTER: Interesting, though! The Norwich Bulletin and Courier date back to the first administration of George Washington. A continuous record of publication through the line of all our presidents! Only seven newspapers in the United States are older than the Bulletin and Courier, and three of them are published in Connecticut.

DOCTOR: A commendable record to begin with one of the old-fashioned back-breaking hand-presses!

SCHOOLMASTER: There are 15,000 newspapers in this country. Their publishers, editors, and printers are akin by calling to the small company of colonial editors and printers who labored by day, by the light of a candle when necessary, to establish in this land a fourth estate. The profession of journalism has changed much, but mostly in methods and in processes. The spirit, doctor, remains the same as in the days of Bushnell, of the Norwich Register.

DOCTOR: Your mention of the meeting-house calls to mind the story of our second church here. Did you ever climb to church?

SCHOOLMASTER: Not that I can remember. I've often walked to church, but I can't recall of climbing to church.

DOCTOR: The first meeting-house stood near the southwest corner of Meeting-house Green, or Plain, which was much larger then than it is now. The post office at Norwich Town is standing on land which used to be a part of Meeting-house Green. The first meeting-house was a rough and ready affair, hewn out of logs. It is hardly likely that the place had a steeple or a porch, and certainly not a gallery.

SCHOOLMASTER: But it had a pulpit, with a Bible. Although we may be sure the Bible didn't rest upon a cushion with tassels.

DOCTOR: Yes, we may be sure of that. There were long benches, instead of pews, the men sitting on the right hand of the minister, the women on the left. Such a thing as a church choir was unknown. The deacon read off the lines of the hymns, and the congregation followed in tuneful quavers.

SCHOOLMASTER: Without an organ! Are you quite sure it was tuneful?

DOCTOR: It sufficed for them! You're prejudiced in favor of modern church music. This first church, however, was in use but a short time, about 14 years. In 1673, the town contracted with John Elderkin to build a new Meeting-house. The site selected for it was the summit of the hill towering over the Green, looking east and west toward the two ends of the town-plot.

SCHOOLMASTER: Ah, the church on the hill.

DOCTOR: And for a very good reason. The country was in a disturbed condition. On the western border of New England, the Dutch were assuming a threatening attitude. Several of the larger Indian tribes were less friendly than usual. Hence the hill for a site.

SCHOOLMASTER: Wise selection, doctor. The church became, in fact, a watch-tower, an arsenal, a garrison-post, as well as a house of worship.

DOCTOR: But its situation must have been very imposing. It was perched like a citadel upon its rocky height, with perpendicular ledges or abrupt, stony declivities on either side. One literally had to climb to it.

SCHOOLMASTER: Think of the winter-time, doctor, with ice and snow.

DOCTOR: Probably no more cheerless outside than inside, professor. There wasn't the slightest bit of heat, no fireplace, nor stove, nor furnace. The women carried heated stones or bricks in their muffs. The men put their feet into fur bags or moccasins. Later, of course, the foot-stove came into general use, but that was many years after.

SCHOOLMASTER: And a fear of their lives into the bargain!

DOCTOR: Yes, they must have prayed with one eye on the door. The men of the congregation brought their flint-locks with them which they stacked outside, with a guard on watch. The regular soldiers, or militia, always sat near the door, to be ready in case of danger.

SCHOOLMASTER: But from such stock came a strong nation!

DOCTOR: That's selfevident. And Norwich has many sons whose memory she is proud to honor. I might name Captain Samuel Chester Reid, born in Norwich in 1783, one of the most brilliant officers of the old American navy. His father was a naval man before him, although in the British navy. Captain Reid went to sea at the age of eleven.

SCHOOLMASTER: Let's see, that's about the age when most youngsters are struggling through the sixth grade.

DOCTOR: He was taken prisoner during the trouble we had with France, after the Revolution. In the War of 1812, he had risen to the rank of captain, commander of the brig, "General Armstrong." With nine guns and 90 men, he engaged three British vessels of 130 guns and 300 men. He sunk his ship, rather than surrender.

SCHOOLMASTER: Then he must have been captured!

DOCTOR: He swam ashore. The fight took place just off Fayal. But he performed services in peace which I should like to mention. Captain Reid invented and built a signal telegraph at the Battery in New York. He also perfected the pilot-boat system at Sandy Hook. But the work of his which we like to remember best was his designing of the American flag.

SCHOOLMASTER: Why, I thought Betsy Rosa—!

DOCTOR: (Interrupting) Yes. I know, all glory to the lady! But we didn't remain a thirteen-state nation very long, you'll remember. At that time, new states were being created almost with the rising of the sun. It wasn't very long, of course, before the flag needed considerable re-arrangement.

SCHOOLMASTER: I see. And Captain Reid was given the honor of making a new design!

DOCTOR: His contribution was the idea of 13 stripes of red and white, to represent the 13 original colonies, with each state in the Union represented by a star in the blue field. The flag, as re-designed by Captain Samuel Chester Reid, was first raised over the National Hall of Representatives, in Washington, D. C., on April 13, 1818. And he was only one of the sons of old Norwich.

SCHOOLMASTER: Your mention of Washington, D. C., puts me in mind of another story I heard yesterday. Do you know a little town down the river called Montville?

DOCTOR: I've heard of it, although I've never been there.

SCHOOLMASTER: This is a story about the Palmer brothers. Both of them saw service in the Civil war. When the war ended, they were left in Washington. One brother hadn't been getting his pay envelope for some time, on account of being detained in Libby Prison. He had about $1,500 back-pay coming from the government.

DOCTOR: I hope he got it.

SCHOOLMASTER: He did! And with the $1,500, the two boys started in business, Palmer Brothers, dealers in cotton batting, twine, and allied lines.

DOCTOR: They did well, I trust!

SCHOOLMASTER: More than well. They weren't new to the business. The family had been raised in it. In fact, on the old homestead up in Montville, the family had been operating a mill since 1782. The boys' father made a part of their cotton batting for them. But they got on, got on so nicely, they eventually had to move close to the home factory.

DOCTOR: Who were these boys? The Palmer Brothers?

SCHOOLMASTER: Edward and Elisha, but a younger brother, Frank, came into the firm later. Frank brought home the bacon, from Chicago. One of their customers inquired of him one day back in 1872, if the Palmer Brothers made quilts, and why not? Frank replied that he was ready for an order. On the way home, he bought cloth enough, and when he landed in Montville, he informed his astonished brothers that the firm was now in the quilt-making business. I suppose you know what a quilt is, doctor?

DOCTOR: Oh, sure! We call 'em comfortables 'round here!

SCHOOLMASTER: Anything you like! Well, young Frank had his sister make up some comfortables, just to see how many she could make in a day. She turned out four. On that basis, the work was given out to the women of the town, who were to receive 25c for each comfortable they made.

DOCTOR: That's a dollar a day! Big money for 1872!

SCHOOLMASTER: Today, they are one of the largest manufacturers of comfortables in the world, and the largest in this country. I have some figures here, doctor, which I jotted down, just to make you gasp.

DOCTOR: I'll do my best.

KEHOE IS BOUND OVER ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

The case of John T. Kehoe, 28, charged with manslaughter, was presented in the Ledyard justice court at Gales Ferry Thursday evening before Justice of the Peace Walter M. Buckingham. He was ordered bound over to the criminal term of the superior court. Kehoe, who is an employe of the Norwich state hospital, was driver of the machine that crashed through the fence on Dead Man's curve on the Military highway on the night of April 1, resulting in the death of Mrs. Rose Lavalle Riley of this city. There were seven persons riding in the Nash roadster and with the exception of Mrs. Riley none of the others was severely hurt. Since the accident Kehoe has been locked up at the local jail under bonds of $3,500, which he is unable to furnish.

WEISGRABER WILL PITCH AGAINST CHAPMAN TECH IN TODAY'S LEAGUE GAME

Probable Lineups

Reardon, 2b	ss, Cascio
Gibbs, ss	c, Griswold
Fontaine, c	p, Hewitt

Pepin, cf	lf, Gregory
Berghinzo, lf	rf, Silva
Weisgraber, p	3b, Petrowsky

Game Starts At 3 P. M.

The Academy will be at the nearest to full strength of any games this year when it engages Chapman Tech of New London in an important league game at the campus this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The injury and ineligibility jinx which has been chasing the Wildcats so far during the campaign seems to have been eluded for the time being and as they face Chapman Tech all regulars will be in their positions.

Weisgraber To Hurl

Butsy Weisgraber, last year's pitching mainstay, is expected to toe the slab this afternoon, fully recovered from an ankle injury received in the Stonington game while Bud Fontaine will be back in at catch, Speed Reardon at second, the latter two recently ineligible and Les Crowell, who caught Wednesday's game, will be in his old station in right field.

The Red and White, however, may need all these men today for they are facing one of the best pitchers in Connecticut in Capt. Fred Hewitt of Tech, a boy who last year came within an eyelash of pinning a defeat on the N. F. A. boys, losing 4 to 3 in 11 innings and who is also a very good batter, hitting in clean-up position and having an average well over .400. Behind him he will have a majority of the 1929 Tech team that caused the Academy so much trouble and he also will have the backing of a large delegation of New London rooters as it is reported that fully 500 of the faithful from the city-by-the-sea are planning to make the trip, convinced that Tech has it on N. F. A. this year.

New London Wins Scarce

The feelings of the New London rooters will not be soothed in the least when they realize that only twice in four years, or in 16 games, have Whaling City schools, either Tech or Bulkeley been able to put it over the Academy in baseball. They both won one of the games in 1926 and not since have they been able to turn the trick.

The situation in the league standing is almost ideal for the clash. The Academy is tied for first place with the two New London nines, each having won its only start. Tech, of course, will be fighting today to uphold its own honor and also the prestige of New London in an endeavor to get by this game with a victory and then have the edge in the race for the pennant. It can be said that today's winner will have a strategic advantage.

The Academy finished preparations for the game with a short hitting and infield drill Friday in which several of the boys featured in the slugging. Mickey Breen continued to pound the pill with reckless abandon, slamming three over the center field fence.

Breen In Fifth Place

As a result of Breen's fine stickwork, he has been moved up to fifth position in the batting order by Coach Brigham. Les Crowell goes into sixth, Pepin seventh and Berghinzo remains in eighth, Reardon and Fontaine return to their places at second and fourth, respectively.

The Academy band will make its second outdoor appearance, playing all the favorite songs, including The Stein Song, Down The Field, Alma Mater, etc. There will be a concert of an half hour during the batting practice.

Officials from Hartford, who are Central Board men, have been engaged to handle the game, and no doubt the largest crowd of the year will be in the stands when the cry "Play Ball" rings out.

GIBBS LEADS ACADEMY HITTERS WITH .583 AVERAGE

The Academy this year has another pair of batting twins. It would seem from the early averages, Capt. Gibbs, shortstop, and Mickey Breen, first baseman, have been slamming the ball so hard in the first six games, the averages reveal, that they can almost be classified with the Jarvis-Greene or LaCroix-Cummings high powered combinations of recent seasons.

Gibbs leads the team with the unusually high mark of .583, followed by Breen with .455, Crowell with .400, Weisgraber with .364 and Reardon with .308, to get into the list of the first five.

Gibbs has the most hits, 14, most runs, 11, most total bases, 22 and most runs batted in, 14, to obtain practically a monopoly on the honors. Chubby also is the home run leader with two against one for Bud Fontaine.

The averages follow:

Gibbs	24	11	14	22	14	.583
Navick	2	2	1	1	1	.500
Breen	22	2	10	14	3	.455

TWO PLAINFIELD RUNNERS TO ENTER 10-MILE RACE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, April 25.— In the ten-mile race to be run at Norwich Memorial Day two local athletes representing the Community house will be Joe Korab and George Proulx. Both of these fellows are training every night with hopes to place high in the national event.

The Plainfield grammar school won their second game in two starts in the grammar school league of teams through the valley by defeating Sterling, 12 to 4, Friday here. The feature of the game was the pitching of Lefty Beauchman, Plainfield hurler, who held Sterling to two hits.

On Monday evening next Plainfield's swimming team will compete against the Providence Y, in Plainfield; also featuring a diving exhibition by Gordon Pearce and Bud Latham, New England champions. This will be the last meet of the season at the Community house and a large crowd is expected.

The events will be run off as follows: 40 yard free style, 40 yard backstroke, 40 yard breaststroke, 100 yard free style, 220 yard free style, 160 relay and the diving.

CHUBBUCK FINISHES FIFTH IN DECATHLON EVENT

FRANKLIN FIELD, Philadelphia, April 25.—(AP)—A record-breaking victory in the decathlon championship by big Barney Berlinger of Pennsylvania, for the second year in succession, and a brace of smashing relay triumphs for the University of Chicago's sprint start today furnished the thrills for the opening half of the 30th annual Penn relay carnival.

For nine of the ten events in the all-day struggle Berlinger set a pace that threatened to topple the American decathlon record of 7784.68 points, set last year by Ken Doherty of Detroit. The Quaker giant, however, finished a poor last in the final event, the 1500-meter run, and tossed away his chances by collecting only 244 points when he needed over 300 to touch Doherty's mark.

The final decathlon standings:

BROWNS TROUNCE CHICAGO IN SPITE OF HARRIS' HOMER

ST. LOUIS, April 25.—(AP)— Dave Harris, late of the Portland club of the Pacific league, made his first appearance at bat in the American league today and hit a home run, scoring Bud Clancy ahead of him. Harris' four ply swat was all the damage the White Sox could do to Southpaw Walter Stewart and the Browns won 4 to 2. Harris batted for Riddle.

The veteran Red Faber did effective hurling until the fifth. McKain relieved Faber in the eighth after the Browns had done all their scoring.

RUTH HITS FIRST HOMER AS YANKS WIN FIRST GAME

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)— Babe Ruth resumed his role of hero today and the New York Yankees broke into the victory column after five straight defeats, beating out the Boston Red Sox, 3 to 2, in a ten-inning pitching duel.

The Babe hit his first home run of the season into the usual resting place in the right field bleachers in the seventh inning to give the Yankees a 2-2 tie. In the tenth Lazzeri opened with a double and Chapman duplicated it to bring in the winning run.

Henry Johnson gave the Red Sox only six hits with the only group of two coming in the first inning when Boston got both its runs. He struck out ten. Milton Gaston allowed the Yankees seven blows, keeping them almost as well scattered.

St. Patrick's Win

St. Patrick's defeated St. Mary's by the score of 11-10 Friday afternoon at the Academy campus. St. Mary's walked off the field at the beginning of the seventh inning, refusing to play the remaining inning. R. Gilman hit a single scoring Faulkner with two out. The lineup: Faulkner, c; Gallivan, Roche, p; Roche Gallivan, 1b; W. Gilman, 2b; Riley, ss; R. Gilman, 3b; Allard, rf; Shannon, cf; Kearns, lf.

The conversation between husband and wife just before the breadwinner gets a vacation:

Husband: Well, old dear only a coupla days more and the old vacation will start. What we going to do those two weeks?

Wife: Anything you want to, dear, it's your vacation to do with just as you like.

H: Well, how about going to New York for a coupla days and seeing some of the real shows? You know we haven't seen anything except talkies for a long time.

W: That's all right and I'd like to but you know I haven't got any new clothes and besides I'd hate to miss the bridge club.

H: All right, that's out. How about taking the car and going for a trip up through the mountains or some other place where you won't need any new clothes? We can arrange the trip so you won't miss the bridge.

W: I'd love to but you know the tires aren't very good on the car and Junior would be in school and I so hate to leave him with somebody else for any length of time. What if he should get sick?

H: Yeah, that's so. We'd better put off the trip until summer and take Junior with us. But how'd you like to get a cottage at the lake for a week? You could drive in with the boy every morning and get him after school, it's not far.

W: Well, we might do that but it's so cold this time of the year and you know how you suffer from the cold. Besides, you wouldn't get many fish, the brooks are too high.

H: Well, you suggest something you'd like to do.

W: Oh, but I don't want to, it's your vacation and you should do just what you want to do.

H: Yeah, I heard you say that before. Well, how about having a quiet little vacation right here at home, would you like that?

W: I think that would be just great. You know how tired one gets when they go some place or take an auto trip, you come back tired and need a week or so to rest up. We'll have just a glorious time right here at home and you can help me with the housecleaning and the bedroom needs painting, and the screens will have to be put in the windows and there's lots of little things that need to be done. We'll do those right up the very first day and then we'll have all the rest of the time to ourselves.

H: Looks like you was going to have a real good time during my vacation, don't it.

W: I'm so glad you feel that way about it. And I know we'll have a lot better time than if we went some place and spent a lotta money. But we'll do anything you say, it's your vacation you know.

H: Yeah?

And speaking of vacations, I start mine next week.

GOSLIN'S HOMER GIVES SENATORS WIN OVER A'S

WASHINGTON, April 25—(AP)— Goose Goslin's homer in the eighth inning of the Senators-Athletics contest here this afternoon, won the ball game 6-4 and sent the Washington club into the American league lead.

With the Athletics leading 4-3 entering the eighth, Goslin collected his third bingle in four trips to the plate a long four bagger that climbed the right field fence. Washington stepped into an early three run lead which they held until the sixth when hits and boots put together four runs for the A's.

Lloyd Brown, Senator pitcher, was a trifle erratic and the Athletics collected 13 hits off his slants. The A's Waterloo was in the left on bases column with the 13 jinx pursuing them here. Sam West homered for Washington. The score:

CONNELLY FIRST TO OFFICIALLY ENTER FOR 10-MILE NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

John P. Connelly of the Shepherd A. C. of New York city, winner of the New York county cross-country title in 1927, is the first to file official entry for the National A. A. U. 10-mile championship run, to be held here on the afternoon of Memorial day, May 30, according to an announcement last night by officials of the Duwell A. A., sponsors of the event. Entry blanks for the title run were sent out Wednesday by the race committee and Connelly, anxious to be the first to enter, returned his signed blank within less than twenty four hours.

Connelly, after a year of idleness, has begun an active distance running campaign this season and turned in a win last Sunday at New York in his first comeback attempt. He led a field of twenty-five to the tape in a 2 1-2 mile jaunt, covering the distance in 13.54. Accompanying Connelly's entry is a letter which states that a team of probably 25 men will represent the Good Shepherd club in the coming championship run. The club plans to charter a bus for the trip to Norwich and return.

While Connelly's entry is the first to be officially recorded the Duwells to date have had requests from over 150 athletes from the various states of the union for entry blanks. Nearly 1,000 of the blanks were mailed Wednesday to the various A. A. U. associations, clubs and individuals throughout the United States and Canada. According to the blanks entry will close on May 20.

Early this week the race committee received a telegram from Buffalo, N. Y., requesting blanks, and letters from Pennsylvania and Massachusetts clubs with the same request.

The signed blanks should start to pour in during the early part of the coming week and it is expected that from day to day prominent distance men will officially register.

Local interest in the coming event continues to mount daily, organizations and individuals alike coming forward with offers of assistance. To date 12 cups and trophies have been donated for the race and a number of cash contributions have also been made. The residents of the city, appreciating the national significance of the event, are becoming more interested as the date of the race approaches. As previously announced, the race will be held at the fairgrounds.

PIRATES BEAT CARDS IN OPENING HOME SEASON

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 25—(AP)— The Pittsburgh Pirates played their home opener here today after having been held up two days by cold weather, and celebrated by defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 1.

Chick Hafey and Ira Flagstead drove out home runs for the contending teams, both being long drives over the left field wall. Hafey's was one of the longest ever poled out of Forbes' field. Engle, playing third for Pittsburgh in place of Pie Traynor, accounted for three hits, two of them doubles.

BRAVES OPEN HOME SEASON WITH A DEFEAT

BOSTON, April 25.— (AP) — After three successive postponements, the Boston Braves finally staged their home opening today but without much success. They could do nothing with the offerings of Dazzy Vance and the Brooklyn Robins hit hard to win the game, 5 to 1.

Vance held the Braves to three scattered hits and gave but three walks. Ben Cantwell was driven from the hill in the fifth inning after the Robins had scored five runs on nine hits. Bob Smith then shut out the visitors.

The Tigers had a three run lead at the end of the third inning due to sloppy fielding by the Indians. The tribe got to Uhle for three runs in the sixth. They tied the score in the seventh and the winning run came on Jamieson's single, Fonseca's double and Hodapp's infield roller.

BATTALINO GETS VERDICT OVER GRAHAM

HARTFORD, April 25.— (AP) —Bat Battalino, world featherweight champion, of this city, won a ten round decision over Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., in an untitle fight here tonight.

Winning eight of the ten rounds, outboxing as well as outpunching one of the foremost title contenders in the 126 pound division, Battalino tonight decisively defeated Bushy Graham, of Utica, N. Y. The bout was staged in the state armory here and attracted a crowd of 7,008. Battalino's title was not at stake, both boxers being overweight.

Graham, a 7 to 5 favorite in the early betting and an even money choice just before the boys entered the ring, took one of the worst trouncings of his career. From the first round until the last, with the exception of the fourth, when the champion was floored by a stiff hook to the chin and took a count of eight, Battalino piled up point after point as he carried the attack to Graham, slashing away with both hands to the body and head in a steady fusillade of punches that wore down Graham's strength.

Twice Battalino had Graham on the floor but the New Yorker did not take a count either time, going down as much from tripping as from being hit while off balance and trying to escape from the punishment the champion was doling out while he had Bushy in a corner.

Referee Billy Conway's score card gave Battalino nine of the ten rounds, Graham being given the fourth, and gave the champion 48 points to 37 for the Utica boy. Conway gave Battalino the full five points possible in every round but the fourth, when he gave the Hartford boy three points and the five to Graham.

The champion fought so aggressively and so continually that Graham had no opportunity to box him. Graham's left hand, supposed to be his chief offensive weapon, did little damage after the knockdown and his right was kept so busy trying to block the ever swinging left hand of Battalino that it was of little use.

There was action every minute of every round with Battalino bulling Graham around the ring, trying to get him in position to put across a finishing punch. But the experienced Graham, rolling with the punches and going away with them, was not badly hurt although the steady barrage of blows took most of his steam away and after the fifth round the battle was one sided, with the champion doing all the fighting and Graham seeming to be tiring fast, apparently content to avoid a knockout.

Graham's style did not puzzle Battalino, who solved it quickly. Battalino, with his right glove high and his arms crossed in front of him as he bobbed around was ready to let fly with both hands and let fly he did. He missed many punches but he was always on top of Graham and generally after missing one would connect with another. He followed Bushy from one corner to another, never giving the Utica challenger a rest.

Mickey Flahive, 135, Hartford, won on a technical knockout in the second round over Sammy Kraft, 136, Bridgeport, who substituted for Pete Petrolle, in a scheduled six round bout.

Johnny Clinch, 142, New Britain, won a six round decision over Izzy Kaplan, 141, Meriden.

MRS. ETTA MORRONE DIES— INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 25.—At the Exeter-Hopkinton town boundary line on the Noose Neck Hill state highway there was a serious automobile accident shortly after 5 a. m., Friday. State police of the Hope Valley barracks, who investigated, reported the driver must have gone to sleep at the wheel, for the auto crashed off the road at high speed, striking a stone wall so that the occupants were thrown through the roof of the car, the top of which was suspended in a tree some 20 feet from the ground. After hitting the wall and smashing up, the car proceeded into some underbrush by the roadside where the wreckage and injured occupants were first seen by two passing motor truck drivers. The first truck driver called the state police by telephone and the second truck, with Driver Joseph Brocato and his son Frank, of 63 Pierce street, stopped to help State Trooper John F. Kennedy on his arrival and their truck was used to transport two of the injured to the Westerly hospital. Joseph Mongera, 19, 374 Plainfield street, Olneyville, R. I., driver of the auto, is on the danger list at the hospital with critical injuries; Miss Rose Adamo, 19, of 41 Marietta street, Providence, and her sister, Mrs. Etta Morrone, 23, of 215 South Third street, Brooklyn, N. Y., were attended for a lengthy time in the emergency room at the hospital. They were taken to the hospital in the truck of Brocato, while Mongera was taken in the auto of T. Piollou of Hopkinton. Drs. John W. Helfrich and Harry F. Crandall attended the injured at the hospital.

As reported by the state police, Mrs. Etta Morrone was proceeding from her home in Brooklyn, N. Y., to visit relatives in Providence and the auto had reached a point some seven-eighths of a mile beyond the town boundary lines when it swerved and crashed from the highway. The point has been the location of a number of auto crashes recently.

Mrs. Morrone died at the hospital at 1:20 p. m., Friday, as the result of her injuries.

BRUSH AND GRASS FIRE SWEEPS OVER 200 ACRES

A brush and grass fire which burned over some 200 acres on the north and east slopes of Hinckley Hill swept down to the western slope of Berry hill in Downeyville Friday afternoon. The wind blew from the west, fanning the flames and sent dense clouds of smoke and cinders into the business section of Westerly. At times the smoke clouds completely hid the top of Hinckley Hill and several explosions marked the path of the advancing flames. The advancing wall of fire swept around the hill, on the south side of which is located the recently constructed home of Joseph Girard, proprietor of the Bridge Lunch in Pawcatuck. In clearing up the site, dynamite was used to clear out rock and boulders and since that time a number of caps have been missing. As the fire swept by and detonation of caps followed, Mr. Girard stated that he knew where the missing caps were.

At the time the fire started from an unknown origin there was no one at the Girard home as Mrs. Girard had gone to New London to visit her daughter, but a call by telephone from a neighbor brought Mr. Girard home. The members of the Pawcatuck Fire company responded with a motor pumper but there was not much work for the firemen as a considerable space had been cleared about the house and most of the efforts were directed toward the salvaging of a woodpile. Then the firemen returned to quarters.

The flames circled the ice pond of the Westerly Ice Co., Nathan Wein, 59 Summer street, Westerly, proprietor, on the edge of which the large ice house has been recently torn down. As the flames approached the Liberty street end of the Norwich-Westerly state highway, smoke obscured the vision of passing motorists, who had to slow down until they could see their way clearly. The rights of way cross country of the transmission lines of the American Telegraph & Telephone Co., and the high tension line of the New England Power Co., were swept by the passing blaze and the wooden poles charred at the base.

Before Judge Oliver H. Williams Friday, in the Third district court, on the trial calendar, State, John G. Kennedy, Dept. State Police, vs. Earl Edward Fenstermaker, 272 Woodbine street, Pawtucket, R. I., charged with speeding on the Noose Neck Hill road, April 13th, was fined $10 and costs.

William E. Coon, 37, charged with driving an auto in Westerly, on High street, Easter, while under the influence of liquor, changed his plea to guilty. Judge Williams said he would continue the case with the defendant directed to report to Probation Officer Elias Emmett at the judge's office at the close of the court and for each week thereafter, until a solution could be reached.

Albert G. Randall returned to New York Friday night, after a short visit with Westerly relatives. Next week he will visit Westerly to return to his home in New Rochelle, accompanied by his wife and family, who have passed an Easter vacation visit here.

Miss Girard, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Girard of Pawcatuck, a student nurse at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, New London, is recovering from diphtheria. Her father visited the Mitchell ward, where she is a patient, Thursday.

T., of Westerly, are in receipt of invitations from Palestine commandery, No. 6, K. T., of New London, Em. Sir Henry E. Hudson, commander, to attend a reception and banquet to be tendered the Grand commandery, Knights Templar of Connecticut, Rt. Em. C. WM. FRANKLIN HEN HELEN HAS GOOD TABLE MANNERS

William Franklin is the proud owner of a trained hen called "Helen." The hen seems to know a great deal. She is white with a brown spot on the tail. It took her master some time to get Helen trained, as beside her he has about 200 hens, all white as snow. He gets 75 eggs a day.

One morning as the kitchen door was open in walked the village trained hen as Mr. Franklin was having a cup of coffee and his browned toast. Helen jumped up on the chair beside her owner and hung her head low, like in prayer before breakfast. Then she drank some coffee and had a piece of toast, took a napkin from the table and wiped her bill, then shook her head, meaning "yes!" Then she jumped off the chair and walked out as if nothing had happened.

Since then Trainer Franklin makes Helen walk on her toes for a few feet. Then he will play the piano and the hen will sing while William shoots his hands over the ivories. By all reports, Helen is the only singing hen in the county that will do a solo to a piano accompaniment.

Also she is a great watchman. One night as the town was sleeping and her master was fast asleep under the army blankets, footsteps were heard around the house. That hen let out a noise that was good as a Indian war signal. The racket got William up, for he knew something was the matter. Getting a shot gun down from the wall, he started to see who was trying to peep around his house. Dashing out he saw a stranger running at top speed, but was too late to see who it was. Looking into the coop to see if all the hens were there, he found them O. K. But the trained hen kept wide awake until the excitement was over. Her master looked at the watchman out of his left eye and said to her, "You are a great hen! $100 could not buy you, for you are like a cop, always looking out for me and the house. I will thank you and will say good night. Now I'll go back to bed and get the rest of my beauty sleep!" So Helen nodded, meaning "O. K."

Other tricks Helen can do is counting high as 10 by scratching with her foot each time her master will start the count. Mr. Franklin had his new Ford out in the yard, looking over the engine. The trained hen was taking a walk out in the yard, for the day was warm, and she did not need any fur coat or umbrella. Helen went on the right side of the car and laid an egg on the running board. She made no noise and beat it away for Trainer Franklin had to take a load of eggs to Ledyard, for a friend wanted 100 eggs for a party. So jumping in the auto he speeded on his way up the eight miles. The roads are rough, following the winter storms. He took the eggs to his party, getting back around five o'clock in the afternoon, a distance of 16 miles. Getting out of the car on the right side he saw an egg that had traveled 16 miles on the running board and did not fall off, over the rough road to Ledyard. Walking over to the coop where Helen was asleep on her perch, Trainer Franklin looked in and called "Hey, Helen! did you lay that egg on the running board of that new Ford?" Looking down at him with an honest look in her eye, that fowl seemed to answer "Yes, owner, I did it! I am like George Washington, cannot tell a lie!" Well, that is all right, but don't let it happen again!"

Mr. Franklin was telling about his trained hen laying a egg on the running board which traveled to Ledyard and back and never fell off, when he was at the gas station, corner of Elm and Prospect Hill avenue. The bird cage came over to him, but William never caught it, for that was a true story, although the gang gave him the gasoline station laugh for letting a hen lay an egg on the new Ford. "Well, that shows it is a level one, also means no blowouts for one month!" Owner Franklin is some chesty over his hen that does such stunts.

MONTVILLE

A 1921 Dodge touring car belonging to Horace McKenny of Oakdale which was parked outside Michael Curtin's garage at Palmertown caught fire Thursday night at 7:30. The blaze destroyed all the upholstery and top of the car. The fire is believed to have been started by boys smoking. The fire was discovered by a small boy who rushed to the house of Charles Clark, owner of the garage, thinking it was his car. Mr. Clark succeeded in putting out the blaze with water from a watering trough nearby.

Daylight saving time will go into effect here Sunday. The change will include the factories and stores. All the churches in Montville will conduct services an hour earlier, beginning Sunday morning and all the public schools including Uncasville, Palmer-Memorial and rural schools will resume studies Monday morning on the new time schedule.

Irving Chapman of Uncasville was a business caller in Bridgeport Friday.

Theodore Allen, of Palmertown, is working at the Atlantic Coast Fisheries plant, Groton.

The Robertson's Paper Box Co. baseball team will play the fast Quaker Hill team Sunday afternoon at Quaker Hill. George Sisson will start on the mound for the locals.

Every Tenth Dog Licensed

According to a check-up at the town clerk's office, only one dog out of every ten over six months old has been registered up to the present. Out of 600, the estimated number of dogs in Montville, only 60 have been registered. Unless the other nine-tenths are tagged in the next week there will be an assessed penalty attached.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week were the coldest April 23 and 24 on record in Montville, according to a few old-timers who spent their childhood here. Many automobile radiators froze and a few farmers suffered a loss on early-planted vegetation.

A one-car garage being built for Herbert Rogers of Palmertown, is nearing completion.

Ask for a Ride

in the Red Rocket demonstrator . . learn what fine performance this low-priced six provides

Hail the driver of the car with the RED ROCKET. Ask to ride in and drive this New Series Pontiac Big Six. Learn what splendid performance Pontiac now provides.

SPEED, PICK-UP, POWER—Pontiac's high speed, quick pick-up and abundant power for climbing are made possible by its sturdy 60-horse-power engine, with 200 cubic inches piston displacement. It is the largest engine in any six of Pontiac's price.

UNUSUAL SMOOTHNESS—This engine is also unusually smooth due to new type rubber mountings—a more rigid crankcase—and the Harmonic Balancer which overcomes torsional crankshaft vibration.

EASY RIDING and DRIVING—Pontiac's riding ease is increased by Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers (standard equipment at no extra cost), and by large, comfortable Fisher bodies. Driving too is easier and safer due to Pontiac's new steering system acting on roller bearings and its new non-glare windshield.

Ask to drive the car with the RED ROCKET. Or come to our salesroom and receive a special demonstration. You'll find this finer Pontiac an exceptional "buy" at its low price.

Prices are f. o. b. Pontiac, Mich., plus delivery charges. Shock absorbers standard equipment. Bumpers and spring covers at slight extra cost. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

POETRY

The Book For You

I leave this book for you, O friend of mine,
To speak for me that day my lips are dumb.
A silent messenger I bid it come,
To gain the welcome I must needs resign.
I pray you on the night you miss me most,
That night when most you crave a word of me,
Beside your fire—and once again my host,
Open this book and greet me silently.
And read the poem that the worn page shows
I love best; and linger on the line
I marked there, as to say: "Lo, once a rose
I closed here for your finding, that was mine."
And otherwhere I know that you will say:
"Perchance she smiled here," and a smile will break
Upon your lips for our old laughter's sake.
And I shall hear, though very far away;
And in your reading if perchance you see
Upon one page the stain a tear might leave,
I doubt not our two hands may meet and cleave
Once more in their old bond of sympathy,
And in the mists of that dim borderland,
Beyond our 'wildered thoughts of time and space,
I think our souls a little while may stand,
And look a moment in each other's face.

—McCrae Pickering.

The Snows Of May

I love the blasts of winter, the keen, cold bracing air,
The harsh and rugged landscape, the whiteness everywhere;
I love the scurrying snowflakes that beat into my face,
I love Old Winter's energy, his rush push and pace;
But sweeter far than all the joys of any winter's day
Is just to be a-living and see the snows of May.
The snowbanks of the dogweed that dot the sylvan scene,
The hoar frost of the bluets amid the soft young green,
The fragrant snows of apple, of cherry, and of peach,
Give greater joy than can be told in any form of speech.
I love the blasts of winter, and every winter's day
But I'd rather be a-living and see the snows of May.

—C. D. Thurston, in Boston Transcript.

Elmer, age thirteen, was puzzled over the girl problem and discussed it with his pal, Joe.

"I've walked to school with her three times," he told Joe, "and carried her books. I bought her ice cream sodas twice. Now do you think I ought to kiss her?"

"Naw, you don't need to," Joe decided, after a moment of deep thought. "You've done enough for that girl already."—Exchange.

Kindness Does Not Consist in Gifts, But in Gentleness and Generosity of Spirit

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY

Prison-Pent.

There's a feeling—half of gladness—
Tinged with sorrow and with pain,
When the winds of Spring come calling
With their musical refrain.
There's a glamour and a perfume
That I cannot quite explain
In the odour of the lilacs,
In the silver of the rain.

Oh, the witchery and splendour
On the ruddy-strained capote
Of the robin singing gaily,
What no poet ever wrote.
There's the slightest semi-quaver
And a tremble in his note,
Then the molten, golden gladness
That comes pouring from his throat.

I never knew that Heaven was—
So close to yonder wall—
Till I heard the children's laughter,
Till I heard the song-birds call.
Now the mighty voice of Nature
Holds one penitent in thrall,
On my heart there lies a shadow,
On my soul there lies a pall.

Bird and bud and April shower—
And my body—prison-pent—
Oh, I'm sorry that I hearkened
To these signs from Heaven sent.
For my soul is hungry, famished,
And my spirit almost spent,
Weeping for the sun-kissed meadows
In the Valley of Content.

Lest my heart be overburdened—
Lest my spirit lose control—
I will draw the curtains, sadly,
O'er the windows of my soul.

BEWARE!

I devastate and kill beyond
The ravages of war;
Before the ending of today
I will have added more,
Of every age and every kind
Are on my list of dead;
I spare no one, and count will show
My toll is far ahead.
I am beside you constantly
On land or sea, in air;
And carry on relentlessly
At all times everywhere—
I am CARELESSNESS!!

EASTER

To the Readers of the Social Corner: Easter has come and gone, but what a glorious day Easter Sunday proved to be. Such a difference to the two days previous.

It seems to me those three days must have been as those days were so many, many years ago. I always think when Good Friday comes, of that poor heart-broken mother looking on at that terrible sad scene of her dear Son suffering by the hands of those heartless men. We, that are mothers, know just how we feel whenever anything happen to our children. If injured or ill how downhearted we feel, but nothing has ever happened to our children compared to Our Saviour's terrible scourging and brutal treatment.

Why wouldn't the world feel sad? Even the heavens tell of their sorrow by sending rain-clouds, the sun could not shine through all that sadness. But on Easter Sunday! What a wonderful change! The sky so clear and blue, the sun shone brightly, flowers had burst into bloom seemingly over night and the birds were so happy. Every thing was so peaceful and glad to be alive. Why? Because our Lord was victorious over death. He broke those chains that bound Him those two dark days. Why shouldn't every thing and everybody feel happy?

I attended services Easter Sunday at the Baptist church at North Stonington and heard a very interesting and inspiring sermon. The text was taken from the 28th chapter of St. Matthew, and after services were over I walked slowly down the street, these lines seemed to linger in my mind. Lines from a beautiful poem my daughter recited once at the Road church.

"Years ago in days long vanished
In a sunny eastern land
By a freshly opened cave-side
Stood a brave devoted band.
Eagerly they sought the Master,
Who, three darksome days before
From His side the life blood dripping
To the tomb they sadly bore.
But instead of lifeless body
Angels bright they did behold
Bringing news of Christ's ascension
From the grave they did unfold."

I wish I could remember the rest of that beautiful poem. Perhaps I can get it from my daughter as she has such excellent memory.

That this joyful season has brought health and strength to those who were ill and a peace of mind to those who had cause to worry over their loved ones, rest, to the tired body is the wish of OMAHA BEE.

Uses For Corn Meal

Dear Cornerites: The Social Corner page was so small last week I didn't think there was any at first, so thought I would have one more letter in this week. The following are tested recipes for uses of corn meal.

JOHNNY CAKE—Sift 1 cup of flour into a mixing bowl. Sift and measure 3-4 cup of corn meal and put on top of the flour. Measure 1-3 cup of sugar and put with flour and meal. Measure 2 1-2 level tablespoons of shortening and put into a cake tin. Put pan in oven until shortening is melted. Sift 3-4 teaspoon of salt with the flour and also 4 teaspoons of baking powder when sweet milk is used. If sour milk or butter milk is used sift one teaspoon of baking powder with the flour. Break one egg into a bowl and beat until light. Mix this into the meal and flour. Measure one cup of milk and if sweet mix with other ingredients at once. If sour or butter milk is used, use 3-4 cup of liquid and a scant teaspoon of soda stirred into the milk. Fill the cup with hot water and mix with dry ingredients. Add the melted shortening and mix all together well. Grease the pan with the shortening left in it. Pour in the corn cake mixture. Put pan in a hot oven and bake 25 to 35 minutes according to thickness. This is specially good baked in muffin tins for breakfast or supper.

BROWN BREAD—2 cups meal, 1 cup rye, 1-2 cup molasses, 2 1-3 cups milk (preferrably sour); 1 teaspoon soda, salt. Steam three hours. I steam the bread in my double boiler. Sometimes I add a little white flour and raisins. If sour milk isn't available and we have a brown bread hunger, I put a teaspoon of soda into a cup fill with boiling water and first scald the meal. Then I add molasses and mix. Then put in the rye flour and a half cup of white flour with a teaspoon of baking power sifted with it. Then thin the mixture to the right consistency with sweet milk and steam in a well greased double boiler. For brown bread sandwiches it is more attractive steamed in baking powder cans.

SPOON BREAD—2 cups hot water, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 cup yellow corn meal, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 eggs (whites and yolks beaten separately). Mix the water and milk and bring to the boiling point. Slowly stir in the corn meal. Stir all the time and cook for five minutes. Remove from the fire and stir in the shortening and 3-4 teaspoon of salt. Then stir in the egg yolks. Lastly, fold in the egg whites, pour into a buttered dish and bake for thirty minutes. This is best eaten at once. We like it with a hearty meal in place of bread and it is delicious served as a dessert with cream and sugar.

Hope some of the sisters will like these recipes as much as I do.

WINONA.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

E. PLURIBUS UNUM: Your name has been listed as a Corner member.

MRS. J. R. L.: Letter sent as requested.

WOODSIDE: Your name has been added to the Social Corner list.

SHARP TONGUES

Dear Editor: Someone asked for a cold cream and here it is: Cold cream: One ounce white wax, one ounce spermaceti, one-fourth pin oil of almonds. Shave the wax and spermaceti, add to oil in earthen ware jar; stand in pan of water on back of stove until melted. Then add four fluid ounces of rose water; keep stirring until cool. Put into glass jars.

I happened to read a couplet by the "Cheerful Cherub" which said:

"Sometimes at night my conscience wakes with pangs, it seems that naught can lull.
If I could always feel like this how good I'd be and oh, how dull!"

This sentiment was expressed concerning a lady who never "gossiped." How good she is but oh, how dull. "By Jingo's" letter was good as it brought out a truth we cannot deny that there are women with tongues like two-edged swords, who delight to say unkind, and very often untrue things, of other women.

A friend of mine was in a group of women who were of this type. She listened to their unkind remarks until she said she thought she would scream. She then said to them: "Can you prove what your are saying?" The group answered: "Well no, but it's what everybody says." I happen to know that it was all lies those women were repeating and I praise God for one friend who was brave enough to say to them: "Can you prove what you are saying."

So the writer that "By Jingo" quoted was correct. They still exist, more's the pity, "carelessness in speech."

Thank you for sunshine slip some time ago. "LUBEC."

EASTER SUNRISE SERVICE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: It was my privilege and great pleasure to attend a sunrise service on Easter morning. I made special effort to awake early and be able to leave the house at 4:30 a. m. The street lights were on, the half moon was shining and as I hurried along alone, in the quiet of the dawn, scarcely a sound I heard, only that of my own footsteps on the pavement. Less than a half hour's walk, the latter part across a beautiful park, then up to the brow of a hill, where I found several people who had preceded me, comfortably seated on benches and shortly the remaining spaces were taken up which accommodated 1,000 persons.

We were given programs with the words of the songs to be used. It was a beautiful clear and cool morning, the birds were singing and all nature was grand. A lovely view over the green valley, and above the budded tree tops, across and far beyond the Connecticut river to the hills of the eastern horizon, where earth and sky seemed to meet. At one certain spot, there appeared a delicate pinkish tint and here we watched for that golden light to emerge on this Easter morn. We heard the bugle call, a little distance from us, rendered by a young man, to invite our attention, for which we were assembled, then the leader announced we would sing.

At this moment the perfect sun was rising in all its glorious splendor, and many voices were lifted in words of song:

"Holy, Holy, Holy Lord God Almighty
Early in the morning
Our song shall rise to Thee."

This was followed by prayer, concluding in the Lord's prayer by all. After the Scripture reading regarding the resurrection, we listened to a wonderful sermon, so plain it almost seemed our mental vision could witness those pathetic scenes of the long ago. The closing hymn, "Crown Him with Many Crowns," followed by the benediction over bowed heads, and the beautiful service was concluded.

REMEMBERS THE HUSKING BEES

Dear Social Corner Friends: I have not written for some time, but in last week's paper Quid Nunc told about the husking party they used to have. I lived out at Gardner's lake about thirty years and while there we had three husking parties. We sent out invitations to friends and neighbors and they came and husked out the corn and put it in the bin. They found some red ears of corn and that made fun for them. Then they came in for supper. We had an oyster supper and pumpkin pie but no cider, for my husband did not approve of cider. We had a jolly good time, I think better than the people have now.

We used to have church socials and suppers. I had several of them when Mr. Crabb preached at the lake.

I will write about cleaning house. I have papered one room and have done other things this winter. I pieced two bed quilts and crocheted a door panel. I also made a sofa pillow top and did lots of sewing besides. I am doing something all of the time, sometimes making tatting when I can't find anything else to do.

Best wishes to all.

HER DRIVING EXPERIENCE

Dear Corner Members: It has been a long time since I have written so thought it about time I sent in a few lines. I attended the meeting in North Stonington, held by Club No. 6, and had a nice time. It seemed good to get away for a day as I haven't been anywhere but once since Christmas. We had a fine dinner and program.

Prairie Chicken: If I had known you wanted someone to play the piano I would have done the best I could.

Sumac: Don't get one so excited next time. I still think of it and laugh. You know what I mean.

Derona: Thanks for the card. Expected to see you at the meeting.

Some of you wrote of your driving experiences. I must say I have driven for three years, but only had one thrill and that's enough. I never drive over twenty miles an hour. A large truck struck the machine on the Westerly bridge and bent one fender up double. It sure gave me a good scare as I thought I was going into the river as we went across the sidewalk against the iron fence. I guess I have written enough for this time so will close with best wishes to everyone.

GREAT LOSS IN DEATH OF COMMUTER

Dear Editor Social Corner: I feel that I must tell the sisters of Club No. 6, how sad, I for one, (and I know there are many others) feel in the passing of Commuter, Mrs. Fred Coon, of Preble, N. Y., a true friend to me for more than 35 years. She and her husband lived in my neighborhood when they first came from New York state, and when I married and went away from home she was so kind to my father and mother, who were left alone, that they loved her as a daughter.

She and her husband, in fact, most of the young folks called my parents pa and ma. Thereby I got my pen-name. Don't know who American Girl is but I agree with her that our loss is great, for a truer Christian friend one could not find—always ready with a word of comfort if one was in trouble or in any way that she could help. At other times ready with a joke and a good laugh.

My sympathy goes out to her family and especially her husband whose health is not good and whose home will never be the same.

Breeze: Was glad to see a letter from you. Haven't seen you since I was at Miss Palmer's.

Idaleane: Did you get my letter? Have been looking for the one you said you would write me. I am still at the address I gave you.

Rebecca: Hope you are well this spring. Would like to hear from you.

Best wishes to the Corner.

PRISON POETRY

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: I was sorry to note the shortage of letters on our page today but suppose most of us have been busy house cleaning and gardening. Jane of R. I., who is proving herself a faithful contributor, speaks of the literary ability of many men who are behind prison bars. This reminded me of an article I read some years ago in a Connecticut paper, the editor of which published several poems by a young man who was serving time for theft. I have these in my scrap book and am sending one of them, "Prison-Pent," for our poetry column. It doesn't seem that a boy who could write such verse as this could be bad at heart. I am also sending some verses called "Prayer of a Pent-up Soul." These appeared recently in the Ansonia Evening Sentinel and they seem to fit so well the thought expressed in the splendid motto given us by our editor today: "Within ourselves deliverance must be sought, each man his prison makes." I trust many of us will respond to Riverview's invitation to send greetings to her father on his 90th birthday. I am glad our Sister has offered us this opportunity to give pleasure. I hope to see an overflowing page on the 26th. With the season's greetings to all, especially the shut-ins and those in sorrow.

WOMEN AS DRIVERS

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: It has been my pleasure to attend two of your meetings in the past and enjoyed them so very much that I would like to apply for membership in the Corner.

I always read all the Corner letters and have really been a member "in spirit," as you might say, for some time.

I was very much interested in Firefly's letter on driving experiences. I, too, am a driver, and I try to be as considerate of others as I can. If I am sitting in my car and someone hasn't room to pull away from the curb why it doesn't inconvenience me a great deal to back up and let them out, but I have been blocked in, in this way, and have seen drivers sitting in their cars who wouldn't move for the world and seem to enjoy seeing me inch my way out.

The women get a great deal of criticism from the men for their driving but really some of the mdeserve it. I don't wish to be disloyal to my sex in saying this, but give some women a car to drive and, as the authority that goes with an officer's uniform sometimes turns his head, so the power of a motor seems to go to theirs. Some of the very rudest things done to me on the road have been done by women drivers.

Would like to take as my pen name,

DRIVING A HORSE

Dear Social Corner Editor and Members: I have been considering asking to join your Corner for some time but after Sumac's letter last week, could not postpone it any longer, as I feel sure she will be interested in my experience driving a horse.

I went to my father-in-law's one day on the gig. He gave me a paper bag of seed sweet corn and a small lamb in a bag which I had on the seat with me. As I went to turn off the state road onto the town road, I dropped one line. The horse was trotting right along and with the rein dangling at its heels did not slacken its pace. I knew there was a steep hill, railroad tracks and sharp turn ahead, so continued to pull on one rein I held and we cut lively circles all over the large mowing lot beside the road, with me hollering whoa all the time. I finally recovered the rein and arrived home safely.

If I am accepted as a member will write of other experiences, also about driving a car, as I have had a license for six years.

L. T. H.: Your letter did me a great deal of good as I had just heard of a friend who had a Buick sedan given to her for an Easter present and I had been wondering where my next tire was coming from. Thanks so much.

Aries: Please tell me what to feed young geese, as mine always get weak legs.

I fear this is rather long for a first letter but have read and enjoyed yours so long I feel I know many of you personally.

NICE TIME AT MEETING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It was a fine day for Club No. 6 meeting. I was sorry to see so many absent, but I suppose each had a reason. All those who did come I hope had a pleasant time and for once the hall was warm enough and to spare as the furnace grate had been repaired. Everybody responded generously with the food and we had very little left, a few beans and those we sold.

Fire-Fly: You must have a charmed life. I had the pleasure of being tipped over once but was not driving; some sensation while you are waiting to land.

Sumac: Our late friend never came after all. I am wondering if I shall see you at Norwich Wednesday.

WONDERFUL TIME AT CLUB NO. 1'S MEETING

Social Corner Sisters: How are you all this beautiful Easter afternoon? How lovely to see nature coming to life, trees are budding, lilacs have tiny leaves and our lawn looks like beautiful green velvet. It makes one glad and thankful to be alive, and give thanks to God for His great goodness.

First I wish to thank a Social Member for my lovely calendar. How we would feel if we did not receive one, and then am so slow in acknowledging it.

I wish all the Social Corner members could have attended the April meeting of Club 1 at Willimantic. Too Late and her helpers served a most delicious dinner. (You remember she told us to bring a soup plate.) Well, we had the tastiest clam chowder I ever ate, made with fresh clams, also succatash, baked beans, salads, relishes, rolls, pies, cakes, coffee and last but by no means least, a plate was set at each place with a hot cross bun and a tiny yellow chicken. Everything was so good and showed no effort was spared to make the dinner a memorable one. Thank you Too Late and helpers for expending so much time and labor in giving us such an appetizing dinner.

The afternoon was spent in having a real old-fashioned social time. Some readings were given and enjoyed. Am sure we each returned to our homes with some precious and happy memories of the day.

Cosmos and Prarie Chicken: Was sorry could not atend meeting at North Stonington. Know I missed a splendid time.

Isadore, Club 3: Regret I was unable to get to your meeting. Know what a pleasant time I would have had, but did not feel able to go three days running. Am getting old, I guess, although they say there are no old folks now. Sometimes I feel as if I were only 16 and again I feel as if I were 80.

I attended four anniversaries and had a wonderful time at each one. How many happy days are registered in memory's book since I joined the Social Corner 17 years ago! And the many lovely friends I have made.

Quid Nunc: Your account of a husking bee was greatly enjoyed. I knew Mr. Stanton over 30 years, but never attended one of his "bees." Considered both Mr. and Mrs. Stanton dear friends.

I wonder how many of the sisters do the following: I save all my old sheets and pillow cases and any white cotton goods, wash and iron them, then tear into squares and place in a drawer. Then when these disagreeable colds come, I have the members of my family use these squares for handkerchiefs and when they are soiled, simply put into fire and burn them, thereby saving not only unpleasant laundryings, but the danger of infection, also.

How many of you tuned in on the radio to hear the Rose of New England's Schoolmaster and Doctor? Our reception was perfect and I enjoyed every minute. The music was good and I shall certainly not miss an evening of it.

Meadow Brook and Lowthorp: Am glad you have joined the Corner. Was pleased to read Meadow Lark's account of the North Stonington meeting.

REPORT OF MEETING

Dear Corner Friends: I have been trying to get a letter in the Corner page to tell you what a nice meeting the April one of Club No. 2 was. At 11:30 so few were there that I feared all of our "come-outs" to the Corner must be house cleaning but in a very few minutes they began to come in and when dinner was served we surely had a ful house who did ample justice to the good dinner.

The tables were very pretty. Red Rose, whom I asked to look after that part of the work at every meeting, takes that part from each hostess as she does not have to see to napkins or candles or, in fact, any decoration.

Red Rose surely worked hard this time as she colored and boiled five dozen eggs which were placed in reed baskets, trimemd with violet-colored crepe paper for center pieces. On each table were crepe paper runners in the center of the tables, yellow candles in glass holders, in groups of two on each table and napkins in violet. In all it was a very pretty effect. Every lady did not get an egg, as 60 went at first sitting of the tables. Isadore, who was our April hostess surprised her helpers by furnishing yellow caps and a lovely chicken pie. It surely was a treat and tasted as good as it looked.

A few minutes of silence was taken at the dinner hour in memory of two of our club members who recently passed away, Frances M. K. and Francenia. Mawb made a prayer after the silence. The families have the sympathy of the members.

Dr. Charles Lamb was present and was heard in a solo, "In the Garden," which was enjoyed. Others took part in readings and songs from our song books. Country Sister and her violin, with Mrs. Twist at the piano and Isadora with banjo, played for dancing which all enjoyed. As I forgot to get a hostess for May meeting you can't realize what a pleasure when Black Eyed Susan called on the phone and said: "If you haven't a hostess for next month, Mayfare and I will serve." Right here I thank you two for offering to serve. I wish others would do the same and make the work easier. Remember, we have only May and June indoor meetings when we close for the summer outdoor picnic where all are privileged to attend.

Hoping all had a pleasant Easter. Mine was a celebration of my 38th wedding anniversary quietly. Best wishes.

SALTING DOWN FISH

Dear Social Corner: This is evidently one of spring's sterner moods, only eighteen above zero at 7.30 this morning. It sorts of puts a damper on gardening zeal, what? It nearly froze my fingers while hanging out a few clothes this morning. (The clothes did freeze.) So have concluded that this is a good day to keep the home fires burning.

I salted down a jar of fish this morning. This is the way I did it. The fish were first cleaned, heads and tails cut off (the variety is alewives so they also have to be scaled), then washed thoroughly in at least three waters. Then cover the bottom of a stone crock with salt, put in a layer of fish, cover with salt and continue until jar is full, having top layer of salt. I use fine salt, and plenty of it. It is better to use more than is really needed than to have not quite enough. Invert a plate over the top. When the brine forms put a weight on the plate to hold the fish under the brine. They will keep perfectly.

AMERICAN CHOP SUEY

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: As I have not writen in quite a while I thought I would write and give you all my best wishes.

Lone Feather: I thought I would send you the recipe in this way so others may try it also.

American Chop Suey: 1 pound of hamburg fried with 3 good sized onions in two tablespoons of butter. Add one cup of cooked rice, one cup of cooked spaghetti, one can of tomato soup or vegetable soup. Vegetable soup preferred. It gives the dish a better flavor. Season with salt and pepper, simmer one hour.

DUTCHMAN'S BREECHES

PROGRAM OF MEETING

Dear Social Corner Readers: A friend requests the program to be sent to the paper as she was unable to come to the meeting and as I have no especial topic, will comply with her wish. I persume it would be more satisfactory if I wrote it in detail rather than outline so it goes as follows:

To announce my readiness to the company I rapped loudly on the door nearest the piano. E. L. M. opened the door. We exchanged a greeting and I apologized for being so late, but I had come a long way. I had been about two weeks getting here with my satchel under one arm, a hat box in the right hand, work bags hanging from my wrists. I proceeded to the table and set them on it. I took off my hat, scarf, old fashion red paisley shawl, and my coat. I explained to the people it was cold out there, where I came from, the snow hadn't left, and the prairie dogs hadn't even come out of their homes in the ground. I then started to hunt for the program. I opened the satchel on which a huge yellow bow was tied. Out of the satchel I took a good sized cretone work bag, a yellow bow on that too, from that I took my tapestry handbag that was also tagged with yellow, but where was the program? Nearly every thing was in that bag, a powder puff for my poor hurt nose, (hurt three days previous), a whistle, a watch, but no program. I told the folks I didn't have time to go back to Cripple Creek in Rattlesnake valley to get it and perhaps I would find it, so I took out another small bag and inside of that was a little black pocketbook. Both of these had yellow ribbons on them. Well, inside the tiny purse I found that program. If you notice I tagged nearly every article with yellow, even my scarf had a yellow ribbon. Why so many yellow ribbons? That was a mystery. We will unravel that mystery later. To proceed with the program, I wrote in last week's letter of my great disappointment, (the lack of music) so will make no further mention this time.

The opening song was "America," by all. We then listened to the secretaries report. Lucille Drew read to us a very humorous poem, then Yellow Jacket gave us a very amusing selection. The subject was "A Piece of Red Calico." Our sympathy went out to the poor husband who must have been weary and foot-sore trying to please his wife.

The fifth number was a solo by Meadow Lark, then I recited an Irish dialogue, "The Troubles of Casey and Ryley." A guest next favored us with two very humorous recitations. We would have been satisfied to have listened to her all the afternoon, she was so intensely entertaining. Another guest and myself struggled through a song. Then we had an Easter-egg hunt. Here is where we unravelled the mystedy of all those yellow ribbons on satchel, fox scarf, cretone bag, tapestry handbag, another red one and black purse. An egg was hidden in all of those articles. Five ladies were chosen to hunt, Yellow Jacket, Skipper, Topsy, Sumac and Miss Bargius. Two prizes were awarded: Miss Bergius received the first prise as she found the most eggs. Topsy was made happy and consoled by a huge yellow chicken. She found the least.

Four gladiolus bulbs was the first prize and we sincerely hope that when those lifeless looking bulbs burst into bloom and Miss Bergius admires their beauty, they will remind her of her first meeting with the Social Corner members. Our closing hymn was, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." That as the end of the program. My first attempt.

CUTTING BACK THE SPUDS

Dear Social Corner Friends: Now would not that make you mad? My nice typewriter broke. I can't use it anymore but will write anyway.

Hope you all had a nice Easter. We did and what nice days we are having. My boy planted potatoes in the back yard. He only had room for two hills. I wish him luck.

Let me tell you what I did a few years ago. I had more room then. I planted 40 hills of "spuds" and when they were tall and full of bloom, a boy over the stone wall told me if I cut them away down they would grow better under ground, large potatoes, etc. Of course I did it. Well, they grew in both places and if I remember rightly, the potatoes were fine. Not large, but "Early Rose," and so good. I have an orange and lemon and grapefruit tree in sun parlor, and many plants. I love flowers, wild flowers I bring home when on auto rides.

JANE OF R. I.

LETTERS RECALL OTHER DAYS

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: It is a long time since I wrote a letter to the Corner and I presume my name is forgotten among the many Social Corner writers. I have often thought I would write when I have seen some item of interest by another such as the trundle-bed and early school days.

Much was learned in those old partially graded school days from hearing the older pupils recite and from the blackboard work. One thing gained and one which I feel is lost by the pupils of the closely graded schools is concentration upon your work no matter who is talking around you.

Another subject which is holding the attention of people now is the enforcement of the prohibition laws. The other day I came across a clipping from an old paper, a report of a T. A. B. society meeting, written in the days when there were some who believed in total abstinence and when the saloon held away. This report contained an original poem written by one who is still living in our city and I hope stands firm for enforcement as the tone of this poem would seem to indicate he might stand.

The poem is entitled, "The Tyrant of the World" and I would ask the editor to give place to its re-publication. I think it will be of interest at the present time except the publication of original poetry is against the rules. It is signed M. J. C. May 21, 1896.

HAS UNIQUE QUILT

Dear Social Corner Sisters: There has come to me, by way of an auction, a well worn and evidently beloved quilt made by many loving hands, for a certain lady, whose name and whose station at the time of the donation of the quilt, I will not at this moment disclose. It had been cleaned by steam, very choicely, and just now I was looking it over, it having just arrived. Very worn parts I was intent on cutting away, for I wanted to bind the center part and lay it away in an upper bedroom, when something caught my eye. Could I believe my eyes? "From your friend Frances Blanchard, Killingly, Conn." met my eyes and it was then I realizing I was committing a desecration in cutting away parts, even eaten by rats, as it was, but now, as I say again, thoroughly cleaned and disinfected, I dared not go further. Closer and closer I bent over the faded writing, for I beheld in every square, the signature of some dear friend of the owner. Can one of my readers and sisters of the Social Corner, go further? For I should certainly appreciate, in black and white the story of my fine old quilt. I think I know part of the story, for of course I do know where the quilt came from. Here are the delicate autographs I can decipher, with the help of my strong reading glass. The first that I had seen, remember was that of Frances Blanchard. Then, in another corner stood the word Mother, and I was deeply touched. Then, Ellen M. Blackman, S. Shumway, this square it was which I had been cutting aawy, for it was entirely obliterated by fine destroyers. Then Sarah Jewett, Baltic Conn., Faith Adams, B. Brown, P. Whipple, 61, Mrs. Edwin Percie, T. A. Grason, (a question, for it was not clear), M. Barnet, Caroline M. Perry, from a friend, A. Blockson (?), Charlotte Truesdale, Harrieta Bussey, Julia A. Adams, Boston 1864, A. (?) Leonard, Eliza A. Kelley, Harriet Larmat, F. Leonard, Lucy J. Wheaton. The name of the town is to delicate to read.

I shall lay aside this precious quilt and hope that some special sister whom I have in mind, will come to the rescue with its story, I wish I could replace the worn parts.

YOUR NEIGHBOR.

MY HOUSE IRIS

Dear Social Corner: I would like to ask Pernickety, if she remembers that plant that Aunt Molly forgot and left in my car last Thanksgiving? She hasn't come for it yet and I have had the pleasure of watching it grow and bloom. You told me that it was a house iris and the foliage does look like some kinds of iris. One of my neighbors calls this plant an Egyptian lily. As I had never seen one before I was curious to see its blossoms.

Weeks ago I noticed that there was a bud coming. It grew so slowly that I thought it would never bloom. Sunday I was watering my plants and missed the stalk that was budded. I was sure that the children had not disturbed it. After an anxious moment I found the long stem bent over among some other plants. But what was this dark colored ball on the end? Was this the blossom that I had waited so long for? Then Aunt Molly could have her old plant. Later in the day the bloom dropped off leaving another bud.

Tuesday morning this had opened into a perfectly lovely iris-like blossom. It had three pure white petals that spread out. The center was brown and here were three blue petals that curled inward. How I admired it! But in a few hours the outside petals began to wither and later they curled up. By night-fall the bloom was all shut up like a brown ball. So the first ball that I noticed was the remains of a blossom that I did not see.

Two weeks have passed since I began this letter. Now I am going to finish telling you about the iris plant. A new plant grew on the end of the leaf where the blooms were. I broke it off today and set it in a pot of dirt. I hope it will root and grow for me.

My flowering maple has grown fast laely. It has a lot of buds and several pink blooms. Why doesn't my Jerusalem cherry get any fruit? I have a lot of coleus slips started. Hoping to see you soon.

CANTERBURY GREEN

A large gathering was in the Congregational church at Canterbury on Sunday evening to listen to the Easter cantata entitled Life Eternal by Fred B. Holton, given under the auspices of the Sunday school. The chorus was under the direction of Mrs. William Wright, and Mrs. Walter Sager, with Lewis Safford pianist. The opening number was played by two violins, Mrs. Merrell Hawes and Mrs. Dwight Bushnell, Mrs. Wright accompanying on the piano. A short scripture reading by Mrs. Arthur Tracy, superintendent of the Sunday school and prayer by the pastor followed. The soloists were Mrs. Lucy Davis, soprano; Mrs. Sager, contralto; William Wright, tenor, and Arthur Tracy, bass. The floral decorations, of Easter lilies, other plants and flowers were very beautiful.

A special sermon and special music were features of the morning service when the infant son of Mr and Mrs. Charles Hart was baptized.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Towne of Hartford were visitors Sunday at Henry Larkham's.

Mrs. Hiram Hawes returned home Wednesday, after spending a few days with New Jersey relatives.

Mr. Chester of Providence was a caller at the Hawes' home the first of the week.

Rev and Mrs. Harry Small are visiting their daughter in New York this week.

Barbara Creates A Gold-Digger

By WALTER MARQUISS

J. "BRUIN" MANDELL COULD MORE THAN HOLD HIS OWN IN THE REALM OF FINANCE, BUT WHEN HE SOUGHT TO APPLY BUSINESS METHODS TO THE ROMANTIC AFFAIRS OF HIS DAUGHTER HE RECEIVED AN AWFUL JOLT

"CAPTAIN PENNY" swung into its zippy finale, and the company of 100 filled the theatre with billows of melody. Barbara Mandell, from a left-hand box, singled out a tall young man, garbed as a gay officer in Nelson's navy, and blew him a surreptitious kiss. Toby Thorne wriggled his shoulders inside his impeccable dresscoat and growled, half humorously:

"I say, I think I'm geting jealous of that fella."

Barbara turned with a gorgeous smile, which revealed one reason why Toby would quit in the middle of a hot polo match, if necessary, to be with her. She put a firm, warm hand over his fingers.

"Be yourself, Toby!"

The youth to whom she had wafted the caress was only a minor character in this Broadway musical hit, but he was as good-looking as the star, dark-haired, with eyes that snapped with life, and, as Barbara whispered to Toby:

"Searl King certainly has got a voice, hasn't he?"

Toby, his lean, sun-browned features presenting an engaging profile, looked at Searl King judiciously and agreed:

"Needs a bit of training, but—not bad at all."

The final curtain dropped cutting off the scene like a pair of giant scissors. As Barbara arose, Toby asked: "Going back-stage again tonight, Babs?"

"Yes, Toby dear," she smiled. "I'll make it up to you, old darling. You can take me home; well, tomorrow night, say."

With a gesture of reluctant resignation he grumbled: "Have to do, I guess. How about tea tomorrow?"

"I'm figuring," she replied "on tea with Searl. Good night, Toby."

Toby stared after her with the expression of a man dying of loneliness as she tripped up a small flight of steps and through a curtained passage leading to the stage.

NEAR his dressing-room door Barbara found Searl King waiting for her. They met with outstretched hands and an observant one, regarding them closely, might have raised a sympathetic eyebrow and whispered: "Aha! Here's a pair of lovebirds!"

Barbara, in particular, was well worth a scrutiny. She came very near to what the novelists call beautiful, and a lexicographer would look long to find a more descriptive term for her than "dainty." She looked like a fragile bit of china, yet zestful ripples of her evening gown suggested litheness, vitality.

As to accessories, she had copper-colored hair, vivid lips in an oval, vivacious face and brown eyes which somehow made you wonder whether she was loving you or laughing at you. Her clothes could not have suited her more perfectly.

None of this perfection escaped Searl King, but he was not a bit ill at least on being greeted by such a goddess. He welcomed her with the casual hail of fellowship.

"Hello, there," he said.

"I liked you tonight," she returned, and a light flashed up in his countenance.

"Did you, really? It's surprising you even knew I was in the cast."

"Because you're not the star? Cheer up, old dear; some day you will be. With that voice of yours, you'll make stage history. Grand opera—why not?"

"Grand opera!" he echoed wistfully. There was a moody look in his eyes as he peered across the stage at the gigantic electric switchboard. He produced a sigh.

"I wonder—"

"You wonder what?" she asked, after waiting.

"I wonder if I'll ever do as much for the stage as my father did."

"Oh." She also looked at the switchboard.

They had often discussed Searl's father during their brief acquaintance; grizzled Jim King, who had died in harness, broke, without realizing any of the fruits of his labor, which had made millions for others. A stage electrician, Jim King had invented, with only the theatre in mind, certain lighting effects which had been snapped up avidly by owners of factories and stores and hotels. A theatrical innovation had proved an industrial necessity. It was at a moment of financial desperation that he had sold out his rights for $500. The courts had ruled that a bargain was a bargain, and the King family had no legal claim to more. Today, while others enjoyed the profits, Searl King was still paying off his father's debts.

"In another year I'll have 'em all paid," he had told Barbara a week or so before. "Then I can start saving for my musical education."

That expression had caused Barbara much thought, for he had made it on the very evening of her discovery that Searl was the son of Jim King.

Searl turned from the big switchboard. "Wait till I dress?" he said, and slipped into his room. In a surprisingly brief time he was ready for the street.

When he reopened the door, Barbara sauntered in. Barbara had been almost everywhere, but this was her first visit to a theatrical dressing room. She glanced about with curious interest, while Searl, manlike, apologized for the messy appearance of the place.

"Bachelor, you know. And I can't afford a valet."

Barbara paused before his dressing table, peering down at a large cabinet photograph of a sprightly girl, standing there in an expensive frame. Taking it up, she turned to the man.

"Paula Cissna, isn't it?"

He nodded.

"Yes. She's in Hollywood, making a picture. Coming back next week."

The photograph had been autographed "with love." Barbara set it back on the table.

"Having Paula Cissna's picture in here, like this," she told him, "might make me jealous. Should I be?"

Searl grinned. "I think you know, Barbara," he answered.

Smiling, Barbara patted his cheek.

"Let's go," she suggested; and they were off to a night club, where they danced and talked until hours had gone by.

IT WAS noon before Barbara was out of bed. As she had her late breakfast, Turner, the butler, delivered a message:

"Your father, Miss Barbara, requested me to say that he expects you to come to his office as soon as you get up."

A queer little speculative look dawned in Barbara's eyes.

"Thank you, Turner," she answered. "Did he look—bearish?"

"Quite bearish, miss," Turner replied, an eyelash flickering humorously. "In fact, I'm quite sure, miss, you may reasonably expect him to growl at you."

Barbara drew a long breath

"It's all because of flaming youth, Turner," she observed. "And staying out until 4 in the morning. I am now expected to give an accounting for my sins."

"I surmised as much, miss," Turner said, taking away the shell of her grapefruit.

About an hour later Barbara came into the general offices of the Mandell corporation with the zest of a fresh young breeze. Singing out, "Hello, everybody!" she waved a genial greeting to clerks and stenographers, whose admiring eyes followed her until she vanished through the door of the huge private room of James B. Mandell, president.

The "B," Barbara usually misinformed any one who inquired, stood for "Bruin," or, on some days, simply "Bear." And now, as her father looked up from his desk, he did have a remarkable resemblance to some shaggy king of grizzlies, reared up in a cave in the Rocky mountains.

He had been something of a bear in business, too; powerful, at times predatory. Yet his make-up also contained characteristics of the fox. As head of the Mandell corporation, he had combined force with cunning to the profit of stockholders and himself. Thrift he had practiced only in a grand way, and a native shrewdness in driving hard bargains had reaped millions in extra dividends. Of this he was proud; and if any one had suggested that there had been times when his methods leaned a shade away from the ethical, he would have been both surprised and angry. He believed himself eminently just and honest, with the good of his stockholders ever at heart.

"I promise," she murmured, "not "Good morning, daddy dear," Barbara greeted him demurely. He glowered at his desk-clock.

"Morning! Call 2 o'clock morning? What time did you get up, anyway?"

"I felt sure you might ask that, daddy dear," she answered, "so I looked. It was exactly seven minutes after 12."

"Needn't be so exact, confound it! It was after noon, wasn't it?"

"Yes," she admitted, with pouting yet humorous lips.

"And it was after 4 when you got to bed."

"I didn't suppose you'd mind, daddy dear."

"Dont wheedle me," he rumbled in his deepest bass. "Don't wheedle me!" to wheedle."

Her father escaped from her caressing fingers by getting up and stamping half across the room. He knew how futile was any hope of victory over his radiant daughter if he permitted her to remain too near him. How can a man be stern and judicious when an adored set of fingers is fondling his hair, and an idolized voice is cooing in his ear that he's just the nicest old bear of a daddy in the whole world?

"Little minx!" he exploded. "You think you can wheedle me. You think you can make me give you anything you want, don't you?"

She looked more demure than ever.

"Yes, daddy dear."

He emitted a noise peculiarly like a snort.

"Young lady," he barked, "do you know you've got people talking about you? Do you know that?"

Barbara sat up straight.

"How thrilling! What are they saying?"

"Plenty! But you can make up your mind right now you're not going to marry that actor! I won't have it!"

Batting her eyes, Barbara returned: "Searl is an awfully nice boy, daddy dear."

Her father shook his finger.

"He figures on making it pay to be nice. I know him. Just like all actors. Like his father—improvident. He's mercenary. A male gold-digger. He's after your money!"

"I haven't any money."

"Well, my money, then. It'll be yours some day, won't it. In his excitement James B. walked here and there. "Well he won't get it! You can't marry him! I won't have it, you understand!"

"But why not?" She pouted and looked very lovely.

His hands went out and up.

"Why in thunderation do you want to go and fall in love with that—that actor—when you can have a man like Toby Thorne——"

"Oh, Toby!" said Barbara.

"Plenty of girls would jump at the chance, mark that. Young and rich and good-looking—the best polo player in seven states——"

"I don't intend to marry any man because he's a polo player," Barbara protested mildly. "Or because he's rich. I've got to love him if I marry a man!"

"You loved him until this actor bird came along. I thought sure—I've dreamed of the day you'd marry him. Barbara, Toby's just the right man for you."

"Maybe I'm the one to decide on that, daddy dear."

"Yes, but——"

"And, daddy, if I can't have the man I love, I'll never marry anybody."

HER father snapped: "Well you're not going to marry any gold-digging actor, I can promise you that!"

"What—what's going to stop me?" she demanded, with soft defiance.

"I'll stop you! I'll stop you! I won't have it! I—I'll buy him off." He sputtered a bit. "Just—just you wait till I offer him $10,000 and see what——"

"Ten thousand!" Barbara's tone grew satirical. "You certainly hold your daughter cheap enough, don't you, daddy? Why not—well say at least $50,000?"

"I'll pay that, if it's necessary to keep that—that——"

"Gold-digger," Barbara supplied.

"That gold-digger away from you!" James B. wound up. "And you keep away from him, too. D'y' understand?"

"Yes, daddy dear," she returned.

"A-a-a-h!" James B. said, or something like "A-a-a-h!" He flopped down in his chair and rustled some papers. Barbara kissed his forehead, smiled and went out. She smiled because she knew that when her father said "A-a-a-h!" like that, he had relinquished all hope of gaining her obedience by command or argument. As she left, her father was reaching for the telephone and Barbara surmised that the operator was about to receive an order to get Searl King on the wire at the theatre and "be quick about it."

"I'm afraid I'm a very undutiful daughter," she sighed a few hours later to Toby Thorne. "Poor daddy, he can't do a thing with me."

"Now what?"

"He told me to keep away from Searl King. And I said, 'Yes, daddy dear.' But he wouldn't believe I meant yes. He said 'A-a-a-h!' Just like that: 'A-a-a-h!'"

"When you look like that, I could kiss you right here in public," Toby declared earnestly. "No wonder I love you to—to——"

"Distraction is the word," Barbara offered. Smiling softly, she reached out and squeezed his fingers over the dinner table. "You're a darling, Toby, and you've given me an idea."

She began to talk rapidly. * * *

THE next evening Barbara attended another performance of "Captain Penny" and after the final curtain again joined Searl backstage.

"Hello there," he called, in his usual manner of greeting.

"Did you have a nice visit with father?" she asked.

He blinked, and his shoulders jerked a couple of times.

"Some people might call it nice. But I——"

"I know," she interrupted. "Just what happened. The great big industrial bear said 'Woof! woof! and then he ate the poor little boy actor all up."

"Well, he conceded, "pretty near."

"How much did he offer you forum, breaking our hearts?"

"He got up to $25,000 before he said that was his absolute limit. I almost accepted it for fear he would—well, eat me all up, as you say." He grinned.

"Daddy's really a darling," Barbara declared.

Searl's face drew into sober lines.

"Since he's your father, I have to agree with you."

She caught her breath sharply and pressed his hand, with an expression of serious understanding.

"That was an awfully pretty speech, Searl," she declared. There was a moment of silence.

"We're going to a night club," Barbara announced after a little time, and soon they were off to a bright rendezvous, just off Broadway.

"Paula's coming home tomorrow," Searl announced, by way of making conversation.

"Oh!" the girl exclaimed. "Then I suppose little Barbara will have some competition!"

They both laughed, as though she had cracked the merriest of jokes.

The night club, as usual, was well filled with late diners and dancers, and its famous orchestra was at its best. An enlivened gayety sparkled in Barbara's eyes, as if she were on the verge of some new and exciting adventure. Admiring glances followed and their owners indulgently smiled. One had to admit that she appeared very much in love with her escort.

Such a supposition certainly appeared more than justified when an accident, a half hour or so after their arrival, threw the cafe into a buzz of whispers. Barbara and Searl had been dancing almost continuously. She had kept her gaze roving over the guests, nodding to acquaintances, smiling at friends. Suddenly she tightened her grasp on Searl's arm and whispered:

"Hold me tighter, Searl. That's it! Now—kiss me!"

Searl, in need of no urging, obeyed, and a score or more of men blinked enviously. Then Barbara became aware that a tall, gray-haired man, who had been sitting at a table just behind her, had come suddenly to his feet. He strode out on the dance floor, followed by a younger chap, who was recognized by knowing habitues as a famous polo player.

"Oh, hello, daddy!" Barbara cried, drawing a little away from her partner.

The eyebrows of James B. Mandell bristled, but his great bear's voice was restrained. It growled with anger, but pride forbade the creation of a scene.

Barbara appeared to swallow something.

"Yes, daddy," she responded meekly.

"It's a good thing Toby persuaded me to come here tonight," rumbled James B. "Making a public exhibition—how long has this been going on?"

"Long enough," declared Toby, his growl almost matching the big bear's.

Barbara turned to say good night to Searl, but her father gripped her arm and steered her toward the entrance. He got her into his big town car and they rode home in silence. James B. gave a convincing performance as the harassed and exasperated parent of flaming youth. He scowled, pulled at his white mustache and made noises in his throat.

"I thought I told you to keep away from that fellow," he began heavily when he had her cornered in the big library at home.

With hands folded, she looked up at him, a picture of innocence.

"Yes, daddy!"

James B. jerked. He knew too much to feel comfortable when Barbara looked innocent and said, "Yes, daddy."

"Can't you say anything," he demanded, "but 'yes, daddy'?"

She batted her eyes and shook her head.

"A-a-a-h!" cried James Bruin Mandell.

HE DID not storm nearly so much as Barbara had expected he would, but in measured tones he went about weighing the desirability of Toby Thorne against the undesirability of "that gold-digging actor."

"Can't you understand, Barbara," he asked at length, "that it's your own good I'm thinking about?"

"But, daddy," she returned, pouting "you don't know anything about being in love."

"Love!" he exploded. "You'll find out how much love there is when—when I dangle a check for fifty thousand under his nose!"

James B. had a hard time of it doing any work the next day. He had a hunch that Barbara would be up to something before the day was through, and he wondered why he hadn't locked her in her room or sent her off on a trip to Europe or something.

And, it developed, there was occasion for his restless. About noon Barbara called him on the telephone.

"Hello, daddy dear! I just called up to let you know Searl and are are going to be married this afternoon!"

"Barbara! Now look here——"

"Don't argue, daddy. When we meet again, darling, I'll be married to—the man I love!"

Before James B. could cease his sputtering the connection was broken. He fumed and got up to pace the flor. Then, with a grim tautness and the air of a man being in a great hurry, he sat down again and reached for the telephone. A minute or two later he was on his way to the theatre where Searl was playing.

Just before dinnertime James B. sat in the library reading. His mind was at peace, for at last he had compelled the actor to listen to reason, and his daughter was safe from King's fortune-hunting machinations. Such a frame of mind embraced him when the door popped open and his daughter came swinging in.

"Daddy dear," she began, "I have come for your blessing. I'm married."

If there ever was a time when James B. did not look or act like a bear, now was the time. He merely blinked at the radiant face of his girl, gasping:

"You're—married?"

"Yes. We drove down to city hall and the mayor tied the knot. Aren't you thrilled?"

But a grizzly bear is not easily metamorphosed into a lamb. James "Bruin" got on his feet, stern, forbidding, and made appropriate gestures.

"You mean to admit you—you've doubled-crossed me—your father?"

"I don't know what you mean, daddy," Barbara answered. "I only know I've gone and married the man I love."

"Very melodramatic," growled the old man, shocked into a rare display of sarcism. "And did your beloved actor tell you, perhaps, that he promised to give you up when he accepted my check for $50,000?"

"Oh, you mean Searl King. Did he accept your check?" she asked brightly. "I sort of had a hunch he would, daddy dear. But I didn't know. You see—you see, I haven't seen Searl since 11 this morning."

"You—you—you—what——"

"No, I haven't seen him."

"But you said—said you and he were going to be——"

She laughed, a merry, tinkling sound.

"That's right, I did, didn't I? But I didn't say we were going to be married to each other, did I? By now Searl ought to be well started on his honeymoon trip to Bermuda. He was married at high noon to Paula Cissna, the movie actress."

Here was presented a tangled knot that was more than James B.'s dazed brain could unravel.

"Barbara, you said—said——"

"What I said was that I was going to marry the man I love, daddy dear." She raised her voice a little. "Come on in, Toby!"

Toby Thorne entered the room, grinning sheepishly. It was a full minute before James B. was able to believe that his new son-in-law was Toby. He dropped weakly into his chair, speechless.

Barbara's levity suddenly dropped away.

"It was a mean thing to do, daddy," she admitted softly, "and I hope you'll forgive me."

"Eh?" said James B.

"Daddy, you're an old darling, and I do love you—such an awful lot. But—but—well, what I did wasn't nearly as mean as what you did to Searl's father."

FOR a moment it seemed as though the bear would rear on his haunches again and growl, but he didn't.

"Really, it was unfair, daddy," Barbara resumed earnestly, "to take advantage of old Jim King when his wife was sick and he needed money so terribly. That invention of his was worth—well, at least a hundred times the $500 you paid for it. You looked at it as a good piece of business—profit for the stockholders and all that—but it really was—well, shameful. And I—I made up my mind Searl should have part of what his father ought to have had—so he can get his musical education, and—and——"

She choked a little and couldn't go on. Toby stepped up and put his arm about her. She smiled tremulously up at him. Then, speaking again to her father, she went on:

"We planned to make you think I was crazy about Searl. Toby was in on the plot, of course. That's why he had you go with him to the night club the night I—kissed Searl."

"That," said Toby, "was the hardest part of my job."

"And daddy," Barbara said, "you will forgive me, won't you, you dear old bear?"

"And that was the only reason you were interested in young King?"

"The gold-digging actor? Of course! Oh, I like Searl immensely and hope he'll always be one of my best friends, but——"

"Why in the world, Barbara, didn't you come to me and tell me you thought he was entitled to fifty——"

"Would you have paid it, daddy," she inquired archly, "if I had?"

"Um." He considered the question. "Um. Probably not."

"That," Barbara retorted, "is what I thought."

James B. rubbed his jaw again.

"I think," he said irrelevantly, "there must be a little bit of the old bear in the daughter, too."

He chuckled, deep in his throat, when he saw that his daughter was kissing his approved and certified son-in-law.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Several drinking fountains, secured through the efforts of the women of Norwich, arrived in the city fifty years ago this week. The same week thieves broke into a saloon conducted by Antonio Levaggi and stole cash and cigars to the amount of $25. The week, as a whole was a quiet one in this city. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of April, 1880, are as follows:

Monday, April 19, 1880—Mr. C. W. Gale, the genial city clerk, discovered yesterday, that thieves had entered his barn and carried off his best harness. These harness thieves seem to be good judges of leather and always take the best outfit.

The Rev. Hugh Montgomery divides his services the coming year between Greeneville and Montville. Sunday morning he began his service with the Montville Methodists, preaching at Greeneville in the afternoon.

The farmers are complaining because the price of produce does not go up. Spring pigs are said to be scarce and will probably command $5 apiece. Hay is selling at $12 per ton in the barn and calves go off at five cents per pound. Everything can't boom like butter.

This week the new statute reducing the per diem of prisoners in the jails of the state from one dollar to fifty cents goes into effect and fines will mean just twice what they did to prisoners who work them out. The board of prisoners paid by the state is increased from $2.25 to $2.50 a week.

Tuesday, April 20, 1880—Mr. Chester Barnes, the popular Preston grocer, made a flying visit to the trout brooks on Saturday and in four brief hours succeeded in catching a dozen excellent fish. The largest weighed 24 ounces. One weighed 20 ounces and but few came down to four ounces apiece.

The net receipts of the Otis library entertainment at Steiner's hall, Friday evening, for the benefit of the book fund, were $25. They were increased $10 by a donation from Dr. T. D. Colt toward the expenses.

The steam tug Burnside made her first appearance this spring, in our harbor, yesterday. She has been out of service, undergoing a thorough overhauling for several months and looks like a new boat. She works like a charm.

Wednesday, April 21, 1880—The tide of immigration still continues strong from Canada to the mill villages of the New England states. Forty French people arrived in this city yesterday, from Canada and were taken by "bus" to Bozrahville where they will find immediate employment in the mills.

The street commissioner has just laid three splendid crosswalks at the juncture of Ann, Maple and Main streets, at the West Side. The improvement was much needed and will be duly appreciated by pedestrians in that section of the city.

Mr. John T. Baker, for several years an efficient clerk in the drug store of J. M. Brewer of this city, goes to Southington to enter the same line of business.

Thursday, April 22, 1880—Complaints are being received by the health committee, regarding the unclean condition of High street, Greeneville, between 10th and 11th streets. The sink drains of several establishments are turned into the public gutter, which seems to constitute a surface sewer for the neighborhood. The nuisance will be stopped.

The premium setter dogs owned in this city by the Messrs. William A. Buckingham, John B. Goodwin and Fred L. Osgood are entered for exhibition in the Westminster club show next week. This promises to be one of the most interesting exhibitions of canines ever held in this country. There are 1,500 entries, many of which are rare animals, some being valued as high as $10,000 and $15,000 apiece.

About 50 Frenchmen left this city yesterday via the New London Northern road, en route for Fishers Island, where they are to be employed in a brickyard.

Friday, April 23, 1880—The drinking fountains for which the ladies of the city have labored so assiduously for nearly a year, have arrived. They are pretty iron posts about four feet high, with two small basins at the side, near the base, for the convenience of small animals, a large basin in front for the accommodation of horses and a small basin with dippers in the rear, to allay the thirst of pedestrians.

The saloon of Antonio Levaggi at the corner of Main and Union streets was entered on Monday night by burglars through a rear window. They explored the premises and took between three and four dollars in cash and cigars enough to make a total of about $25. Suspicion falls on well known thieves hanging around the neighborhood.

The Mount Calvary Baptist society gave an Old Folks concert and exhibition in Temperance hall, last evening, for the benefit of their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Wynne. There was a large attendance and a general good time was enjoyed.

Saturday, April 24, 1880—Monday evening the entertainment at Breed hall is to be given by Madame Rentz' minstrels, combined with the Opera Burlesque Stars.

The Rev. S. H. Giesy, D.D., rector of Christ church, was summoned west by telegraph Thursday evening to attend the funeral of his eldest brother, near Columbus, Ohio, and consequently will not officiate at Christ church, on Sunday.

Miss Carrie E. Andrews was surprised by a visit from a party of her schoolmates on Thursday evening, the occasion being the 15th anniversary of her birth. They received a cordial welcome and were handsomely entertained.

SIX MEN TAKEN IN RAID AT BIG STILL GET BONDS OF $10,000 AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 25—The Bulletin's telegraphic account Friday morning of the raid on the big still caused a real sensation here all day.

The still, seized last night off Bayonet street, Waterford, by a raiding force of state police officers in charge of Sergeant George Webber, is the most elaborate that the authorities ever found in New London or vicinity. It is estimated that the still and mammoth equipment represents an outlay of between $40,000 and $50,000. An idea of the magnitude of the still and accessories can be gained from the fact that the boiler used is sufficiently large to heat a small hotel, while five huge vats have a capacity of 500 gallons each. The still itself is of 3,000-gallon capacity and this amount of alcohol, it was planned to distill daily. The entire plant is the finest and most complete that the raiders ever encountered. Just who is the rightful owner of the plant is what the officers are now endeavoring to ascertain.

Lucio Ribaudo, Pedro Rocoro, Felix Niedzewski, Peter Piscatelli, Peter Vona and Sebastini Ribaudo, who were found in the converted distillery, it is believed, were employes and not owners. The men spent the greater part of the night at police headquarters, for they did not obtain a surety on their respective bonds of $10,000 until the early hours of this morning. The men will be given a hearing in the Waterford town court Monday next.

The still and its equipment, it is understood, had been in operation but a few weeks. It is claimed that the product of the distillery was sold to bootleggers and liquor sellers in New London county and vicinity, the alcohol, which tested 160 proof was sold for $7 per gallon and found ready customers.

The building, which was formerly a barn, stands off the main highway and had recently received alterations that made it a substantial structure. The owners employed every conceivable plan to cover up the use to which the building was maintained. Two horses were sheltered in the building, while quantities of hay were stacked against windows so as to give the building the appearance of being a barn.

A pipe line was installed, which led from the building to a pond about a quarter of a mile distant and through this pipe water used in the distillery was obtained. It is understood that a youth in passing over the ground where the building is located several days ago observed a section of the pipe because decayed hay and grass had been removed from it by weather conditions. The youth followed the pipe line through curiosity and found that it led from the building to the pond. The youth reported his find to elder persons, who became suspicious that the barn was being used for illegal purposes and reported that fact at the state police barracks. Several secret investigations were conducted by officers and when it was evident that the building housed a big distilling plant a search warrant was obtained. Last night Sergeant Webber and his force arrived at the building and it was surrounded. Sergeant Webber and Officer William E. MacKenzie entered and there found the six men busy with their respective duties in the manufacture of the alcohol.

When Sirici was ordered off the premises by the officer detailed to duty there, Sirici became argumentative and surly and was arrested. During his brief stay under lock and key at police headquarters several men appeared there in his interest and desired to qualify on Sirici's bond.

Daniel Donovan, 588 Main street, made complaint because of the mischievous acts of youths practically every night between 6:30 and 9:30. Donovan said that the boys were noisy and destructive and not only annoyed him, but also annoyed tenants of buildings which he owns.

FRANK S. REDDEN APPEARS TO BE LONGING FOR TROUBLE

Frank S. Redden, 361 Bank street, evidently likes the idea of being arrested. He was taken into custody last night, which made the second time in less than a week that Redden has been arrested. Last night Redden went to police headquarters and was noticeably under the influence of liquor. He was abusive and demanded that he be locked up for the night, a request which he undoubtedly made because of smarting from his previous apprehension. Desk Sergeant James Gaffney, who was on duty, was not inclined to grant the request of Redden and endeavored to induce him to go home. Redden, however, was insistent upon being arested, also was abusive. When Redden's conduct became annoying he was accommodated and was provided with a wooden mattress on which to slumber the remainder of the night. Before being locked up a bottle of liquor was taken from Redden. In the police court this morning Redden's case was continued until tomorrow.

FRESH YOUNG MEN IN NEED OF DISCIPLINE

Carl Albano, married, and Merton Gilbert and Lionel Craddock, all youths, were charged with breach of the peace upon complaint of Mrs. J. F. Marshall, 24 Hamilton avenue, Groton. Their cases were continued until tomorrow and the youths provided a surety on their respective bonds. The young men were on Bank street about 1 o'clock this morning and accosted Mrs. Marshall. It is claimed that the youths forced their attentions upon the woman, even to making improper proposals to her. Mrs. Marshall made complaint to the police and the three offenders were arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey.

Driver's Case Goes Over

Bernard Burke, 34 Starr street, was charged with reckless driving, the car which the accused was driving hitting two women yesterday. The case was continued until tomorrow. Burke was driving on Huntington street at a time when Mrs. John J. O'Meara, 51 Franklin street, and Miss Catherine Moran, Division street, both aged women, were crossing from Huntington to Broad street. The women apparently became confused at the approach of the auto for instead of continuing in the direction they were proceeding they stepped backward several feet and were run down by the autoist. The women sustained bruises and contusions.

Brakes Defective

Loren Davis, Waterford, charged with violation of the state motor vehicle law in driving with defective brakes, was fined $10 and costs.

William T. Elliott, Station 13, Waterford, was charged with the same offense. Elliott, a youth, did not present himself in court for instead of going to police headquarters he was of the impression that his hearing would be at the court house and went there. When Elliott discovered his error, he went to the police court room, but as court had adjourned, he was instructed to be in court tomorrow.

But one case of intoxication was tried. The offender, who was arrested on North Bank street last night, was fined $10 and costs.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Ducklings Get a Great Scare

No stranger trust; you'll likely rue,
Your friendly action if you do.
—Old Mother Nature.

Grandfather Frog sat on his big green lily-pad in the Smiling Pool. His big goggly eyes seemed to be half closed. Not even when a foolish green fly came past did those eyes open. Grandfather Frog looked as if he were taking a sun nap. Not far away Mrs. Quack and all the baby Quacks were very busy getting something to eat. Grandfather Frog could get glimpses of them now and then when they would come out from behind little tussocks of grass or bullrushes, but when he couldn't see them he could hear them. He didn't seem to be in the least interested in them, but in reality he was.

By and by Mrs. Quack led all the baby Quacks—nine of them—out into the open water of the Smiling Pool. Such a good time as they had then! They ducked their heads under water and flapped their tiny wings just as they had seen their mother flap her big wings, and swam round and round, having a lovely time. Meanwhile, Mrs. Quack, after looking in all directions to see that none of the Hawk family was in sight, nor Billy Mink, nor Reddy Fox, nor Snapper the Snapping Turtle, swam over to get some corn where Farmer Brown's Boy had thrown it in the Smiling Pool. It was her usual feeding place and it was near where Grandfather Frog was sitting.

Grandfather Frog sat still and said nothing

Now, Mrs. Quack was very hungry. Despite her watchfulness she failed to notice Grandfather Frog. Perhaps that was because he didn't move and his coat was so much the color of the green things around. Had she noticed it she would have warned the babies to keep away from there. But she didn't notice and presently she was very busy tipping up and standing on her head in the water, while she picked up that delicious yellow corn on the bottom. Each time when she righted herself she took a hasty look at the babies to make quite sure that they were safe. Then down she would go again.

Now, right there the water was too deep for the babies to tip up and reach the bottom. Besides, they were not hungry now anyway. So they just played around. By and by one of them by chance discovered Grandfather Frog. Grandfather Frog had moved ever so little. Right away the babies gathered around at a safe distance, to stare at this curious old fellow. They had already seen some little Frogs but never had they seen one as big as Grandfather Frog, and they didn't know what to make of it.

Grandfather Frog sat still and said nothing. He didn't even blink an eye. But, inside, Grandfather Frog was feeling very good. He had made up his mind he was going to have one of those ducklings. They were a trifle big, to be sure, but Grandfather Frog never hesitates because of size. More than once he has swallowed a fish so big that the tail would remain sticking out of his mouth for some time. So Grandfather Frog had no intention of allowing size to interfere with his appetite, so long as there was any chance at all of swallowing what he caught.

Little by little the baby Quacks now drifted in nearer and nearer to where Grandfather Frog sat. All the time they were staring at him and wondering who he was and what he was. They couldn't understand him at all. They were not afraid, because there was nothing to give them fear. They hadn't been warned against Grandfather Frog. So they just drifted nearer and nearer and Grandfather Frog grew more and more excited. But he didn't show that excitement. Meanwhile, he kept a watchful eye on Mother Quack. At last he saw her start to swim over to see what the babies were looking at. He knew then that he must act quickly. He did. He made a lunge at the nearest baby and just barely missed it. But such a fright as all those babies had when Grandfather Frog so abruptly came to life! How they paddled for Mother! And how Mother swam to meet them! As for Grandfather Frog he dived down to the bottom of the pond and disappeared in the mud.

BIDDING UP OF STOCK PRICES MET WITH SPECULATIVE NERVOUSNESS

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)— The stock market was again flighty today. Professional operators for the rise appeared to be gaining control of the price movement by bidding up several fast movers for a time, but failed to overcome widespread speculative nervousness, and the market repeated yesterday's performance of selling off rapidly in the last hour.

The day's backing and filling of prices left the price level practically unchanged, the index of 90 leading shares showing a loss of 1-5 of a point. Trading diminished considerably, the day's sales of 4,725,940 shares showing a reduction of about 500,000 from yesterday.

The motor accessory stocks broke sharply in response to reduction of the Stewart-Warner annual dividend from $3.50 and 3 per cent in stock to $1. This development unsettled the market generally, and such additional business news as appeared was not particularly encouraging.

Credit conditions remained stationary, with call money repeating the process of renewing at 4 per cent and later slipping to 3 1-2, with funds freely offered in the outside market at 3.

Several of the leading utilities were well bought. The price index of 20 leading issues from this group was elevated about 2 1-2 points to a new high for the year. Consolidated Gas was in demand, reflecting disclosure that United Corporation had accumulated a large block at an average price of 121. The stock reached a new 1930 peak at 136 5-8, up about four points. Eastman Kodak was an isolated strong spot, rising 9 points to a new 1930 peak. Standard of New York was a firm feature of the oils, mounting 2 points to 40, the best level of the year. A. M. Byers sold up five points to a new high, and American Tobacco and American Can made substantial gains.

Stewart Warner tumbled 12 points on the cutting of the dividend, getting within a fraction of last autumn's minimum of 30. Auburn Auto broke 13 points, then regained half its loss. Air Reduction, American Bosch, Bohn Aluminum, Borg Warner, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Electric Auto Lite, United Aircraft and Motor Products sold off from 3 to 7 points.

Commodities were heavy. Wheat futures broke to new lows for the movement, closing about 1 3-4 cents lower, reflecting bearish weather and declines at Liverpool. Corn lost nearly a cent, and cotton closed $1 to $1.30 a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges were dull and fairly steady, although sterling cables sagged 3-32 to $4.86 11-32.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)—Firmness of the investment rails and of United States government securities gave a brighter tone to the bond market today. Numerous high grade carrier liens moved up half to three quarters of a point, representing the best move of the week in these pivotal issues.

Most of the improvement appeared in the late trading and closing prices were generally the highest of the day. Total sales the smallest for a five-hour session so far this year, dipped below $9,000,000, principal amount, but the decrease was accounted for by the small volume in American Telephone convertible 4 1-2s, which showed unusual dullness on a downward revision of prices that resulted in a 2 point net loss.

The firmer rails included Santa Fe general 4s and New York Central 5s, up 3-4 each; New Haven debenture 4s, of 1957, up a point to a new 1930 high; Baltimore and Ohio refunding 5s and Long Island 4s, also up a point; and Rock Island refunding 4s, Erie 5s, Missouri Pacific "F" 5s, Nickel Plate "A" 5 1-2s, and Pennsylvania 4 3-4s.

Amusement company bonds were mixed. General Theatres 6s sagged more than a point. Pathe 7s, with warrants ran up to a new high above 77 and although they failed to hold that figure the close was 1 1-2 net higher.

With the exception of the oil group, industrials tended to ease.

The American Telephone debenture 5s, were firm, the 1960 issue rising half a point.

Foreign government and corporation bonds showed moderate irregularity. Gains in the Liberties and treasuries ranged from one to five thirty seconds of a point on small turnovers.

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 20 to 36 points lower. Spot quiet; middling 16.30.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP)— Frequent shifts of speculative sentiment in today's curb market reflected the nervousness of professional traders over the future trend of prices. Major speculative activity was again on the outside although final quotations disclosed a rather long list of net declines, with a few issues in new low ground. Trading showed a moderate falling off in volume, the day's sales falling below 1,400,000 shares.

American Superpower assumed the leadership of the utility group by moving up 3 1-2 points to a new high at 37 3-4 on a fairly heavy turnover. Niagara Hudson Power crossed 24 to a new high but lost most of its gain. Electric Bond and Share closed unchanged at 114 1-4 after fluctuating within a range of less than 2 points. Nevada California Electric jumped 25 points to a new top at 130 on a few sales. Associated Gas and Electric (new) was one of the few soft spots in that group.

Columbia Pictures issues moved into new high ground on optimistic earnings estimates. American Hard Rubber, Bohack, Cooper Bessemer, Driver Harris, General Fireproofing, Pacific Coast Biscuit and Triplex Safety Glass were some of the specials to better their previous 1930 high prices. Singer Manufacturing, which recorded a spectacular gain yesterday, ran up 15 points more to a new high at 350.

Oils displayed a firm under tone, Standard Oil of Kentucky, Gulf of Pennsylvania and Houston (new) attaining new high prices. Little interest was shown in the investment trust and holding company shares, the changes in which were largely nominal.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 25.—(AP)—Rains in drought districts which previously had been skipped brought on heavy selling today that swept wheat down to new low prices for the season. At no time was there any evidence that the market was receiving much buying support from government sponsored agents. Export demand for North American wheat was also disappointing, and an official forecast of the 1930 wheat crop of India put the total at 50,000,000 bushels in excess of last year.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 1 3-8a1 3-4c bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-2 to 1c down, oats 3-8 to 3-4c off, and provisions showing 5c to 12c decline.

Provisions reflected the downturns of grain prices, although hog values were tending upwards.

UNION

The predicted cold wave arrived promptly April 23. After sunrise the mercury stood at 22 degrees and at 8:30 a. m. had risen only to 26 degrees.

At the church at Union Center Easter Sunday was observed with a very interesting and enjoyable service, in which the children and young people furnished the major part of the program. The church was brightened by plants and flowers, furnished in a community spirit by friends from different sections of the town. After the organ voluntary, a duet "The Old Rugged Cross," was sung by two young ladies. Responsive reading and the Lord's prayer followed. The pupils of the Rock Meadow school and Red school, assisted by two pupils from the North Ashford school, presented a very enjoyable program of choruses, songs and recitations. A beautiful hymn, "Fair Lilies," was sung by two girls from Red school. Rev. H. M. Lawson helped also by singing the hymn "I Have a Friend." The closing chorus by the children was "Faith of Our Fathers." The pastor, Rev. William Bragg, expressed thanks and appreciation for the efforts of children and friends in making the service so enjoyable. There was an attendance of seventy-five.

Several friends from other towns were here to spend Good Friday and the week end. Others were in town only on Sunday, including Miss Esther Moore, of Springfield, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leffingwell, Misses Evelyn and Muriel and Robert Leffingwell, Orcuttville; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gaudette and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Royce and daughter Harriet Louise, Wales, Mass.; Mrs. Wallace Goodhall and four children, and Mrs. Thomas Smith, North Ashford, also a group from Hopkinton and Brookfield, Mass. Misses Gertrude Ladd from New York, Ruth Lee from Asbury Park, N. J., and Flora House from Hartford have been spending their Easter vacations at their Hanover homes.

Many relatives and friends were welcome guests in the homes of Hanover over Easter Sunday, a number attending the services held at the churches. They enjoyed the special music and appreciated the unusually attractive floral decorations which come year after year from the Park greenhouses.

A humorous play was highly appreciated by a large audience in the parish house, Tuesday evening. "The Deacon Slips," given by an all-Hanover cast and directed by Mrs. Webster Standish.

The following persons impersonated the nine characters represented in the play: Raymond Allen, George Costos, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Doyle, Theodore Kussian, Florence Lucy, John Scott, Dwight C. Stone, and Dorothy Thornes. Vocal numbers were rendered between the acts by Mrs. John Robish and Mrs. Frank L. Smith, and before the play Miss Florence Buck of Stonington gave several piano selections.

Mrs. Webster Standish has recently had work done on her place. This bids fair to add greatly to the attractiveness of the village in a few years by the setting of upwards of three thousand evergreen trees on the vacant lot betwen her residence and that of Charles Kussian.

Mrs. George Allen, of Palmertown, has received word from her husband, George Allen, who is undergoing treatment at the Naval hospital, Newport, R. I. since April 8. He is reported as doing well.

REPORTS 575 FOREST FIRES IN CONNECTICUT THIS SPRING

NEW HAVEN, April 25.—(AP)—Robert M. Ross, forester of the Connecticut Forest and Park association, today had figured it out that there had been 575 fires in Connecticut this spring, which spread over an excess of 10,000 acres of land. He said that most of these fires were due to carelessness of men, women and children in handling fires in adjoining woodlands.

CANTERBURY

The school room was made especially attractive by the display of posters, woodwork, and other kinds of handwork of the pupils. This being the closing day of school for the Easter recess, each child present received an Easter egg.

Armed with search and seizure warrants, Inspector James A. Taylor and a rading squad swept into the famous old Philadelphia Cricket club.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Norwich Expected to be Airminded

Announcement was made today by J. B. McKinney the advance agent for Reliable Flying Service of Watertown, Conn., that Lieut. Charles F. Arnold would arrive Monday with his large fine passenger plane. A new standard type powered with the famous Wright whirlwind, the same type motor that carried "Lindy" across to Paris and Byrd over the north and south pole. After circling the city several times he will go straight to Beebe farm at Gallows Hill where he will remain for the next seven days' following. Mr. Arnold is the star pilot for this company and he has been flying for twelve years. He has to his credit now over four thousand flying hours. Mr. Arnold is well-known throughout New England states and is classed with the very best pilots; he is a government transport pilot. He arrived about three weeks ago from the southern states where he visited all the leading airport in the south. Mr. Arnold is quite a stunt flyer and in many of his exciting flights the southern people choose to give him the name of "Up-Side-Down-Arnold."

Breed Theatre

There is nothing the movie-going public tires of so readily as seeing its favorite stars in the same type of roles. Consequently producing organizations whose every move is circumvented by public taste and demand, keep a wary eye on the scenarios presented for the use of their leading players with the avowed purpose of making sure that each one is different from the last.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gives every indication of having followed this golden rule in its selection of "Their Own Desire" as a vehicle for Norma Shearer's new all-talking picture which will open a four day program tomorrow night at the Breed theatre.

"Their Own Desire" was adapted to the screen by Frances Marion, from the novel by Sarita Fuller and was directed under the joint supervision of E. Mason Hopper and James Forbes, Forbes also writing the dialogue. The picture gives Miss Shearer an opportunity to give another new characterization to the screen for her role of "Lally" is a far cry from that of the chorus girl of "The Trial of Mary Dugan," or the sophisticated woman of "The Last of Mrs. Cheney."

The plot of "Their Own Desire" concerns itself with Lally (Miss Shearer), whose parents, (Lewis Stone and Belle Bennett), are on the verge of matrimonial rupture. When Lally unexpectedly encounters her father in the arms of an acquaintance, Beth (Helene Millard), she rushes her mother off to a summer resort while the father makes preparations for a divorce. While at the resort, Lally meets and falls in love with Jack (Robert Montgomery), and promises to marry him only to discover that he is the son of Beth. How the resulting complications are ironed out make up Miss Shearer's dramatic vehicle.

NINTH RED ARROW AUCTION CROWDS THEATRE

The ninth Red Arrow auction of the Red Arrow club, composed of 15 Norwich merchants, was held Friday evening at the Palace theatre, which was crowded to capacity with an enthusiastic audience. Before the opening of the auction, Max Hanover, treasurer of the Red Arrow club, welcomed the audience in behalf of the Red Arrow merchants of Norwich and thanked them for the interest and enthusiasm they manifested in the Red Arrow game. He also thanked the audience for the very valuable patronage which the Red Arrow merchants are enjoying as a result of the medium of the game.

A large number of articles of all kinds and varieties, valued at over $1,200, was auctioned off to the highest bidders by means of a new system of auctioning whereby each article was provided with a ticket on which was written the name of the first and second bidders. By this medium the auction was greatly expedited. Abe Silverberg and Bert Ferguson acted as auctioneers for the closed bids, and Anthony J. Bernard for the open auction. Charles L. Barker, advertising manager of the Reid & Hughes Co., was in charge of the stage arrangements, assisted by George E. Powers and Henry Bode, who directed the winners to the right table where the money was counted. As soon as the counters became too busy, the Red Arrow merchants had arranged three black-faced comedians, consisting of George R. Gifford, L. C. Perrin and Joseph Goodrow, who took up the intervening time by greatly amusing the audience. Their performance was received with generous applause. The entire audience had a grand time during the auction. The comedians appeared on the stage at four different periods and at each time received very enthusiastic greeting.

In his announcement at the beginning of the auction, Max Hanover assured the audience that there will be a number of auctions coming, each one more interesting than the others, and that a number of features will be put on for the benefit of the public. One of them is a harmonica contest for which a fine cup will be awarded, and three cash prizes for those participating. This, he said, will be held at the Palace theatre in addition to the show, without any extra charge, the audience to be the judges of the winners. Mr. Hanover also announced that the Red Arrow club felt that the national A. A. U. run to be held here under the auspices of the Duwell Athletic club on Memorial day was of sufficient importance to warrant the affiliation of the Red Arrow club with it, in order to lend additional glory to the event. Therefore, at a meeting held last Monday, it was unanimously voted to present to the Duwell Athletic club a valuable silver cup which the club may offer for a prize in the run. He also said that the Duwell club accepted the offer. An announcement was also made that in the near future a free show will be given to the children of Norwich by the Red Arrow club in collaboration with the Palace theatre, admission to be Red Arrow money.

The auction was of such great interest to the public that the entire theatre was practically filled until 11 o'clock when the last article was auctioned off.

WIDER, DEEPER CHANNEL FOR THAMES RIVER TO ALLYN'S POINT RECOMMENDED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 25.—The rivers and harbors committee report filed today recommends improvements in the Thames river, Connecticut, as follows, in accordance with recommendations by the chief of the board of army engineers:

"The board considers that a channel of larger dimensions will probably result in savings on the movement of coal sufficient to justify the expense of the improvement, and concurs with the division engineers as to the dimensions required. It therefore recommends modification of the existing project for Thomas river, Connecticut, so as to provide for a channel 25 feet deep and 250 feet wide to the upper end of Bartlett's crossover, and thence 200 feet wide to Allyns Point, at an estimated cost of $169,000, with $4,300 annually for maintenance."

The report adds:

"During the past five years there has been received by plants along the 20-foot channel an average of about 162,000 tons of coal annually. One of the companies produces electric power, one manufactures paper board, and a third operates a trans-shipment plant between water and rail. The prospective coal tonnage of the section of the river may be taken as 200,000. An increase in depth to 25 feet would enable the coal, which comes from Hampton Roads, to be shipped in steam colliers and deep draft barges at a saving of from 15 to 25 cents per ton. These savings should in great part be passed on to the consumer, as power rates fluctuate with the cost of coal, and the coal trans-shipped by rail is used by industries in the Quinebaug valley."

This portion of the bill is expected to pass congress without opposition. There had been a difference as to details as shown by the following item in the report, between the district and division engineers:

"The estimated cost of a channel 25 feet deep and 250 wide up to Allyns Point is $200,000, with $5,000 annually for maintenance. A channel of the same depth, 250 feet wide up to the north end of Bartletts crossover, and thence 200 feet wide to Allyns Point, is estimated at $169,000, with $4,300 annually for maintenance. The district engineer recommends the larger channel.

"The division engineer believes that a width of 200 feet between Bartletts crossover and Allyns Point will provide adequate facilities. He recommends a channel 25 feet deep and 250 feet wide up to the north end of Bartletts crossover, and thence 200 feet wide to Allyns Point, at an estimated cost of $169,000, with $4,300 annually for maintenance."

The chief of the board decided in favor of the larger project and the committee accepted his recommendation. Representative Freeman of New London is ranking member on the committee.

DIVORCE FOR DESERTION FOR LAST NINE YEARS

Married 35 years ago last Christmas day to Fred L. Potter, now of parts unknown, Mrs. Harriet C. Potter of this city secured a divorce from him Friday in the superior court at New London before Judge Allyn L. Brown. The case was on the short calendar list and was uncontested. The divorce was granted for desertion since March, 1921.

Two other uncontested divorces were granted by Judge Brown and decision was reserved on a fourth. Isabelle J. Plouffe of New London was given her freedom from Arthur J. Plouffe of New London on grounds of statutory offense. They were married June 18, 1919, and have been separated since 1926.

Sophia Gilmore of New London was given a decree from George Franklin Gilmore of Bridgeport on grounds of desertion. They were married Sept. 23, 1903, at Yankton, South Dakota.

Decision was reserved by Judge Brown in the suit brought by Ethel DuKlauer Furman of New York against A. Peter Furman of New London. The plaintiff alleged desertion. They were married June 2, 1918, at New York.

SCOUT TROOP ENTERTAINS AT BISHOP SCHOOL

Boy Scouts of Troop Seven gave an interesting demonstration and entertainment before parents and friends at Bishop school Friday evening. The Scouts first gave their oath and law and then followed games, first aid, knot tying, and campfire stunts. Scout William Smith as chauffeur assisted by Russell Culver, James Abruzzo, James Calkins, Howard Randall as flat tires put on an auto stunt which was warmly received. The Ghost stunt was quite original and had as actors Frank Amodeo, Frank Barron, and George Johns. In the surgical operation Scouts H. Bitkiewitz, M. Couhihan, A. Ferraco, William Galligan and James McNulty kept their audience of a hundred persons in an uproar. All the 30 boys in the troop participated in the show in some capacity and Scoutmaster Walter Weidman and Assistant Scoutmaster John Boldrighini were warmly praised for their good work with the Scouts.

NORWICH BROADCAST IN ITS SECOND NIGHT

SCHOOLMASTER: The company uses each year about 10,000 bales of cotton, 5,000 bags of wool, 50,000 pounds of down, 3,200 bales of shoddy, owns its own print works in which it prints twelve and a half million yards of cloth for its own use, and twelve and a half million yards for other concerns.

DOCTOR: Can you translate those figures into terms of comfortables? How many comfortables is that?

SCHOOLMASTER: One hundred twenty-five thousand dozen. A million and a half comfortables, doctor.

DOCTOR: Would you mind letting me have those figures, please? Thank you! Next January, when I am told there is only one comfortable for my bed, I'll hand these figures to my wife, and ask why.

SCHOOLMASTER: I've seen nights when I thought I could have used their entire output.

DOCTOR: As far as cotton is concerned, professor, and I'm speaking now of cotton cloth, Norwich had a cotton mill as early as 1790. Joshua Lathrop used to weave cotton goods over on Lowthorpe Meadows, with one carding-machine, five jennies, and six looms.

SCHOOLMASTER: Only a beginning, doctor. By rights, you should date back only to Slater.

DOCTOR: Well, of course we admit he was the father of the spinning industry in this country, but we try not to overlook the pre-Slaterites. We might call John Slater one of the new-school. He came into Norwich at a good time. He made the old Yantic and the Shetucket do big-time stuff.

SCHOOLMASTER: About what period was that, doctor?

DOCTOR: After the war of 1812. The embargo of 1807 was a crusher for Norwich. The war of 1812 was another. Commerce all but ceased. Ships lay rotting at their wharves. Men couldn't do much but look at each other and ask how long would it last. New England then turned to manufacturing with might and main. In three years' time, wheels were turning in four cotton mills, two woolen mills, and a nail factory, all here in the town.

SCHOOLMASTER: I've heard about the nail factory.

DOCTOR: Eighth wonder of the world, in its time. The nails were cut and headed at the same time. Used to make cut-nails by the thousands, and people thronged into town from all sides, to watch the machine at work. They'd stare, and gasp, and swallow hard, as if they didn't believe it, and watch it for hours, then walk away, wondering what was coming next.

SCHOOLMASTER: New England ingenuity, beginning to assert itself. The new machine age, creeping out of its shell, ready to walk. She's getting to be a big bird, doctor, this industry of ours!

DOCTOR: She was one of the birds hatched out in the old Liberty Tree.

SCHOOLMASTER: You know, of course, that Norwich had a Liberty Tree.

DOCTOR: Yes, indeed, with a booth under it, where the town assembled to hear the news. If I remember correctly, the booth, or tent, was called a pavilion. It was here they encouraged each other to resist the Stamp Act.

SCHOOLMASTER: And for another thing, doctor, the Stamp Act from which we are accustomed to date the Revolution, the Boston Tea Party, and that sort of thing, was actually passed ten years before the Battle of Lexington.

DOCTOR: More like eleven years, professor, passed and repealed. It's all down in history, but we persist in confusing ourselves. The act was passed in March, 1764, and Norwich took immediate steps to resist it. The governor of Connecticut, who was Thomas Fitch, meditated upon the measure for some considerable time before he decided to support it.

SCHOOLMASTER: A wise decision, being a governor!

DOCTOR: He assembled his council and prepared to take an oath in their presence, to support the act. Seven of the eleven members made a protest, without effect, and then walked out of the chamber, to avoid witnessing the offensive ceremony.

SCHOOLMASTER: It is difficult for us at this late date to realize how deep was the feeling of resentment throughout the colonies.

DOCTOR: A distance in time of 166 years is enough to dull the edge of any emotion. But two of the men who withdrew were men from old Norwich, Hezekiah and Jabez Huntington, a lawyer and merchant. The citizens of Norwich organized a watch to prevent any of the stamps from being admitted to the town.

SCHOOLMASTER: Bold enough, surely!

DOCTOR: As bold as Boston. They made a figure of Ingersoll, the stampmaster, and burned it. A popular way of expressing indignation in that day. Some of the stamps actually got into New London, on some ship-papers from the West Indies. And a great share of the men-folks of Norwich went down there.

SCHOOLMASTER: All of it had the desired effect, the act was repealed.

DOCTOR: They went even further, and that, I believe, was why the act was repealed. Major Durkee, of Bean Hill, got together a band of Liberty Men, gathered from Norwich and surrounding towns. They had but one object, to prevent any of the stamps from being distributed in Connecticut. Ingersoll, the stampmaster was then on the way to confer with the assembly. Major Durkee ordered his men to report with eight days' provisions, and the little band set out to intercept the stampmaster.

SCHOOLMASTER: Rather high-handed, wasn't it?

DOCTOR: We're so far distant, it looks different, that's all. Anyhow, it worked. The party overtook Ingersoll and gave him his choice of resigning or—

SCHOOLMASTER:—or what?

DOCTOR: The alternative is lost in the shuffle. Nor does it matter much. Ingersoll resigned, with the words: "The cause is not worth dying for!" Ten years later, at Lexington there were minute-men of better stuff. "Theirs was a cause decidedly worth dying for." We all know how they died, professor.

SCHOOLMASTER: We can't stay out here all night, doctor. How about dining?

DOCTOR: Possibly we might find something left in the inn.

SCHOOLMASTER: Well, let's get inside and have something, if it's no more than a sandwich and a cup of coffee.

DOCTOR: Reminiscencing is tough work, professor! I believe I am hungry, now that you've brought up the subject.

ANNOUNCER: The program just concluded, ladies and gentlemen, was sponsored by the Merchants' Bureau, chamber of commerce of Norwich, Connecticut, the Rose of New England. No trip through New England is complete without a visit to Norwich. Its historical background dates from the days of the Indians. Its natural scenery, as well as that of the surrounding country, more than repays one for a visit. Situated at the junction of the Yantic and the Shetucket rivers, with ledges of bare rock rising from the banks of residences and business blocks, built upon narrow strips of land between rivers and hills, you'll find here a quaint charm without equal in the country. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes said of Norwich: "A town of supreme, audacious Alpine loveliness."

The Merchants' Bureau, chamber of commerce, Norwich, Conn., hope you will be present next week at the same time with the Doctor and the Schoolmaster at this same time and now bid you "good-night."

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Orange-Pineapple and Black Walnut

MILD FLAVORS have a subtle charm—but the tang of orange and of pineapple thrills the taste. Just a bit sharp. The tongue and palate quickly respond to these two—either of them. But imagine them together—frozen in cream!

Enough and plenty in one package, but there are black walnuts, too. A first grade selection of nuts adds quite a different flavor-note to the taste of the fruits. An unusual combination.

SIX PERSONS KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHED INTO CROWD

About 20 Persons Were Injured—Had Been Watching a Stunt Flier At Fayetteville, Tenn.—Occupants of the Plane Were Not Hurt—Boy and Girl Were Killed At Portsmouth, N. H., When Plane Fell—Herbert J. Fahy, Noted Aviator, Died of Injuries Sustained When Plane Overturned.

FAYETTEVILLE, Tenn. April 27.—(AP)— Six persons in a large crowd watching an air circus today were killed and 20 others were injured, some probably fatally, as a stunting plane crashed into the onlookers.

The dead: Booney Beard, 14; Kelly Towry, 28; Lowry Smith, 28; Monroe Marbury, 37; Hurley Spray, 26, and Marvin Ashby, 30. Neither the pilot nor his companions was injured.

The plane, piloted by Milton Cobert of Columbia, Tenn., fell from a height of about ten feet. Cobert and two companions were nearing the landing field in the plane when, witnesses said, the ship dipped, crashing into the crowd standing on a railroad embankment.

Of those injure, doctors said Claude Copeland, 30, and J. M. Douthitt, 75, were expected to die.

Members of the American Legion post which sponsored the circus, rendered aid to the injured and removed the dead.

Captain A. Gombert of Akron, Ohio, in charge of the circus, said officials had warned the spectators not to stand on the embankment because all planes had to sweep close over it in landing.

Approximately 100 were said to have been on the embankment at the time of the crash.

All the dead were from nearby communities in Lincoln county.

THREE DEATHS RESULTED FROM PLANE ACCIDENT

ALVORD, Tex., April 27.—(AP)— An airplane crash during a storm five miles northwest of here cost the lives of James H. Kelly, 25, of endurance flight fame, and two companions last night. Kelly and G. W. Mennis, Sr., 50, an oil operator, both of Fort Worth, Texas, were killed almost instantly and C. F. Williams, 49, of Tonkawa, Okla., died in a Fort Worth hospital today.

G. C. Ross, Oklahoma City oil operator, the fourth occupant of the plane, was injured seriously. He suffered a broken right shoulder, and lacerations about the head.

Kelly and his three companions were en route from Oklahoma City to Fort Worth when the plan ran into the storm and crashed from a low altitude.

AIR PILOT AND YOUTHFUL FRIEND KILLED IN WISCONSIN

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 27.—(AP)—Pilot Albert Rode, 26, of Saukville, Wis., and his friend, Harry Wagner, 16, of Grafton, Wis., were killed today as Roden's airplane crashed near the Holterhoff airport here.

BOY AND GIRL BURNED TO DEATH IN PLANE CRASH

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 27.—(AP)—A boy and a girl were burned to death in an airplane crash beside the Portsmouth Country club this afternoon. The dead were Geneva Brackett, 14, of Suffield, Conn., and Bruce Hessler, 14, of Greenland. The pilot, Clyde Robinson, of Exeter, was badly burned.

The children earlier in the day had been given their first airplane ride by Robinson and had been eager to go again. Robinson was making for the Portsmouth airport from the Hessler farm in Greenland when the engine stalled. In attempting to land on a road, a wing caught on a tree and the plane burst into flames as it crashed.

Robinson was thrown clear and tried to pull the children out. He was seriously burned about the face, hands and chest in the vain attempt and was taken to a hospital at Exeter.

The flames from the plane started a brush fire which swept over six acres and threatened the country club house and cottages beside the grounds. Portsmouth firemen, aided by Boy Scouts, fought the blaze.

PLANE ACCIDENT FATAL TO HERBERT J. FAHY

GRAYLING, Mich., April 27.—(AP)—Herbert J. Fahy, noted aviator, died in a hospital here today of injuries suffered in an airplane accident near Roscommon, Mich., last Friday.

Fahy, who was 33 years old, did not regain consciousness after he was taken from an overturned airplane on the estate of Cliff Durant. His wife, Mrs. Claire Fahy, also a noted pilot, was with him in the plane at the time of the accident, but escaped injury because she was in a separate cabin. Mrs. Fahy is one of the ranking women pilots in the country having done most of her flying on the west coast.

AERIAL ACROBAT KILLED AT DUSSELDORF, GERMANY

DUSSELDORF, Germany, April 27—(AP)—Willy Hundertmark, aerial acrobat, attempting to change in midair from one airplane to another was killed today after struggling for life for 43 minutes over the heads of thousands of horrified spectators.

The acrobat, who was using a rope ladder to effect the change, standing on the lower plane, succeeded in grasping the rope ladder hanging from the upper one. But as the plane with the ladder swung clear of the lower one, Hundertmark was unable to grasp the next rung of the ladder.

The pilot of the airplane did not dare attempt a landing for fear of crushing the acrobat. To induce him to drop, the police stretched a canvas sheet, but then it became apparent that the acrobat's hand was entangled in the ladder.

After vainly trying to help Hundertmark by flying as low as possible, the pilot decided to take a chance on landing. He reduced his speed as low as he could, but the acrobat, dragged over a long stretch of the field, was picked up unconscious and died in a hospital soon after.

JUDGE PARKER DEFENDS HIS OWN NOMINATION

WASHINGTON, April 27.— (AP) — Facing determined opposition in the senate tomorrow to his nomination for membership of the supreme court, Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, today undertook his own defense.

The jurist, whom the senate judiciary committee refused to invite to testify in his own behalf, answered his critics in a letter to Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, in which he disclaimed any prejudice against the Negro race and asserted he was bound by previous supreme court decisions in the "yellow dog" case which brought opposition from organized labor. The letter was given out at Senator Overmans' office.

The senate tomorrow is to consider the judiciary committee's report which recommended, 10 to 6, against confirming President Hoover's nomination of Parker.

Of the Negro charges Parker wrote that he at no time advocated denying them the vote but that he argued against democratic charges that the republicans sought to organize the Negro vote.

"My answer to the charge of the labor people," wrote Parker, "is that I followed the law as laid down by the supreme court. This I think has been demonstrated in memoranda filed with the judiciary committee and I shall not elaborate upon it. It is, of course, the duty of the judges of the lower federal courts to follow the decisions of the supreme court. Any other course would result in chaos."

Mr. Hoover attended the morning service at the Friend's Meeting house and spent the rest of the day quietly at home.

"I was stopped by three men standing by a car with the lights out," Robinson said, "and then four others wearing masks rushed up and pushed guns into my ribs. Phone From London To Train In Canada

Mes[illegible] Were Exchanged [illegible] Train Speeding Be[illegible]en Toronto and Montreal.

LONDON, April 27.— (AP) —London tonight was on one end of yet another new development in communications methods, which during this century has piled marvel upon marvel, when telephone messages were exchanged between an ordinary desk phone here and a phone in a rapidly moving train on the Canadian National Railways lines between Toronto and Montreal.

Shortly after 8:30 p. m. (2:30 p. m. E. S. T.) C. J. Smith, European vice president of the Canadian National, picked up the telephone in his office to answer a call and in the twinkling of an eye was in communication with Sir Henry Thornton, president of the railway, speeding from Toronto to Montreal aboard the "International Limited."

A few minutes after the president and the vice president had exchanged greetings and chatted about the weather, two correspondents of the Associated Press on different sides of the ocean talked together.

TWO CONNECTICUT MEN SLAIN AT MUSKOGEE, OKLA.

NEW MILFORD, April 27.— (AP) — Much concern was felt here today over the killing in Muskogee, Okla., last night of Davis S. Smith, of Sharon and his brother, George, of West Cornwall by men who had entered their hotel room to rob them. John L. Wike, of Sharon, who was present, was bound and gagged, while P. G. Seeley, of Washington, who was in the bathroom, was not molested.

The chief of police here telephoned to Muskogee today to obtain additional information but the added facts were few. It was hoped that story of the affair would be telegraphed later when the inquiry had cleared up the seeming mystery.

The deaths of the Smith brothers calls attention once again to the institution which they represented. The New Milford Securities company was in difficulties last summer and on July 15 the stockholders voted to have it pass into receivership because its capital was impaired. On the following Monday, President Emmons died and while the death certificate gave a form of heart disease as the cause the finding was subject to much talk as meantime it had been found that there was a shortage in Emmon's accounts, later fixed at $119,000. The affairs of the institution were found to be greatly involved.

LINDBERGH OPENS AIR MAIL ROUTE WITH SOUTH AMERICA

Creates Seven Day Mail Schedule Between New York and Buenos Aires — Made Flight From Cuba to Cristobal, Canal Zone, 1,033 Miles, In 9 Hours and 58 Minutes—Two Hours Ahead of Schedule—Plans to Return to the U. S. the Latter Part of the Week.

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, April 27—(AP)—With characteristic swiftness Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today bloged a new air mail route across the Caribbean sea, linking New York and Buenos Aires in a seven day mail schedule.

Leaving Havana, Cuba, at 5:33 a. m. E. S. T., today, the Flying Colonel split the famous Lindbergh Caribbean circle route, striking the Central American mainland at Cape Gracias a Dios, Nicaragua, instead of at Yucatan, on his old route. He landed at France field here at 4:04 p. m. E. S. T., completing his flight of 1,033 miles from Cuba in nine hours and 58 minutes. He was not scheduled to arrive here until six p. m.

The plane brought 215 pounds of mail, destined for all parts of the southern Americas. Post office employes here were to work all night if necessary to prepare the mails for the southward journey, which will be resumed at dawn tomorrow. Lindbergh will not fly beyond this city, however, and plans to return to the United States the latter part of the week. L. R. "Dinty" Moore, who participated in the United States navy's attempt to fly the Atlantic in 1919, will pilot the southbound mail into Talara, Peru. From that point other planes will relay the mails to various South American republics. It is scheduled to arrive in Buenos Aires at 4:30 p. m., E. S. T., Friday.

Under perfect flying conditions, Colonel Lindbergh sailed easily over the long water jump of today's flight. He carried Basil Rowe as co-pilot and Bert Denicky as radio operator. Constant communications were maintained with the radio base of the Pan-American airways at Miami, Fla., and with other stations of the company in Central America.

A brilliant sun glittered over the Caribbean as Lindbergh swung the plane toward the Isle of Pines after leaving Cuba. A speed of approximately 115 miles per hour was maintained as the ship flew toward Central America. Radio mesages related that Lindbergh enjoyed the trip, several times relinquishing the controls to his co-pilot so that he might make observations and eat his lunch in flight.

One stop was made to refuel. This was at Porto Cabezas, Nicaragua, where the ship was landed at 11:37 a. m., E. S. T. The flight was resumed at 12:12 p. m. The weather continued brilliant as the plane cruised along the Central American coast into Panama.

A crowd of officials and civilians gathered at France field to welcome the flier on his third inaugural air mail trip into Latin America.

KILLED SON, WOUNDED FIVE OTHERS OF HIS FAMILY

NEW YORK, April 27.—(AP)—Seized by a homicidal mania, a Brooklyn longshoreman ran amuck in his home today, killing one of his sons and wounding five other members of his family with a revolver, hatchet and knife.

According to the story pieced together by detectives, Vincent Calise, 68, went to bed last night apparently feeling normal. But this morning he arose, seized the three weapons and attacked his family.

Using the revolver, he shot to death his son, Salvatore, 28, and seriously wounde his daughter, Rose, 10. Then he began to swing the hatchet, fracturing the skull of his son, Anthony, 29, and lacerating the scalp of another son, Samuel, 24. Then with the knife he slashed his wife, Rose, 50, and his daughter, Josephine, 16, inflicting severe scalp wounds.

The screams of the family brought a patrolman, who overpowered the longshoreman. He was charged with homicide.

LAGUARDIA ATTACKS LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

BOSTON, April 27—(AP)—The Hoover law enforcement commission was charged as being "almost childish" in its attitude toward prohibition in a speech here tonight by Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, a wet.

"The commission," the New Yorker said, "has failed to give any indication that their attitude is one of investigation and research for the purpose of determining whether the experiment of prohibition is a failure or a success."

LaGuardia said that during the 1928 presidential campaign the republican candidates were told specifically to appeal to wet votes on the ground that the prohibition problem would be "intelligently and constructively solved and that Mr. Hoover's attitude was expressed in his designation of the question as simply an experiment."

President Hoover, he added, made good his campaign pledge of appointing a commission to study the problem as well as his theory "of the experiment."

The menace caused by automobile drivers seeking a first-hand view of a fire while enjoying the comforts of an auto seat was brought forcibly to mind shortly after 6 o'clock this evening when a bell alarm from Box 51 was sounded. The "blaze" proved to be a pair of smouldering boards on the pedestrian walk of the bridge spanning the Willimantic river between Jillson hill and Thread Mill square, the trouble having apparently been caused by a lighted cigarette. A boy pulled in the alarm, bringing out the full complement of regular and call members of the fire department. Upon arrival at the scene, the firemen found their apparatus held up by over half a hundred automobiles parked promiscuously near the scene. As a result of this and many previous experiences of similar nature, it is expected that an effort will be made to secure an ordinance providing a penalty for such carelessness on the part of the public.

COLCHESTER

CARELESS FISHERMAN BLAMED FOR BAD FIRE

About 25 acres of brush and timberland owned by Emil Geoffrey and E. Schadich, adjoining the highway, about three miles above the village on the Hartford turnpike was burned over Saturday afternoon. The blaze was discovered about two o'clock and a call for help was sent to District Warden John M. Riley of Colchester. He speeded to the fire with Deputy Warden Elmer H. Foote and a force of local volunteers. The blaze started at the top of the big hill across the road from the former Carroll E. Staples homestead and was working its way down the heavily wooded hill, fanned by a stiff northwest wind. Warden C. H. Lathrop of Lebanon soon arrived with the state pumper and several Lebanon volunteers. A line of hose was laid several hundred feet from the Salmon brook to the burning brush land and clumps of pines which were a raging mass of flames. About twenty volunteers worked frantically throughout the afternoon and shortly before six o'clock the fire had been extinguished. Warden Riley has not yet made a definite check-up as to the amount of damage done. It is thought that the fire was started by some fisherman walking through the woods who carelessly dropped a lighted match or cigarette. This was the fourth brush and forest fire in town during the past week and three are thought to have been caused by careless fishermen. In addition to the Saturday afternoon fire there were fires last week in the Foote woods a few miles north of the village; brush land north of the town woods, and on the former Keeney flats, a few miles south of the village, the last mentioned probably being caused by a careless passing motorist. Warden Riley states that there have been more serious forest fires in Colchester this spring than for many years.

COLUMBIA

Miss Anne Dix, who has been spending several weeks in Montclair, N. J., with her sister, Mrs. Newton Failor, returned Friday afternoon. She was accompanied by friends, the Misses Hedden of Orange, N. J.

Columbia friends learned with regret of the death in New Haven of Prof. Edwin Lockwood. Prof. Lockwood, with his family, spent several summers on the Green some few years ago.

Mrs. Cora Hutchins and Miss Margaret Hutchins spent Friday in Hartford.

At the corner at the Green, Friday afternoon, a car bearing a New Jersey license, coming up the hill from the west, was struck by a car coming from the north and the running board on the New Jersey car was demolished. The other car was damaged about the front fenders, but both cars were able to move under their own power. The driver of the New Jersey car, Mrs. Marietta Flynn, of Elizabeth, N. J., was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, and it was found that three ribs had been broken. The other car was driven by Charles McBride, of South Manchester. Deputy Sheriff Harvey Collins, after investigation, placed Mr. MacBride under arrest on a charge of reckless driving. He is to appear in Colchester town court this (Wednesday) evening.

The road across the green was oiled a few days ago, and with the rain of Friday on it the surface was very slippery, and brakes proved worse than useless in emergency. Another danger spot recently seems to be Post hill, numerous cars overturning there at the curve at the bottom toward the Hebron side, when the road is wet. A large car overturned Friday morning there, and was damaged. The driver stated that he had been driving 20 years and this was his first accident.

The shrubbery on the Green is being trimmed and put in shape for the summer.

Found Dead by Granddaughter

Frank Clark, who lived on the Willimantic-Hartford road nearly to the Andover line, was found dead by his little 10-year-old granddaughter, on her return from school, Thursday afternoon. The little girl notified neighbors who called on the selectmen of Columbia. The little girl knew of no relatives but on examining papers and records it was found that Mr. Clark had a half-brother in New York, and a telegram was sent to him by First Selectman Clair Robinson. He came to Columbia Saturday and took the body of his brother back to New York for burial. The little girl is being cared for by Mrs. Raymond Squier for the present, and will later go on to New York to relatives.

On account of the heavy rain Friday evening, Scout Master Luther J. Buell called off the regular boy scout meeting. The scouts will meet Thursday evening instead of Friday.

Mrs. Julia Little and son, Horace Little, of Hartford, opened their home at the lake over the week end. They had with them, Clarence Bissell of Hartford, and Mrs. Little's brother, Frank Brown, of New Haven.

Pastor to Leave

A large audience was present at the Columbia church Easter morning. The church was beautifully decorated with lilies and other flowers. The choir sang "Victory Bells" and Mrs. Edith Isham sang "The Angels' Easter Song." The pastor's topic was "And Peter." This Sunday concluded the ministry in Columbia of the pastor, John Howell, who has accepted a call from the Federated Church of South Waterbury, where he will take up his duties at an early date.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hunt and family motored to Johnston, R. I., Sunday afternoon, where Mrs. Hunt is spending several days at the home of her sister, Mrs. Chester Winsor, Mr. Hunt and the remainder of the family returning Sunday night.

Again Spit is a horrid word, but it is worse on the end of your cigar

... the war against spitting is a crusade of decency ... join it. Smoke CERTIFIED CREMO!

The strong arm of the law halts the spitter whose vile and vicious habit menaces his fellow citizens. But for every spitter caught hundreds escape... hundreds who still roll cigars with dirty fingers and spit on the ends! In fact, more than half of all cigars made in this country are made by hand, and therefore subject to the risk of spit!

Certified Cremo protects you against this abomination! Every tobacco leaf entering the clean, sunny Certified Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. And its purity is safeguarded along every step of the way by amazing inventions that foil, wrap and tip the cigars without the possibility of spit!

Try a Certified Cremo—see how wonderfully good it is! Made of the choicest, tenderest leaves that the crop affords, we claim Certified Cremo's quality is tastier than that of any other cigar. Don't let its 5c price stand in your way. Your physician has in mind a cigar like Certified Cremo when he recommends a mild smoke in place of heavy brands.

Crush-proof... immaculate... foil-wrapped... Certified Cremo is the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall undoubtedly was thinking of when he said, "What this country needs is a good 5c cigar!"

DANIELSON

CHANGE TIME PIECES AT ALL HOURS OF DAY SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 27.—Daylight saving time made its bow this morning, or did it? That was an open question in town this morning. There were those who set their time pieces ahead an hour last night, others who did that particular thing this morning; still others that made the change in time at noon, and, mentioning another school of thought, another group of the town's people who passed up making the change until tonight. And there you are!

It was any old time in Danielson today, 2 o'clock for some, 3 o'clock for others. Just a play-day for many persons who get a real kick out of watching staid old tradition wobble about a bit.

It will be entirely different Monday morning. Time will be organized again by that time, and there'll be no forgetting about hopping out and getting on the job on daylight saving time in the early morning.

Danielson's manufacturing concerns, its banks, its business houses in effect went onto fast time when they closed Saturday's business day. So, too, with the postoffice, and so, also, with the average man and woman who has to keep step with the world, be it right or wrong.

Danielson has no train schedules to worry over any more, the only passenger trains that go through here not deigning to stop, unless for orders. Therefore the change in train schedules does not mean a thing to this community.

Without entering complaint, it may be stated that Danielson would be worse off these days if they closed the filling stations (gas) than though the town never again saw a passenger train.

Pulls Wise Stunt; Caught

There was a bit of chuckling up at the state police barracks today over the fact that one more alleged stunt to confound an officer in performance of routine duty went wrong. And as a result Miss Lillian Anderson, who lives here in Danielson, will make an appearance in the town court. She will be charged with operating a car with a tail-light that was not functioning.

The officer who checked her machine, as with others that came along, will tell the court on Monday that Miss Anderson held down her foot brake to light the stop light and kid him into believing that the tail-light was working. And, of course, that made all the difference in the world about dealing with the immediate situation.

WILLIAM J. CRAIG CONFINED TO HOME; STRUCK BY MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 27.—William J. Craig, one of the dwindling group of business men that have meant so much to Danielson in the course of a generation, is confined to his home on Winter street, injured, as the result of being run down by an automobile. While Mr. Craig is seriously hurt, his injuries are not of such a nature as to indicate that he will not fully recover eventually. The forecast today was that he will be confined to his home for at least a week.

Rudolph Trahan, resident here, was operator of the car that bowled Mr. Craig over while he was walking to his home. Trahan, who was not held, told state officers that he did not see Mr. Craig, being blinded by a car preceeding in an opposite direction, as Mr. Craig did not see the car that hit him until after it had struck him.

Mr. Craig's legs are injured and he has an ugly gash in the forehead. He is also otherwise bruised and injured and for the time being unable to give his usual unfailing attention to his business.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Vincent B. Adams

Mrs. Mary Ella Adams died this morning at the family home in Attawaugan. She succumbed after a long illness. Mrs. Adams, the wife of Vincent B. Adams, was born in Arkwright, R. I., May 29, 1857, a daughter of Edwin and Hannah Finney Passmore. She had lived in the vicinity of Attawaugan practically all of her life. In addition to her husband she leaves a daughter, Miss Ethel M., a sister, Mrs. John Russell, Attawaugan, and four brothers, Edwin of Melrose Highlands, Mass., William of New Orleans and Charles and Frederick Passmore of East Killingly.

After conferences with representatives of the Connecticut Light and Power company and the Crystal Water company, two local public service corporations, First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast has reached an agreement under which the companies will pay, as may be allotted between them, the cost of restoring to proper conditions places in oiled streets of the borough where excavations have been made, for gas and water pipes, and the filled in excavations left unsatisfactory, as to refilling operations. The town has gone out, prior to the spring oiling operations, and filled in or cut down, as the case might warrant, the excavated places and made them ready to receive oil in the near future, without having depressions or bumps in the streets when the oiling operations are completed.

The matter is a comparatively small one, but one more evidence that Selectman Tillinghast gives his close, personal attention to all such public affairs in Danielson.

After all, it now appears, it may be necessary to make some arrests for speeding cars through Danielson's business section. There have been sufficient warnings as to this. It so happens that the chief offenders are operators of the new, smart-looking, low-priced cars that can travel like a streak. The boys are proud of them, and should be, but the police say drivers of them must show some restraint in getting through the business section, not yet listed as a speedway.

Be sure to start early in the day with your deposit, as the local banks are open 8 to 2 p. m., standard time, except on Saturdays, when they close an hour earlier. Deposit now in the savings department of the Windham County National bank and share in the 5 per cent dividend payable in June.—adv.

Announcement has been made that a credit bureau has been organized here and is about to start operations. This means a closer check and tougher break for those who habitually do not pay their bills. The man or woman who buys and does not pay is going to be up against it in the near future. Credit to them will be generally refused, it is said. All of this is in line with a situation under which people who can pay have been taking advantage of late of depressed business conditions and have inexcusably delayed paying as promptly as they might.

The majority of trout fishermen are peeved. The heavily stocked state-leased brooks have not been yielding the inspiring catches that were expected in this territory. Little fish—yes, and plenty of them, but the boys want the big ones. It so happens that this has been an unusually cold spring, bitterly cold and punishing most of the time since the fishing season opened nearly a fortnight ago. To the discouraged fishermen it may be said that they should "buck up." There are plenty of fine trout in the brooks, but they are not biting, not generally. Warm weather, it is promised, will bring greater dividends for the fishermen, say along about apple blossom time. And a little tip is that some of the brooks that have been neglected for several years for the easier fishing on the state-leased streams are not a bad bet. There's plenty of fish in them.

This morning, Joseph Bernard Seguin, 11-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Seguin, died at the family home on the West Side.

Good news about the weather: Wind shifted around into the south today and mercury ran up to 68 degrees in the sun this afternoon. Happy days are here again.

Bad news: Some trout fishermen have been raiding heavily stocked private ponds in nearby territory the past week. County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield has been fully informed about the matter. Cheating fishermen are going to be out of luck if they persist in doing things they should not do.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey F. Fortune recently motored over the Storm King highway in New York state, near West Point, and also enjoyed the view from Bear Mountain bridge in that region.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Musgrave and Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Storer motored to Wellfleet, on the Cape, today, Mrs. Musgrave and Mrs. Storer to remain for a week.

The pickerel fishing season, and permission, under the state law, to fish in ponds opens next Thursday, May 1, and many fishermen, not satiated by any means by trout catches, are going to make next Thursday a holiday.

Homer H. Judd, Bristol, field representative of the state fish and game commission, was here on business over the week end.

Miss Elise Frambroise of Fall River spent the week end with relatives in Danielson and vicinity.

There must be a reason for it, and anyone may guess as to the answer, but why be telling anyone as a news item where one spent Memorial day this year—and that happened here in town this morning. Might be charged up to the change to daylight saving, but it doesn't add up right.

CENTRAL VILLAGE

WESTMINISTER

The unseasonably low temperatures and biting winds of the past few days has done much damage to tender foliage and plants which were well started. There is concern among fruit growers, especially those who have peach orchards. The general report is that early peach buds are blasted. It is too soon to ascertain if the late ones are ruined also.

Fishermen complain that while they see plenty of fish, they don't bite. The probable cause is that the water is too cold. Most of the streams in this locality are fed by springs and have not warmed up yet.

Arthur Jones, of Westminster, who has been a patient in Backus hospital for the past three weeks following an automobile accident, is doing well. He is expected to remain at the hospital until the end of May. Many of his friends from his home town are regular visitors at the hospital.

The L. A. S. of the M. E. church was entertained by Mrs. Charles McDowell, Wednesday afternoon. A quilt was tied. A lunch of cake, nabiscos, bananas and coffee was served.

Miss Mildred Brown has finished a course at the Rhode Island Academy of Hairdressing and Cosmetic Therapthy and is working in Providence.

Sweden's most prominent university town, Upsala, will have a large tennis hall enabling the students to train indoors during the winter season.

PUTNAM

HUNDREDS ATTEND TWO-DAY AIR MEET AT MANTUP FIELD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 27.—An air meet held at Mantup field in the Gary district this afternoon attracted hundreds of spectators who thrilled at the daring feats of aerial skill performed by Lieut. Carl A. Dixon, Al Burnham, and Ed Sherman, well known Hartford fliers. The air festival was featured with passenger flights during the day and this afternoon the pilots put on their acts which proved breathtaking to many onlookers who stood with necks strained skyward and eyes glued on the planes as they looped, nose-dived and flew at high altitudes inverted. The most interesting feat of the afternoon was a parachute jump made by Ed Sherman, of the Yale flying service, who leaped from a plane and landed gracefully beneath the open chute from an altitude roughly estimated at 500 feet. Pilot Burnham demonstrated his skill when he brought his plane down in a dead stick landing. With the motor silenced, Burnham glided into position and landed perfectly.

The success of the two day meet, punctuated with feats of daring, again brings to mind Putnam's need of developing Mantup field into an efficient air port. With only the ordinary care given a hayfield, the rolling acres of the large tract are in excellent condition under the circumstances, and aviators alighting and taking off from its surface today reported it to be on par with emergency landing fields hereabouts.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Mathewson.

Thomas Mathewson, 57, resident of this city and Woodstock for many years, died Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. W. J. Sherman, 20 Fremont street, following an illness of many years. He had been an invalid during the late years of his life.

Mr. Mathewson was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., the son of Dr. Arthur B. and Harriet Blagben Mathewson, Nov. 2, 1871. His father was a noted American oculist and authority on diseases of the eye.

Mr. Mathewson for many years lived in Woodstock. His infirmity forced him to retire to the Sherman home, where he received the necessary care and attentions. Although he han been ill for many months, his death came as a shock to his numerous friends and acquaintances in Putnam and Woodstock.

Surviving Mr. Mathewson is a sister, Mrs. Faith T. Huizinga of Thompson, en route to this country from a recent tour of Europe, and a brother, William W. Mathewson, of Washington, D. C.

Putnam, along with the rest of the state, fell into the swing of daylight saving time, which was unofficially adopted at 2 o'clock this morning. In most instances, the city's industries, schools and business houses will observe the new system of time and will begin activities Monday one hour earlier. The fast time system, said to be the bane of the farmer and the boon of the urban dwellers, today was practically governing everything, with the exception of the masses at St. Mary's church which were celebrated on standard time. Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the church, announced this morning that the parish would adopt the new time Sunday evening and would continue to do so until September 28. Schools in the town and the city will reopen next Monday morning on daylight saving time, according to announcement made by Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin.

The advancement of train schedules one hour today in order to conform with the fast time system, failed to create any confusion, according to railroad officials here.

OBITUARY.

Miss Ruth M. Rhoades.

Miss Ruth M. Rhoades, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Rhoades of Pomfret, died at her home Saturday afternoon, following a long illness. She had been ill for many months and a heart attack suffered Saturday was the cause of her death. Miss Rhoades was born in Pomfret, August 17, 1912.

J. L. Griffin of Chapel street, manager of the Montgomery Ward store, was summoned into court Saturday morning on a charge of refusal to produce an operator's license when requested to do so by Officer Benoni Durand of the local police, Friday evening, during the investigation of an accident in which Griffin's car figured. The case was continued until Monday morning by Judge Geissler, on the request of Attorney I. H. Miron, counsel for Griffin.

In checking up the mishap which occurred on the corner of Main and Pomfret streets, the officer found that a car being operated by Carl Swanson of Pomfret, had smashed into the Griffin car, parked only a few feet from the intersection. Swanson collided with the parked vehicle in an effort to avoid striking another car which was proceeding in an easterly direction up the hill on Pomfret street. Officer Durand in investigating, inquired of Griffin for his driver's license. Refusing to produce the certificate, Officer Durand ordered him to appear in court.

The amount of wet evidence secured at the time of the raids included about 60 bottles of beer, a half dozen bottles of wine, and 20 gallons of moonshine, variously classed as "splits," "alky," "squirrel," "block and fall," "forty-rod" and "real old stuff."

Mrs. Moduszewski, Mrs. Kozlowski and Luchwika Abugal paid up. The other eight, electing to try their luck in the court of common pleas, appealed and are under bonds of $500 each.

IRON WORKERS STRIKE ON THE VIADUCT JOB

For the second time this month, the iron workers at the Quinebaug viaduct, jacked up and quit the job. It was learned here Sunday that the latest trouble was on account of the refusal by the gang to perform some sort of work connected with the contract that didn't appear to jibe with the specifications for steel workers. The first strike, which held up the iron work close to two weeks, was on account of a matter of pay.

DELEGATES AND THE TREATY

In his decision to submit the London treaty to the senate at an early date, it is to be expected that the president relies upon the assistance of the delegates from this country in his advocacy for ratification. If he submits the treaty with a plea that it be approved, it will be because he believes that there is an advantage for the country and international peace in that agreement. The members of the delegation have been directly concerned in the negotiations. They are in the closest touch with what has gone on, the objections overcome and the things really accomplished. It is a united delegation. It is, therefore, to be expected that all the members will be interested in seeing that their work is ratified.

It would be a strange situation indeed if any or all of the members of that delegation should refrain from participating in the efforts to have the value of the document set forth in its true and best light. There is a duty resting upon their shoulders, aside from their personal interest in their own work, to advocate ratification.

In making up the members of the delegation, President Hoover selected two members of the senate, senators who stand high in their respective parties. Each party was given membership and, while the participating in the conference was not undertaken as a partisan move, it is to be expected that the leaders in the respective parties will have their influence in the consideration of the treaty.

The sending of senators as delegates was believed a wise course. It means that representatives of the upper house of congress are bringing back first-hand information. It isn't solely a case of accepting the president's advice; it has its own members to fall back on. Having participated and being the leader of the democrats in the senate, it is inevitable that Senator Robinson should be expected to have much influence in the democratic group. In view of the part that he has played and in consideration of what he has said concerning the conference and the treaty it would be strange indeed if he did not take off his coat and work for ratification. The same may also be said of the other members, although their influence upon the senate minority can hardly be regarded as equally influential.

TRANSPORTING THE PUBLIC

There is something reasonable about the plea that if a person is charged for and pays for a seat in a train he ought to get what he pays for. There are times when it is perfectly evident that persons are forced to stand, or perhaps are willing to stand in order to get immediate transportation to their destination, but when it gets to be a regular thing there is just cause for complaint.

Handling the transportation lines out of New York city during those hours when "everyone" wants to be accommodated is not the easiest of problems. It calls for much equipment, much careful planning and equally careful despatching of trains. But, because it has become chronic that those making use of the Long Island railroad, being in fact dependent upon it, have been unable to get such accommodations as they consider adequate, petitions for relief have been placed in the hands of the transit commission which, after careful study, has reached the decision and made the announcement that the railroad must provide seats for all riders up to the limit of 15-car trains.

This involves service within the city of New York and means that the railroad will be obliged to resort to the expenditure of about $13,000,000 if it complies with the requirement without appeal, and it may involve far more than that if the matter is carried to the courts and the decision upheld.

It is customary with railroads to be quick to cut down on their equipment and withdraw trains when they find that there isn't enough patronage to make ends meet. When there is a larger number of people desirous of using the facilities of a railroad than the road has prepared for, it would be expected that there would be an eagerness to furnish the accommodations. When that isn't done, it ought to be expected that there would some commission sufficiently interested in the welfare of the public to see that the deficiency was overcome. This is what the transit commission has undertaken by its decision, and it has invariably been the purpose of a railroad to provide for all patrons when it can be told in advance through daily experience what the patronage is going to be. A seat for all riders seems a fair decision.

RIVER OR CANAL DEVELOPMENT

Because there is a provision in the waterways bill before congress calling for the expenditure of a large sum for the taking over of the canals in New York state, there is a disposition among many of the midwestern states to feel considerably upset. The inference drawn in that quarter is that it looks very much like a move to sidetrack the St. Lawrence development and put in its place the utilization of the canals, and the states which have devoted so much effort to getting the river development are by no means favorably impressed by any such thought of substitution.

Along with the New York state canals which would be taken over by the federal government, there would also be the completion of the work in Illinois for the much talked of lake-to-gulf waterway. Naturally, Illinois isn't kicking over such a proposal, but it is one of the states which does not look with favor upon the idea of having the Erie and Oswego canals take the place of the St. Lawrence.

The St. Lawrence is the development that has been favored by the president and by engineers. It is also the plan that the midwest considers would give it the better service, even with the handicap that winter places upon operations for several months. Also it is pointed out that it would be much the cheaper development in the end so that, with the adverse report of engineers against the all-American route, the added expense and the limited service, there is not only uneasiness in the midwest but a determination to oppose the canal plan and the method that has been adopted in bringing it forth in this manner.

Although the St. Lawrence plan has not moved along as rapidly as might have been desired, the chief handicap thus far appears to be Canada. There has not been the responsiveness on the part of the dominion that would hasten negotiations. There is a suspicion across the border that even though Canada would get that volume of shipping, which the all-American route backers want to go through the port of New York, it would not secure sufficient benefits to warrant the expense that would be involved on its part. Thus Canada has helped the backers of the canal plan but the midwest will have to undergo a decided change of heart if it abandons its opposition to the bill's provisions.

THE FAYETTEVILLE TRAGEDY

One of the great fears displayed by such a clever flier as Colonel Lindbergh was that the inconsiderate crowds at landing fields would get in the way of his plane when landing so that it would be impossible to avoid an accident.

If those in charge of the flying circus at Fayetteville, Tenn., are correct in their statement that the crowd had been warned to remain away from the embankment where six were killed and 20 others injured when struck by a plane in landing, it would appear that the eagerness to get to a point of vantage from which to view the flying maneuvers totally eclipsed the efforts for personal safety.

How difficult it is to govern a crowd under such conditions and how persistent spectators defy efforts at regulation is always disclosed at balloon ascensions, fires and points where unusual conditions have developed. Long since it was demonstrated that those engaged in doing flying stunts should refrain from swooping down over the heads of the outdoor audience and execute their tricks at points where, if they fell, they would not land in a crowd. From repeated instances it has become evident that such safety measures are not overdone, but instead of placing the whole responsibility upon the fliers the Fayetteville tragedy makes it clear that there must be the necessary cooperation on the part of the impetuous public. It was one of those cases where those who defied the warnings subjected themselves unsuspectingly to serious danger. They were taking much the same sort of a chance as the auto driver at a railroad crossing who persisted in going ahead when the flagman waved a "stop" sign. They risked their lives even when told of the peril and it was unfortunately an instance when the possible happened.

LYNCHERS AND AUTHORITIES

Not what can be regarded as acts that will contribute to the good name of the states were the lynchings which occurred in Mississippi and South Carolina, where two Negroes were taken from the authorities and shot to death. In both instances there was an interference with the law. There was no opportunity for the provisions of the law to be carried out. There was no trial, no conviction. It was a case of mob decision and punishment, and even though there may have been guilt in both instances there was no reason to believe but what the full penalty would have been exacted in each instance upon conviction.

These cases do not necessarily mean that the south has turned from its better behavior in regard to lynchings. It is deplorable that such cases bob up to further mar the record, and especially records which have been showing decided improvement. It simply demonstrates that, while good influences are at work in the southern states, they have not accomplished all that is needed.

But, while these cases are serving to enlarge the blot upon the records of Mississippi and South Carolina, there cannot fail to be noted the response that is being made to the lynchings in the respective states. In Mississippi the sheriff has announced that there is to be no inquest and that there cannot be an investigation until next fall. That simply means that nothing will be done. In South Carolina the situation gives better promise. One of the lynching party was recognized by the sheriff and his son, and not only his, but other prosecutions are expected. Whatever the outcome, the attitude of the upholders of the law in South Carolina conforms more nearly to what is expected than that of the authorities down in Mississippi.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Don't miss today's eclipse. Although only partial, there will be none like it for many years.

Did everyone in the household take a chance on putting the clock ahead an hour?

Even with daylight saving there will have to be some scrambling to get up with the birdies.

The man on the corner says: Paint-up week has no reference to personal appearances.

With 7,640 cars stopped in Massachusetts because of no lights or defective lights in three days, the need of the inspection and its continuance is clearly demonstrated.

Such moves as are being made to correct possible hazardous conditions in the state prison at Wethersfield are timely. It shows that heed is being given to the lesson from Ohio.

SECOND FIDDLE

"Ho hum," sighed the tall senior as he entered the room where Miss Nelson's short story class was to meet for the first time.

"I think it would be best if I sat beside her," he told himself as he saw a very pretty girl sitting alone at the back of the room.

"My last year begun," he remarked to the pretty girl as a means of making conversation.

"Nice day for a start."

"Isn't it? And I hear this instructor is a wow. I wish she'd hurry up. They say she's only 24 and very good looking."

"Is she really?"

"Yes. Imagine it! I'm as old as she is and she's going to try and teach me."

"There may be a few things you don't know," said the pretty girl with a smile.

"I bet I can teach her something," argued the tall senior. "I laid out of school last year and worked out west. As a lumberjack in the winter, and last summer I ran a line with a young engineer in Mexico. I was right in the thick of it when they had the recent revolution, and boy, I can write Miss Nelson some stories that'll make her hair curl."

"I should think you could," murmured the pretty girl with an admiring glance at him. "But won't you find school rather dull?"

"Maybe. I'm older than most of these coeds and I like girls that have some brains and can talk. About all they can talk, about is last night's date. That is, most of them," he added, with a quick look at the pretty girl. "I'm glad I have Miss Nelson instead of some old professor. I'm going right up after this class and ask her to come over to the Kandy Kitchen and have lunch with me. I'll bet she can talk."

"I daresay she can. But how do you know she'll have lunch with you?" asked the pretty girl thoughtfully.

"I can ask her, anyway," he returned with a grin. "I tell you what, if she doesn't accept then you have lunch with me."

"And play second fiddle to her?" asked the pretty girl, scornfully. The tall senior stretched his legs and nodded.

"I have to ask her. I promised myself I would and I always keep my promises. Tell me your name. Mine's Jack Donnelly."

"And mine," began the pretty girl, but just at that moment a loud bell jangled in the hall. The pretty girl stood up and closed the door, then walked to the front of the room and seated herself at the instructor's desk, while the tall senior stared in amazement.

Miss Nelson produced a pack of class cards that she had been holding under a book and began to call the roll.

"Miss Adams."

"Present."

"Mr. Beecher."

"Present."

"Mr. Donnelly."

"Here," cried the tall senior from the back of the room. Miss Nelson rapidly finished calling the rest of the names.

"I don't believe I'll keep you today. For next time bring me a short sketch about anything you wish. Class dismissed."

The rest of the class filed out, but the tall senior walked up to the desk and grinned.

"Miss Nelson, I wonder if you'd care to amble over to the Kandy Kitchen and have lunch with me?"

"Why, I hardly know you."

"That's perfectly all right—I don't mind. I told you if the teacher refused me I'd ask the girl who was sitting with me before the bell rang. You can't turn me down twice."

"Well, I really don't feel like talking today——"

"Objection overruled. You won't have to talk," he declared masterfully. "I'm going to tell you a story about Mexico that'll make your hair curl!"—Chicago News

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 27—Reluctance of Senator "Hi" Johnson of California to head the senate investigation of senatorial campaign expenditures was generally ascribed to two things.

For one thing, like most Californians, particularly native sons, Johnson is only camping out when not in that state. He had planned a log summer at home, free from political worries. For another, he's an ardent anti-world court man.

Possibly the fact that the world court issue figured in the late unpleasantness between Senator Deneen and Mrs. Ruth McCormick out in Illinois has a bearing on the Californian's attitude. That affair was to be the first at bat before the investigating committee.

Previous Experience

Johnson probably has memories of previous senate inquiries into primary expenditures which are not wholly pleasant. By virtue of such an inquiry in 1920 when Johnson and the late General Leonard Wood deadlocked for the republican presidential nomination, Governor Lowden was removed from the convention picture.

Former Senator Kenyon, a strong Johnson man, headed that inquiry, aided by Jim Reed of Missouri. Johnson might conceivably feel that he owed loss of the nomination to an unexpected backfire from the expenditures investigation.

Almost President

At that, Hiram Johnson seems to have come about as close to the presidency as any man who missed it. But for his "no" one hot summer night in Chicago in 1920, he instead of Calvin Coolidge would have been Harding's running mate and succeeded to the presidency on Harding's death. The original swing to Harding that Friday night involved a tender of the second place on the ticket to Johnson.

Nine years before that the Bystander was traveling with the late Theodore Roosevelt when the latter reached Sacramento and was invited to a private luncheon by the California governor, Hiram Johnson. The press was excluded, guests were supposed not to talk, and did not, for publication at least.

But on the train again with Mr. Roosevelt, the Bystander was told confidentially that Governor Johnson had urged the colonel to run for the republican nomination in 1912, the following year. In doing so, he was said to have told Mr. Roosevelt that he, Johnson, would run for the vice presidential nomination, and that he would not run second to any man but Roosevelt.

Months later, when the progressive break came and Roosevelt and Johnson bolted the steam roller GOP convention, it was a foregone conclusion that they would head the third party ticket.

Stories That Recall Others

Easter's Meaning.

Easter was meaning very little else to Junior except Easter rabbits and colored Easter eggs.

"Now why do we celebrate Easter?" the Sunday school teacher asked the class of tots.

"I don't know, but it might be all the baby chicks' birthday," was the unexpected reply from Junior.

Helping Mother.

Mother was preparing onions for luncheon and laid one down on the table while she looked at the food cooking in the oven. Marion, the small daughter of the family picked it up and carefully removed the dry outer skin. When her mother returned to the table the child held it up to her and said:

"See, mother? I've taken all the paper off the onion for you."

YOUR HEALTH

Your Child's Teeth

By Charles L. Drain, D. D. S., College of Dentistry, Iowa City, Iowa.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Parents many times explain away the tooth troubles of their children by saying that either one or both of them have poor teeth. So the children are just naturally supposed to have decayed teeth. But such is not the case. Good teeth or poor teeth are not matters of mere chance.

Teeth grow and develop much the same as any other part of the body. They have their beginnings before birth, steadily growing until about the sixteenth year, when all but the wisdom teeth are completely grown. To develop good sound teeth, there must be provided the materials which go to build them. These materials can be obtained from one source and only one—FOOD.

The mother should look well to her diet before the child comes, not so much because of the child's teeth as for her own. For, most times, it is the mother's teeth that suffer, because of nature's protection for the unborn. If, however, the inadequacy is too great, then both mother and child will be affected.

After the baby is born its food needs should be directed by a competent physician.

As the baby develops to the young child, thence to older childhood, and on to young man and woman-hood, the food intake must be increased. But this increase should be in carefully planned directions if the results are to be satisfactory, for balanced diet is essential to health and growth. Milk, eggs or meat, fruit and vegetables, are always essentials, supplemented by smaller amounts of bread, potatoes and other starchy foods. The inclusion of coarse foods and insistance on thorough mastication is important. This assists in the development of strong bones of the face and jaws.

Food for the teeth is a fundamental, and of equal importance is care of the teeth and mouth. It is essential that the child visit the dentist regularly after the third year and cultivate the habit of good mouth care at home.

The future health and happiness of your children, is, in large part, determined during childhood. Care in the proper feeding of them and regular systematic attention by a competent dentist is the most effective means of reaching maturity with a healthy mouth. Let PREVENTION be a dental watchword to you.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Rabbit Is Made Happy

Seek not for happiness apart;
You'll always find it in the heart.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit had gone over to the Old Pasture. It was a beautiful morning. Of course, Peter should have been at home in the dear Old Briar-patch. However, he had gone over to the Old

Hummer darted from flower to flower

Pasture the night before and jolly, round, bright Mr. Sun began his daily climb up in the blue, blue sky before Peter realized that it was time to go home. He saw Redtail the Hawk sailing high in the sky and right then and there he decided that he would remain in the Old Pasture, for that day at least.

Peter was trying to decide just what to do next when he heard a humming sound. It seemed to be just over his head. Peter looked up. Hummer the Humming-bird swooped down with such speed and so close to Peter's head that Peter ducked. "What are you trying to do?" he cried indignantly.

"Just trying to express my happiness," replied Hummer, making Peter duck again. "Isn't spring a beautiful time of year?" he continued. "I always love to visit the Old Pasture when Columbine is in bloom."

Peter pricked up his long ears. Columbine? Columbine? he repeated. "I suppose that is a flower. You don't seem to be much interested in anything but flowers."

Z-zoom came Hummer close to one of Peter's long ears. "Of course the Columbine is a flower, stupid!" he cried. "It is one of the most beautiful of all the flowers of the spring, and when I find the first in bloom I always feel that I have found something very precious. Only a few moments ago I found the first I have seen this year, and the whole day is brighter for the finding."

Peter's face brightened suddenly and he gave a little hop in the air. "Of course I know the Columbine!" he cried. "It is so long since I saw it last spring that for a few minutes I could not remember it. But I remember it now and I remember just where to look for it."

Without another word Peter started up one of the old cowpaths that led to the upper part of the Old Pasture. Lipperty-lipperty-lip ran Peter and there was joy in his heart as he ran. Hummer darted ahead and in the twinkling of an eye had disappeared. Peter kept on, lipperty-lipperty-lip. Presently he came to a rocky ledge. He turned and hopped along this a little way and then he sat up and drew a long breath of pleasure. There, swayed by the Merry Little Breezes that were dancing around them, were several nodding blossoms, bright scarlet without and bright yellow within.

Each blossom looked as if it were made of five little horns-of-plenty fastened together—little fairy horns-of-plenty, upside-down. Each little horn was in reality a petal—a hollow petal, quite unlike the flat petals of most flowers. From the midst of these five petals pistils and many stamens were thrust out like a little tassel. On the tip of each stamen was a little package of golden dust, which is called pollen.

The flowers were lovely in themselves, but they were the more lovely for the slender, delicate stems on which they were borne and the beautiful, light-green leaves divided into smaller leaves, or leaflets, as they are called, these in turn divided into three or more parts. Hummer darted from flower to flower, thrusting his long bill into each, and Peter knew that these blossoms were as sweet as they were good to look at. Peter drew a long sigh of pure happiness.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Peck Spring Company, Plainville.

The Peck Spring company was organized in 1916 by D. C. Peck and his two sons, D. K. and P. L. Peck. A factory was provided by remodelling a barn on the property of D. C. Peck. The total capital invested was less than one thousand dollars and the first machinery purchased, an automatic spring coiler and two foot presses. Before the factory was completed orders for springs received, rendered it necessary to begin operations, which was done by installing a motor and the spring coiler in the basement of the residence of D. C. Peck. Orders for hair springs were filled from the kitchen table.

Soon the World war began and owing to government contracts for wire it became difficult for a new concern to buy any. After interviewing most of the wire mills, and writing to many more without success it looked as though the budding business would be blasted in its beginning.

As a last resort, however, D. C. Peck went to New York and called on the American Steel & Wire company and finally succeeded in purchasing a small quantity which enabled them to continue in business. From then on this company supplied the wire for the steadily increasing business.

The employes for the first year consisted of two or three girls, the automatic and heavier presswork being done by the two sons, and the shipping by D. C. Peck.

In February 1920 the company was incorporated, bearing the same name. When radio began to be prominent, the manufacture of screw machine parts was begun.

Both branches of the business have steadily increased until at the present time the yearly sales will amount to well over a quarter million dollars.

Additional floor space has been added from time to time and is at present fully occupied with further additions anticipated.

The corporation is a closed one and is owned and managed by D. C. Peck and his son P. L. Peck, D. K. Peck having passed on a year or two since.

BANISH MUSIC?

"PLEASE don't," plead millions of theatregoers.

"Better not," warn wise showmen.

"Sure we will," declare industrialists who control canned music in the theatres. "The public can learn to like records as well as orchestras. Anyway, that's what they're going to get."

And so the issue is defined: Shall talking pictures be used as an excuse for reducing the theatre to a dehumanized museum (without reduction in admission charge). Or, shall the atmosphere of the theatre be retained and the cause of culture served through a victory for music?

Managers of high-class theatres recognize that real music is essential, and so they continue to provide it.

Others must be shown.

The Music Defense League, organized to voice the public's desire for real music, is approaching 2,500,000 membership. Each vote counts more today than ever before.

LOCOMOTIVE WHISTLE WENT ON RAMPAGE

For something about two hours early Sunday morning the shrieking blast of a locomotive whistle made sleep practically impossible for residents in the center of the city and occasioned close to a half hundred telephone calls to police headquarters to inquire what was the matter.

The trouble started about 2 o'clock when the whistle of a switch engine became stuck as the engine was coming up the New Haven road track between the state hospital and the Thermos factory and nothing that the engine crew could do would shut off the steam, which was up to 200 pounds pressure, it was understood.

The only thing that could be done was to run the engine up to the yard here where the fires were drawn so as to allow the steam to go down. As long as the pressure held the whistle kept blowing while railroad employes went about with cotton in their ears to keep from becoming entirely deaf.

ADVISES REPLACEMENT OF HYDRANTS OF OLD TYPE BY WATER DEPARTMENT

Replacement of all the old hydrants of an obsolete type is recommended by Supervisor John R. Bowman, Jr., in his report for the city water department for the year to March 31, which is to be presented to the May meeting of the common council.

Financial Returns

Financially the year has been one of the best, as the profit from operations has been $74,477.22, and the amount turned over to the city treasurer was $15,898.75 more than the estimate made at the beginning of the year.

Supervisor's Report

As the reservoirs are the nuclei of the whole department, attention to them properly comes first in this report.

During the month of July last, we had a special analysis made of the water from each of the three reservoirs and there was shown as the result of these tests, an algae growth (vegetable), which necessitated some attention, and as a consequence the copper sulphate treatment was given which culminated in the desired result, namely the killing of this growth.

Samples of water are taken once each month from an outlet of each of the three reservoirs and the Connecticut state department of health has been giving us a clean bill of health.

The chlorinators at each reservoir have also been inspected by their manufacturers, the Wallace & Tiernan Co., Inc., of Newark, N. J., and also by Mr. Almquist of the state board of health, and are functioning properly.

At Fairview, the usual summer trimming and cleaning and cutting back of brush has been done, which places this pond in first class condition, both from the standpoint of cleanliness and beauty. I doubt if there is a more beautiful sheet of water in our state.

At Stony Brook, under the care of Hiram H. Amburn, the summer cleaning and trimming has been done, which places this pond in fine physical condition. Due to the extreme dryness of the past summer, and the heavy burden placed on this body of water (due partly to its height), the water got rather low, but it is building up in splendid fashion now and with our new reservoir, we of Norwich, have need of no fear of a water shortage.

The new reservoir, Deep River, has been turned into the system for the first time and is proving to be a nice water supply. The water is clean and pure. This reservoir is under the able care of Joseph Harasemowitz. The customary summer cleaning that takes place at the other reservoirs, has also been given to Deep River. Also the customary monthly analysis, which gives us the state's O. K.

Meadow Brook has also been thoroughly cleaned and trimmed and the brush cut. This supply was turned into Fairview last fall and has been instrumental in keeping the water at Fairview from getting low. The feeder brooks, besides the main brook of this supply, have been thoroughly cleaned.

The rip-rap walls of the three reservoirs have also been efficiently cleaned and any stagnant water found impounded around the reservoirs has been drained.

Your supervisor has experimented some with copper service pipe and while it is new, he is confident that this type of water service is going to prove to be very efficient ultimately, both from the standpoint of costs (it is cheaper than lead), strength and cleanliness.

We were fortunate in not having any frozen mains the past winter, which has, of course, resulted in some savings for the department.

The people living at the Norwich Town end of the New London turnpike are pleased with their new supply of water, they have been using Deep River water, before it was turned into the city proper.

The town of Norwich has had our department place a hydrant on New London turnpike, at the junction of Otrabando avenue, which gives the families in that locality a much-needed protection.

I would like to recommend to the board, the systematic removal of all the old obsolete hydrants, replacing them with the newer and more modern type.

Statement on Finances

The financial statement made by the board of water commissioners, Charles A. Hagberg, president; John M. Swahn, Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald, John P. Corcoran and Amell C. Brosofske, is as follows:

BUTSY WEISGRABER PITCHES ACADEMY TO EASY WIN OVER CHAPMAN TECH

Taking full advantage of eight bases on balls by Capt. Fred Hewitt, Chapman Tech pitcher, the Academy scored an easy 10 to 3 victory over the Whalers Saturday afternoon at the campus in an eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island Interscholastic league game. The game was played under good weather conditions and before the largest crowd of the season, about 2,500 jamming the bleachers and stretching out on both lines.

Butsy Weisgraber, veteran Wildcat hurler, made his first real start of the year a big success by limiting the Tech men to six hits and fanning 11. Aside from the fourth and sixth innings when Tech bunched two pairs of hits, he was invincible. Weisgraber, although bothered by a lame ankle, had good control, passing only one man. He hit two, one of which could hardly be charged to wildness as much as it could to Griswold, New London catcher's desire to get on base by this route.

The game, which was billed as a hurling duel between Hewitt and Weisgraber, was turned into almost a walkaway for N. F. A. when the New London pitcher was utterly unable to locate the plate. In addition to his eight passes, he uncorked three wild heaves, two of them at critical moments and practically presented the local boys the game. The Academy was unable to hit him effectively, getting only three safeties in the six innings he worked, but they didn't need to, the way things were going.

One of these hits, and the one that finished Hewitt, was a long home run drive by Weisgraber, in the sixth inning, scoring Chet Berghinzo with the seventh and eighth runs. His drive went over the centerfield fence near the scoreboard and was the fifth home run by an Academy player this year, in seven games. Bud Fontaine, with two line singles in three tries, was the leading Academy hitter.

The Academy made four errors afield, and three of them came in the two run-scoring innings that Tech enjoyed. Aside from this, Weisgraber was backed up in good shape, especially by Reardon at second. Breen and Arico collaborated in the seventh on the fielding feature when Breen came in fast to scoop up Silva's pop with one hand. He made a bad throw to first that pulled Alec off the bag, but the latter took it with one hand and with his bare hand tagged the runner as he raced by.

The Academy collected their runs in two fours, in the third and sixth and two in the eighth. Tech made two in the fourth and one in the sixth.

The Wildcats broke the ice when Arico walked, and so did Reardon, only on the fourth ball to the latter Hewitt uncorked a wild pitch and Arico raced to third and Speed to second. Gibbs got an infield hit scoring Arico and sending Reardon to third. Gibbs took second and both he and the second sacker came in on Fontaine's single past third. Breen drove out a long sacrifice fly to right and Fontaine, who had gone to third on a passed ball, came in with the fourth tally.

Tech threw a scare into the Academy fans in the fourth when Bucko singled to center and scored on Hewitt's double to the centerfield fence. Snoesky hit to Reardon, who threw him out at first, while Hewitt scored. In the sixth, Tech finished its scoring on Hewitt's double to right and Snoesky's single to right, aided by a poor return by Crowell.

The Academy thought things were getting too close for comfort so piled up another quartet in their half of the frame. Breen walked, took second and third when Petrowski threw into right field, trying to get him at second on Crowell's grounder and scored on a wild pitch, as did Crowell. Berghinzo walked and Weisgraber smacked out a home run.

In the eighth Pepin singled past third as a starter and Berghinzo was hit. Weisgraber sacrificed. Arico forced Pepin at the plate but Reardon singled to center to score Berghinzo and Arico.

WILDCAT SCRATCHES

Now that Butsy has poved he is ready for a big year, the Academy, it seems, need have little worry about its pitching this year, what with Boots Greene also going great guns.

Breen hit the ball hard every time up, although collecting only one hit.

The Academy had more life Saturday than in a long time.

The school band again pleased the crowd, receiving much applaus.

Fontaine and Reardon again returned to the wars after suspensions and played good games. Speed appears to have filled that second base gap in good shape.

Tech claims it will be different in New London in about three weeks.

One of the reasons advanced for Hewitt's wildness was that he had not pitched in two weeks. Chapman's game with Windham last Saturday was cancelled, leaving him without an actual game experience since the Westerly tilt.

The umps were Johnny Murphy, of this city, behind the bat and George Gadbois, of New London, on the bases. They turned in a pretty fair afternoon's work, too. The fans found a few decisions to kick about but in a game like that where the tension was high it's pretty hard to please everybody.

Weisgraber fanned Hewitt twice and Hewitt collected a pair of doubles in his other appearances. About a 50-50 break.

Butsy's leg still showed the effects of the spill he received in the Stonington game. On his home run he could barely negotiate the bases. As he went to bat Couch Brigham asked him if he wanted a runner when he got on base. Butsy said he would not because he was going to hit it right over the scoreboard. And that's what he did.

RUTH HITS SECOND HOMER BUT YANKEES LOSE, 8 TO 7

NEW YORK, April 27—(AP)—Nineteen hits and home runs by Earl Webb and Russell Scarritt, helped the Red Sox defeat the Yankees in the final game of the series, 8 to 7. Babe Ruth's second homer with two on in the ninth just failed to tie the score. A quartet of Yankee pitchers were hit hard by the Sox, while the Yankees could do little with the offerings of Jack Russell in the pinches, till the eighth and ninth.

One Yankee run was the result of an error on Regan's part. He dropped Rhynes' relay throw while Lazzeri scored, the other on three singles after two were out in the seventh. Ruth and Gehrig scored on infield outs in the eighth and Babe hit a homer with two on in the ninth.

Bill Regan, the Sox second baseman, made the fielding feature of the game when he made a diving catch of Hoyt's liner in the fifth inning.

GIANTS EXTEND WINNING STREAK: SWAMPS BROOKLYN

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 27—(AP)—Before one of the largest crowds ever to jam Ebbets field, the New York Giants extended their streak to seven straight victories by burying the Robins under a 10 to 4 score. Fred Fitzsimmons pitched the whole game and kept Brooklyn's ten hits well scattered. Home runs by Herman and Wright and the sensational fielding of Gilbert featured the game from the Brooklyn standpoint.

Clark, who started for Brooklyn, was ineffective and was charged with his fourth defeat of the year. Morrison, who relieved him, was worse. Reese hit a home run into the left field bleachers with the bases full in the ninth to end all arguments.

About 32,000 jammed every inch of seating space in the stands and it was found necessary to close the gates one hour before game time.

PIRATES POUND GUY BUSH FOR VICTORY OVER CHICAGO

CHICAGO, April 27—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates drubbed the Cubs here today 9 to 5, on seventeen hits. Guy Bush was pounded unmercifully during the early innings and gave way to Nelson. About 28,000 onlookers sat through the struggle, which lasted two hours and twenty-five minutes.

LARGE CROWD SAW GRIMES WIN IN DEBUT WITH BRAVES

BOSTON, April 27.—(AP)—Burleigh Grimes, former Pittsburgh spitball pitcher, made a happy debut with the Boston Braves before 23,000 fans today as the Warriors defeated the Philadelphia Nationals 13 to 4. The Braves gathered 17 hits and bunched 12 of their runs in two big innings while Grimes was keeping the Phillies' nine safe blows well scattered.

While Maranville, Richbourg and Maguire led the Braves' barrage, Grimes contributed to the attack a double to left in the sixth which scored two runs. The spitball ace received good support from his mates. Maguire continued his sparkling game in the field.

Manager Bill McKechnie was put off the field in the second inning for protesting that Cy Williams coaching at third interferred with Rhiel's try for a foul fly. Hurst hit a homer in the eighth.

GRIFFITHS-GAGNON FIGHT AT CHICAGO FEATURES NUMEROUS BOUTS THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, April 27—(AP)—Despite the return of boxing to Madison Square Garden this week, Chicago fans will see the bout that promises the most sensational milling.

At the Chicago stadium on Wednesday night, Tuffy Griffiths, Sioux City, Ia., heavyweight, meets Jack Gagnon of Boston in a return match that should give the spectators a real run for their money.

Griffiths was bowling over opponents right and left until he met Gagnon at Philadelphia a few weeks ago, but the Boston heavyweight upset all expert calculations and Griffiths as well, winning on a technical knockout in six rounds. Griffiths probably will be a betting favorite to reverse that verdict in their coming encounter. Stanislaus Loayza of Chile, and Joey Medill, Chicago, lightweight, will provide the action in the ten round semi-final.

Madison Square Garden's re-opening card on Wednesday, offers a return meeting between Maxey Rosenbloom, Harlem Clown, and Larry Johnson, Chicago Negro light heavyweight puncher, as a feature attraction, Johnson gave Rosenbloom an even battle in their first meeting but was disqualified in the sixth round on a foul. The semi-final will bring together Johnny Indrisano, Boston welterweight, and Freddy Fitzgerald of Youngstown, O.

Philadelphia's weekly Monday night card will be featured by a ten rounder between Tommy Loughran, retired light heavyweight champion, and Ernie Schaaf, of Boston. Primo Carnera again is billed on the west coast, meeting Tom Sayers of Detroit at Seattle, Friday night.

Other bouts on the national schedule include: (All 10 rounds unless otherwise noted).

Wednesday — At San Francisco, Charley Hernandez, San Francisco, vs. Paddy Walthier, Chicago, lightweights.

CHICAGO WINS AS CLANCY PERFORMS UNIQUE FEAT

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 27—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns 2 to 1 today, in an extraordinary game that saw Clancy, Chicago first baseman, go through the entire nine innings without an assist or a putout, a feat not recorded in organized baseball for 39 years. McCauley, playing first for the old Washington American association club, performed a similar feat August 6, 1891.

The excellent mound work of Alphonse Thomas and McKain gave Chicago the game. They struck out eight batters and allowed only five hits. Thomas, who started, retired in the seventh inning after injuring his arm. The score:

SENATORS TROUNCE CHAMPS, WALBERG DRIVEN FROM HILL

WASHINGTON, April 27—(AP)—The Senators emphasized their right to the American league lead today by taking the third game in their series with the world champion Athletics by a score of 11 to 6. The A's looked like champions only in the first inning when they pooled hits and errors for three runs.

Sad Sam Jones worked seven innings for the Senators and held his opponents to seven bingles, while his mates were collecting 15 blows off Walberg and Ehmke. Walberg was driven from the mound by a bat barrage in the second. Ehmke fared no better, being pounded for 12 of the 15 blows topped by a Goslin homer in the fourth.

Goslin made three hits out of four trips to the plate. Score:

Never Again

Dear Editor: We do not profess to be swell letter writers but we do think we know a thing or two about boxing and we were two of the fans who were very much interested in seeing the big slugging match that was so highly advertised to take place up in Danielson on a recent evening, between Big Boy Burlap and Rocky Knight of Boston. The advertising was wonderful: a big drawing card for every one interested in seeing two heavyweights in action. Great, a wonderful slugging match, the biggest drawing card of the season as was evidenced by the crowd that packed the town hall that evening. But what a change of opinion when the real fight went on. Where was the slugging? Nothing to it, the biggest farce ever witnessed in any ring around here: just a petting party "Perfectly disgusting" were the words from everybody's lips who had witnessed the big affair.

Now Promotor Peloquin apologizes to the fans for havin put over such a bluff to fool the public but once is enough to get stung. If he can get away with that stuff up in Danielson that is his own good luck, but never again for us. We believe in a man producing what he advertises. You can fool some of the people some of the time but you can't fool all of the people all the time, is an old saying but it is a true one.

TWO INTERESTED FANS.

POMFRET CREWS WINNERS IN SATURDAY'S RACES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 27—With waters slightly billowing and wind velocity ideal, the Pomfret school first 4 oared crew swept across the half mile course at Roseland lake, Saturday afternoon, to nose out the fast Columbia university freshman crew at the finish line, in the rowing season opening. The throng of enthusiastic fans lined along the shore of the Woodstock lake, sent up rousing cheers as the Pomfretians crossed the tape scarcely a half length ahead of the Columbians. Both crews showed excellent form and perfect rhythm in their strokes, propelling their shells at a neck and neck pace. As the three-quarters mark was reached, the Pomfret oarsmen went into the lead and held the pace until the race was ended. Time required to complete the half mile cruise was 3:15 minutes, which fell short of the record established by the Pomfret crew in their victory last year over Exeter.

The Pomfret second crew stroked out a two length victory over the Springfield Trade school in an exciting race that was finished in 3:18 2-5 minutes.

The Pomfret shell shot into the lead when half way across the course and steadily increased the margin with each stroke until they crossed the finish tape a full two lengths ahead of the visitors.

In the third regatta, Pomfret 3rd. crew oasmen won from Springfield sailors by a length and a half to round out three Pomfret victories and preserve the school's unblemished record.

Next week at Roseland Pomfret will meet the crack shellsmen of Exeter in what is believed will be one of the best races of the season. The Exeter crews are reported to be in excellent form and will furnish Pomfret with plenty of keen competition.

RIVERVIEW TRIMS POLISH ROYALS IN EXCITING TILT

Five doubles featured the game between the Polish Royals and Riverview, won by the latter Saturday afternoon at the state hospital diamond by a 6 to 2 score. The local team had practically no practice in preparation for the game, but put up a nice brand of ball. Cummings and Burns contributed four of the six hits garnered by the Royals, each of whom polled a double. The winners scored their runs in the third, fourth and fifth, while the locals scored in the first. According to fans who saw the game, the umpiring was rather ragged and was decidedly in favor of the Riverview team. The score:

Daniel Chubbuck, former Tourtellotte high school, now a student at Connecticut State college, took fifth place in the decathlon at the Penn relays, with 6505.834 points. While at Tourtellotte, Chubbuck played basketball, baseball and was on the track team. He was captain of the basketball quintet for two seasons (1926-27); piloted the baseball nine in 1925 and the track team in 1926-1927.

In the fall of 1927 Chubbuck entered Connecticut and made the freshman football team playing end, and was center on the basketball team. During his sophomore year he made the varsity basketball quintet but broke his ankle during the Holy Cross game and was out for the rest of the season. He was on the track team during his sophomore year and broke two school and state records.

This year he again played center on the varsity basketball team and last Thursday left for Pennsylvania on his maiden appearance in the relays. Chubbuck is the captain-elect of the Connecticut Aggies quintet.

Critics consider Chubbuck a good bet to earn himself a place in the 1932 Olympic games to be held in this country.

ACADEMY RUNNERS FARED WELL IN PENN. RELAYS

The Academy track men are back from the Penn. relays and with the satisfaction of having run two races and run them well. The Wildcat mile and quarter-mile relay teams competed against the pick of the east in this big meet and in the former event finished sixth, just one position out of the honor positions and in the other attempt in fourth place, another one place out of the "money." While they did not win, their work was considered satisfactory by Coach Murphy, when it is remembered that this was the first time the local school was ever entered in this big meet.

The Academy's dual meet season opens Thursday with Chapman Tech at New London and practice sessions will be resumed today pointing for this start.

TWO TOUGH OPPONENTS ON N. F. A. SCHEDULE THIS WEEK

The Academy goes out of eastern Connecticut for its two opponents this week and brings two highly touted clubs to the campus. Wednesday, Gilbert high of Winsted, a newcomer on the schedule, will provide the opposition and Saturday it is Weaver high of Hartford.

The Academy must take these games to continue its drive to regain the state title, lost last year, after two years' ownership, and Coach Brigham plans to have all his regulars in action on both dates. Winsted has started off impressively, among their victories being one over Naugatuck, one of the three teams to beat the Wildcats in 1929. Weaver is rated as one of the best teams in the Hartford sector.

NEW LONDON TEAMS DROP DOWN PEG IN STANDING

The Academy and Windham are now tied for the lead in the eastern Conn.-western Rhode Island league as the result of Saturday's contests when the Academy beat Chapman Tech and Windham stopped Bulkeley. The latter score was 5 to 3. Up to these games the Wildcats had been tied with the two New London schools. The Academy has won its two league clashes and Windham its only start.

TO BROADCAST WESTERN NIGHT GAME OVER N. B. C.

When the opening night baseball game is played at Des Moines, Iowa, park, Friday night between the home team and the Wichita Aviators, Norwich will have much interest in the proceedings. Lefty Dugas, local boy, will be in right field for Wichita attempting to smash one out of the park in this experiment tilt. This will be a regular Western league game.

This game will be broadcast over a nation-wide hook-up of the N. B. C. starting at 10.45, eastern daylight time.

For being one of three players to hit a home run on opening day Dugas received a handsome wrist watch from a Wichita merchant and had his picture in a four column cut in the Wichita paper. Lefty is going great guns, having smashed two homers in the first three games, in addition to a flock of other hits.

Denver Hub Of Universe For Club Women in June

DENVER, April 27—(AP)—In every civilized country in the world women will be buying tickets to Denver in the latter part of May.

By steamboat, train, automobile and airplane some 15,000 will arrive there on or about June 5 for the 10-day convention of the General Federation of Women's clubs.

A small army of hostesses, 8,000 Colorado women, already are laying plans for the reception of the delegates. Many of the finest homes and gardens of Denver will be thrown open for social functions in honor of the visitors.

World peace and better motion pictures will serve as the principal topics of discussion at the business sessions, but play will occupy a large part of the delegates' time.

Women who wish to do so may take an airplane ride over the peaks of the Rockies around Denver, with Mrs. Angela L. Joseph, among the first women to win a commercial pilot's license, at the controls.

A closer view of the Rockies and of Mesa Verde national park will be available by motor and railroad for those who prefer to stay on the ground.

Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the federation, has visited 40 states, Alaska, Cuba, Mexico and the Canal Zone in the 21 months during which she has held office, making many of the trips by airplane.

SOCIAL WORKER AWARDED GAMMA PHI RESEARCH AID

WASHINGTON, April 27—(AP)—Effie Marie Ross, a Washington woman, has won the Gamma Phi Beta social service fellowship awarded by the American Association of University Women for 1930-31.

The fellowship will enable her to continue research in this field at the New York school of social work. For the last six years she has been doing social work at the Walter Reed Red Cross hospital.

Eight fellowships were awarded by the University Women. There were 130 women applied for them.

FINDS SIMPLE COSTUME CAN STILL BE GAY

PARIS, April 27—(AP)—Restaurant ensembles and theater clothes have struck up a style pact.

For dining in a public place or going to the theater on any but a gala night the well-dressed Parisienne has special costumes, discreet in line but not necessarily subdued in color.

The ensemble includes dress, matching wrap, close fitting theater hat or cap, with shoes, handbag and gloves all in the general scheme of the costume.

When dresses are sleeveless long gloves are worn. Long sleeved theater dresses have complementary cap-sleeve wraps, sleeveless jackets or little fur wraps.

The matching hat is the high point, in the style sense, of the ensemble.

One of the chic forms is shining black sequins.

Satin kerchiefs which appear to be loosely knotted on the head but are in reality draped in permanent form are a favored way of matching theater wraps. The satin dress, wrap and turban outfit is youthful and lends itself to a variety of color schemes and combinations.

Lace ensembles, with lace straw hats, complete even to long lace gloves, are a mid-summer theater style sure to have a tremendous success in France.

Theater costumes are slightly shorter than the usual evening dress, lengths varying from 12 inches from the floor to ankle length.

Sweeping dresses are reserved for wear at formal indoor affairs or in her own home.

Trained or trailing dresses are worn to the opera galas sometimes but even at the opera, the most formal theatrical event in Paris, dresses tend to clear the floor, relying on material and cut for formality.

Hatpins On Horizon

PARIS, April 27—(AP)—The return of long hair, hairpins and chignons has brought sailor hats back on the marcel waves.

Farseeing stylists say that hats are inevitably going upward and it is only a matter of time until they give up their present grip on the base of the skull and return to their prewar aloft perch aloft.

GERMAN SCHOOL DANCE COURSE BARS FRIVOLITY

MUNICH, Germany, April 27—(AP)—The peaceful art of ballroom dancing is beginning to make a little scholastic headway.

However, the carefully drawn up rules of conduct for participants in the course are not calculated to encourage dance-madness among the students.

They provide that girl dancing partners for the young men of the course "will be selected, not by the students themselves, but by the rector's office upon recommendation of parents."

Furthermore, there are not to be any wallflowers among the boys, nor among the girls either. Each girl invited to the dances must be ready to dance with the young men in turn, without partiality. The young men on their part are specifically "forbidden" as follows:

To dance consecutively with the same girl instead of girl by girl, as they happen to come.

To take a certain girl to the dance and take her home again; "for the ladies will attend in the company of their mothers."

To use the familiar "Du" in conversation with any of their dance partners, unless she happens to be a relative (in other words, no frivolous humming of "Du, Du, liegts mir am Herzen" during a waltz).

To try to date a girl during a dance for some future social event away from school.

To give or receive gifts from a dancing partner (this probably referring to frat pins and the like).

ENGLISH POLICEWOMEN DRESS IN LATEST STYLE

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, April 27—(AP)—The two British policewomen who have come to Alexandria to join the native police force will be "elegant ladies of fashion" according to La Bourse, a leading Alexandria newspapre.

"It seems that we shall not have the pleasure of seeing them walking in our streets with the red fez of a 'chaouiche' on their hands and wearing, according to the season, either the black or white coat of our noble policemen, with a skirt instead of trousers," said the paper.

"No, the policewomen will be seret. They will wear the same dresses as our elegent ladies of fashion and will only make themselves known when they have to arrest some individual."

WOMEN CENSUS TAKERS INCREASE IN EAST ONLY

WASHINGTON, April 27—(AP)—While the increase in women census takers is a marked feature of the 1930 census in the east, the west coast had them 10 years ago.

Figures in the office of the director of the census show that women census takers will exceed men in the District of Columbia. In Boston there will be half as many women employed as men, though in 1920 there were only 56 women to 561 men.

But in San Francisco the women enumerators outnumbered the men in 1920 in about the same proportion they will in the coming census.

'UNITED STATES' PARTIES ARE NEW ENGLISH GAZE

LONDON, April 27—(AP)—United States parties are becoming quite the vogue in certain London Bohemian circles..

Miss Betty Carstairs, motorboat racing enthusiast, recently was hostess at one of these. The invitations bore maps of the United States on one side, with such American cities as Harlem, Salt Lake City, and Hollywood prominently displayed. New York was indicated as a small suburb of Harlem.

BLACK LACE DRESS ADORNS AUTHORESS

WASHINGTON, April 27—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart, who has for several months been in seclusion writing another novel, has appeared again in society, becomingly gowned as usual.

With a black lace evening dress Mrs. Rinehart wears pearl ear-rings and silver slippers. A large scarlet flower adorns one shoulder.

Kitchens Enter Society

FORDYCE, Ark., April 27—(AP)—Arkansas kitchens are going to have a social standing as well as a culinary standard. A kitchen improvement contest has been started in Dallas county with 83 entrants. Blue ribbons, says the announcement, will be awarded "for the most improvements—both culinary and social."

She's Proud Of Her Age

NEW BERN, N. C., April 27—(AP)—Census enumerators found a woman here who was proud to tell her age. She is Eliza Mayo, negress, 121. The old woman owns a Bible which shows she was born in October, 1808, as a slave in Virginia.

Shantung Hats And Suits

PARIS, April 27—(AP)—Shantung hats to wear with shantung suits of light color are the style put out for mid-summer dressmaker and milliner.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Plain cake gingerbread may be successfully baked in a waffle-iron.

Try serving currant jelly with crab meat. It is a most delicious combination.

To clean the oil mop, use hot water, ammonia and a little washing powder

The vacuum cleaner will quickly draw the dirt from the hot air registers.

Keep pickles in vinegar and olives in brine. If the liquid is poured off they will spoil within a short time.

If a handful of salt is shaken over spinach while washing it, all sand or grit will be easily removed.

Always dampen twine used in tying bundles. It will tie much tighter and will not slip when knots are made.

A delightful flavoring for mincemeat can be made by using the spiced vinegar from cans of peaches. It also makes a tasty sauce for cabinet pudding.

If the custard recipe calls for several eggs, one egg or more may be left out if one-half tablespoon of cornstarch is added for each egg omitted.

To warm over a fruit pudding which has already been steamed, put it into the top part of a double boiler and set it in boiling water for a half-hour.

Plenty of vegetables in the diet are better for the family than tonics, for flagging appetites. Try serving one vegetable dinner a week and at least one green vegetable a day.

When making plain white frosting, add about two tablespoons of cornstarch and use less sugar. This saves sugar, and the frosting will remain thicker and softer. It is especially good for fruit cakes.

GREEN PEAS

If you want your green peas their own perfect color when done, add a little bit of soda to the water in which they are cooked.

DATE FOOD

Cook figs, dates or raisins with your cereal about twice a week and you will notice how the children consume their portions clear to the last spoonful.

SINK

Be careful about throwing refuse in the sink. Bits of food have a way of getting through the strainer and becoming lodged in the trap, where they decay and form acids which ecentually cause a leak in the pipe.

GELATIN AND WATER

Use a pitcher in which to mix the gelatin and water. Then, if the molds are small, it is an easy matter to pour the gelatin liquid into them without waste.

FLAKY CRUST

Pie crust will be flaky and light if a half teaspoonful of vinegar is added to the water with which it is made.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

When the teeth become stained from fruit, remove the stains at once by rubbing them with a little salt.

Stew spring onions in coarse, brown sugar and take a teaspoonful at night. This will not only produce sleep but is very healthful.

One means of preventing colds is to build up a resistance against them by a diet which includes foods rich in vitamin A, such as milk, cream, butter, cheese, leafy vegetables, eggs and cod liver oil.

Apple, potato and most other stains may be removed from the hands by rubbing them with oatmeal moistened with lemon juice or vinegar. Never use soap before removing the stain, or it will be more difficult to get off.

ARTIFICIAL SMILES

The latest beauty hint for women, we are told, is that they should keep on smiling, since smiling braces the face muscles, which prevent a "double chin." Glad as we all are to see a happy expression on the countenances of those round us, it may sometimes become awkward to surmise that wives and daughters are not happy at all, but merely engaged in bracing their face muscles.

Perhaps, however, it is unlikely that artificial smiling will grow common. Most of us, some time or other, have been told that a hearty laugh benefits our digestions. But we do not often start laughing from that motive.

BATHROOM BOTTLES

Lovely bottles for the bathroom now come in a clear light blue with stars in a deeper tone covering the surface.

NOSEGAYS

Those snappy little nosegays of artificial flowers placed exactly in the middle of the back of the coat collar are all very nice and coquettish, provided the neck they adorn is slender. But at the back of a plumpish neck, which is usually accompanied by plumpish shoulders, an ornament of this sort sticks out like a sore thumb. On the right type of neck, however, the nosegay is a pleasantly feminine frippery.

SHOWER BATHS FOR SPRING FEVER

Spring fever may be only a state of mind, but a rousing shower bath for the body is one of its most effective cures. The best time to take one is early in the morning, as soon as you have stepped out of bed. Tuck your hair under a rubber cap, tying a strip of chamois around the edge as an additional protection for your wave.

Unless you are one of those hardy souls who thrive on sudden shocks to the system, let the water run warm for the first few moments. Rub the soap all over the body, working it into a foamy leather before you let the water wash it away.

Now gradually turn the warm water off, increasing the force of the cold stream. As soon as it becomes as cold as you can comfortably bear, shut off the supply and rub yourself vigorously with a rough Turkish towel. If you persist in this treatment regularly each morning, not even the most obstinate case of spring fever will continue to flourish.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Black and white edges up once again toward the top of the fashion list.

The popularity of the lumber jacket has added another style to the list of short jackets.

Short jackets are decidedly new and agree wih the dictates of fashion that insist upon exhibitig the waist line

Some of the suits have clever little bows on cuff and pocket, too, the bows being severely tailored, but none the less very feminine.

Hook handles have risen to a point of fashion in spring umbrellas, although not to the exclusion of other styles.

Rich shadings are chosen for some of the newest suits; dark green skirt and coat, rich green blouse, with a purplish blue tie. The effect is good, as it happens.

The cap type of millinery is exceedingly prominent at the moment. These fit the head closely and have an amusing flap, ending in a long silk tassel which covers the right ear.

DOTTED SWISS BLOUSE POPULAR

Spring can't be far behind since black and brown suits of pique are already making a tentative appearing in the shops. They look delightfully cool fo rthe warm days. A refreshing feature of these suits is the dotted Swiss blouse, in a variety of colors.

COTTON HANDBAG TO MATCH FROCK

Now the cotton goods, which some time ago began a drive to get into the aristocracy—and succeeded — have even reached the hand-bag circle. These new cotton hand-bags are intended as accessories for the cotton dresses, which they match. Sometimes, in their coloring or mounting, they also match the hat and shoes. This is among the happiest thoughts of the spring season.

HATS SWATHED TURKISH STYLE

Madric of Paris has gone completely Turkish with a touch of Arab in a delightful new spring hat. Of blue and gray tweed, patterned like a Turkish rug, the hat swathes itself closely about the head with a long fold hanging at the left side, much like an Arab headdress. Of course, there is a tweed scarf to supplement the hat.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Pin embroidered doilies to the ironing board face down. This method prevents ironing out of shape. If trimmed with lace, iron the linen parts only.

Washing and boiling colored handkerchiefs does not fade them, but hot irons do. If ironing could be dispensed with they would remain bright much longer.

If you fold up the towels, sheets and other household linen when you take it from the line, it will save many minutes and effort in ironing.

Felt hats can be cleaned by adding enough gasoline to a teacup of flour to make a paste. Rub it on with a brush and let it dry. Then brush off with a stiff brush.

PIANO

Keep the piano free of scarfs and covers and also free of vases, bowls or ornaments, advises the American Home. These often set up vibrations and cause strange sounds for which the piano is blamed.

When possible the back of the upright piano should be against an inside wall. Changes in tempature affect the strings and mechanism as well as the finish of its case.

Place it where light from a window may fall on the music rack for daytime playing and have a floor lamp nearby with a simple, adjustable shade for nighttime use. Have the music cabinet or shelves for music conveniently near.

MOTH PROTECTION

Watch out for moths in spring! Wash or clean all woolens, air in sun thoroughly, and pack away everything you do not need inairtight moth bags, in cedar chests or in newspapers, with the ends sealed

GREASE

Men who work around their cars are apt to get grease on their shirt sleeves and sometimes this reaches the table linen. Rub butter on the stains and let them soak in cold water fifteen minutes, wash out with soap and the stain will disappear.

LACY WORSTED

Pastel colored wools, in lacy weaves, make the very smartest sports things for summer. Blouses are rather fancy, too, and they all tuck into the skirt.

TWIN LIGHTS

Just the thing for the dressing table are two small wooden lamps that consist of round wooden balls set upon a square stand. The lamps are cream color and parchment shades softly tinted inside are used with them.

WATCH CASE

The owner of a faithful Ingersoll will be glad to know that it is possible to buy an attractive case for it of tooled leather in a pastel shade, so that the strictly utilitarian look is completely disguised.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Fashionable women in London, England, sometimes pay as much as $2,500 a year to their hairdressers.

The Sorptimist, a women's club of London, England, limits its membbership to one outstanding woman of each profession or business.

In England policewomen perform valuable social services and patrol streets, but have not the power to arrest.

All married women without dependents now employed by the Manitoba provincial government are being forced to quit their jobs in order to relieve the present unemployment situation.

Miss Norma M. Farnham, 22-year-old school teacher, is the first woman to be ordained and to serve as a Baptist minister in Rhode Island. For the past year, she has delivered the morning sermon in a church in Usquepaugh, while in the evening her time was devoted to a congregation in West Kingston.

ANTIQUE EFFECT

That old mahogany table or chair you have in your attic may be made a desirable addition to your home with only a slight amount of labor after you have once removed the old varnish. If you wish an antique effect in brown, you may color the wood with burnt umber and burnt sienna ground in oil. When this is dry, apply one coat of orange shellac, rub down the surface and finish with liquid wax to which has been added a little carbonate of zinc. If a graver effect is desired, a little drop of black added to the wax will give it.

SMALLER GAS BILLS

To keep down the gas bill, always shee that the bottoms of kettles and saucepans are clean. Less gas is then required to heat their contents. Keep gas burners clean, too, by using a stiff, clean brush once a week.

USE OF SEATS AND CUPBOARDS

Restraint Produces Charm

By Elsie Drew Kennedy

The beauty and personality of a home decorated in the modern manner very often depends upon unusual architectural qualities.

The illustration shows one of those little corners that one meets so often in the modern apartment in rooms between rooms or in foyers Every bit of available space has been brought into play in a simple and charming manner by the use of a wide seat and triangular cupboards built especially to emphasize the planes of the walls.

The cupboards give the necessary squared effect to the end of the room and provide an excellent place to store the family linen or bric-a-brac. They are made of Mexican mahogany in a deep rich shade and are polished to glow softly. There is a luxurious feeling of comfort in the generous lines of the seat itself with its cushiony depths and spring edges.

The focal point of the room is the lovely, rhythmic modern water color that hangs at eye level over the seat. It is done in gay blues and greens and purplish red. Its beauty of color suggested the rich tone of the mahogany and the soft blue green tone of the new rayon velvet with a deep lustrous pile. A deeper shade of greyed blue-green is used for the carpet.

As the room is an inner room, like most of its type, it has very little natural light, and therefore the walls are painted a deep ivory and take on a yellow glow from the soft light that spreads over them and that seems to come from nowhere. This pleasant illusion is achieved by the large square of frosted glass which conceals the ceiling lights. As the deep, restful seat very evidently suggests itself as a comfortable place for reading, a lamp is placed conveniently on one of the cupboards for further illumination. The base of the lamp is of blue pottery and the pleated shade is of rose, printed with modern designs in blue and green. A bright bubble of a rose glass bowl repeats a splash of color on the other cupboard. It is filled with artificial flowers in brilliant colors and in such conventionalized design that they make not the slightest effort to reproduce nature, but are extremely decorative. The tiny prints that are used on the diagonal planes of the wall echo the color scheme and compose beautifully with the large painting. o other decoration is used, for much of the charm of the room lies in its restraint. The very simplicity of ornamentation and the beauty of color is a perfect reflection of the sophistication of the owner.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Presents and Bribes

There is all the difference in the world between saying to your child "I'll buy dou something very nice, if you are a good boy," and presenting him unexpectedly with a toy as an expression of your appreciation of his efforts to be good.

The first way of doing things is always and unquestionably bad. The second may occasionally be quite in order, especially with young child.

Usually, however, presents ought to have nothing to do with conduct. They should be free gifts, with no strings tied to them.

Children should have toys and other pleasant things, because the right to happiness is one of the rights of childhood.

Presents and privileges of all sorts should come to them, not as a reward for good conduct, but as an expression of friendly feeling and appreciation from the giver.

It is the child who has been bribed in the past, who one day answers his mother's request that he perform some perfectly usual task with the query, "And what will you give me if I do?"

With such a child the damage has been done, and it will take a change of attitude upon the part of the parent before a better type of response from the child may be looked for.

Those of us who do not fall into the error of giving children presents as payments or bribes sometimes fall into another, equally hurtful.

We give them gifts simply because we enjoy giving, and we give far too richly and far too profusely, teaching the child to expect that love shall thus always be expressed in terms of material benefit to him.

Nebraska Gold Star Women On First Voyage To Europe

Among Nebraska gold-star mothers and widows who will be first to visit graves of American soldiers in France are Mrs. Thomas E. Wood (left) who lost a son, and Mrs. Sophie Lisenbee, whose husband was killed in action.

OMAHA, Neb., April 27—(AP)—Thirty-seven Nebraska mothers and widows will sail for France May 7, the first of the 6,000 gold star wearers whom the government will take across as its guests.

Three years will be required for all to make the trip to battlefields and cemeteries, hospital sites and places where concentration camps were located—sacred soil to these who lost sons and husbands in the World war.

Nebraska has 125 women who have sons or husbands buried in foreign cemeteries. Of these, 119 are mothers, five are widows and one is a step-mother.

Almost half of the eligible women did not care to make the trip. Many felt they were too old; others thought a visit to the graves of their dead would revive grief somewhat alleviated by time.

Of those who sail next month, two are widows, 35 are mothers.

The only Nebraska mother who lost more than one relative, Mrs. Anna Weyerts of Gurley, whose two sons, Tony and Henry, are buried in the Meuse-Argonne cemetery, decided against making the trip.

In the party will be Mrs. Thomas E. Wood of Omaha, whose son sleeps in Suresnes cemetery. He was killed while serving with a searchlight crew, a few months after he had been graduated from a Washington electrical school.

Mrs. Mary Peck of Omaha, despite her 70 years, will make the trip to a grave in which lies her son, killed eight days before the Armistice.

Mrs. Sophia Lisenbee of Omaha is one of the war widows in the party. Her husband, a private in the 137th infantry, died in the Argonne, and there he sleeps in the Meuse-Argonne cemetery.

The second delegation of war mothers and widows will go from Iowa on May 21.

Turkey Prefers Plump Girls

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 27—(AP)—The reducing fad is not yet felt seriously in Turkey. Mubedjil Hanim, "Miss Turkey" of 1930, weighs 168 pounds, with 110-pound Feriha Tevfik Hanim achieving only second place.

GAINS OF SEASONAL NATURE WERE NOTED IN BUSINESS WORLD LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, April 27—(AP)—Business continued to show slight signs of improvement last week, although most gains were of a seasonal nature. Some disappointment has been manifest that the spring upturn has not shown more vitality but confidence in the fundamental soundness of conditions remains unimpaired and a return to normal within a few months is widely forecast.

Steel mill activity showed a little improvement and is now estimated at above 80 per cent of rated capacity for the entire industry. President Farrell of U. S. Steel, told stockholders at their annual meeting that he looked for a good average year.

Seasonal stepping up of automobile production, particularly by the small car manufacturers has been responsible for the most improvement in steel operations but gas and oil pipe construction, farm implement manufacturing and heavy construction generally are showing increasing activity. Non ferrous metals suffered from sagging prices. The cut in copper prices from 18 to 14 cents a pound has helped foreign buying a little, but domestic consumers continued to hold off in expectation of further cuts, encouraged by rumors that a few sales had been made at 13½ cents.

Favorable seasonal gains were shown in bank clearings and freight car loadings figures. Total loadings of revenue of approximately 911,006 cars as reported for the week ended April 12, was the largest of the year. While showing a reduction of about sixty thousand from the like week of 1929 it came close to the total for that week in 1928. It was the lowest, however, since 1924.

With the impetus of Easter out of the way, both wholesale and retail trade were inclined to slacken. Cold weather in the northern and eastern portions of the country, however, was undoubtedly a contributing factor.

The commodity markets were again somewhat reactionary. May wheat was heavily liquidated at Chicago, reaching new low levels for the season. More favorable weather reported caused considerable selling of the more distant positions.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES.

Sad April.

I love sweet April for her trembling tears,
So sad is she to wake and find
The world not yet grown kind.
What anguished hearts still beat with haunting fears!
What hateful terrors fill the mind
Of evils scarce defined!

Weep, weep, still weep, sad April, do not smile
Through tears, your wonted, pretty way,
Until a better day.
A little while, Oh! just a little while,
And Love's new blooms shall come to say;
Then cease your smile's delay!

Nature's Songs.

Wind-song and sea-song
Now rising, now falling,
Away from Earth's pain
My spirit are calling.

Bird-song and bee-song
Now sweet and now strong
Call me back to Earth's life,
Where true hearts belong.
—Helen A. Clarke.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Animals play much as children do, especially dogs and cats. It is interesting to watch porpoises playing with each other in the water as they throw themselves up above the surface and then dive down again. They chase each other as dogs or cats do in their play.

Some birds are very lively in their sports and the same is true of some insects. The ants, industrious as they are, have their times for play. They run races, they wrestle, they run one after another and dodge behind stalks of grass, just as boys dodge behind trees ond posts.

See that spider on his web! He is watching for flies. The mind in his little brain thinks of every fly that comes buzzing along, and is anxious that it should get its legs entangled in the snares that he has woven. How glad he feels when he sees one caught by these snares! And if he fears that they are not strong enough to hold the fly he runs and quickly weaves more threads about him.

In the same way do all animals that catch their prey think very busily while they are so engaged.

Animals think much while building their dwellings. The bird searches for what it can use in building its nest, and in doing this it thinks. The beavers think as they build their dams and their houses. They think in getting their materials and also in arranging them and in plastering them together with mud.

Some spiders build houses which could scarcely have been made except by some intelligent creature. The tarantula, a kind of spider, whose bite is very poisonous, builds its house in a wonderful manner. It first digs a hole in the ground, a d then lines it by spinning a pure white satin-like silk over the interior, making the sides an unbroken tube of silk. When the underground room or celler is finished the spider proceeds to pile up bits of wood above it, and he places them just as boys do in building log houses, by laying them at right angles. Could any creature do this kind of work without thinking?

As animals think they learn. Some learn more than others. The parrot learns to talk, though it is in some respects quite stupid. The mocking bird learns to imitate many different sounds. The horse is not long learning a number of things connected with the work which he has to do.

A horse belonging to a London woman was cunning enough to sham lameness every time she wanted to drive, until one day the woman discovered the trick and of course put a stop to it.

Cattle and pigs are just as cunning once they learn.

These things never come by instinct.

The shepherd dog does not know as much as some dogs do about most things, and yet he understands very well how to take care of sheep.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

Rescued!

Dear Uncle Jed: There lay on the coast of southern Italy a little village by the name of Aegon which was situated at the foot of a volcano, namely Mt. Crato.

It was on a beautiful June day just at sunset. It had been scorching during the previous hours of the day, and now, the natives were lounging about on the village streets, thankful for the cool gentle breeze which had blown up, with the last rays of the setting sun.

There came rushing down the mount's steep side two young boys between the ages of 17 and 20, wearing clothing of light weight material and carrying climbing sticks. When they reached the village they were, of course, out of breath, but they managed to gasp out breathlessly, "The volcano, it rumbles!" To the natives this was quite enough, for this meant that within a short period of time piles of boiling lava would pour over the sides of this Mount Crato and destroy everything in its path.

The people of the village depended chiefly upon passing vessels for their provisions and luckily one was due that day and had not as yet arrived. If it should be late; but no, there it was steaming in. The natives gathered up what few belongings they could and rushed down to the steamer warning those aboard of the fast approaching calamity and before you could say "Jack Robinson" the steamer was rapidly moving from the now loudly rumbling volcano. Those people's lives were saved and the two boys namely, Fred and Nick, were the heroes of the day.

My Pet Dog

My Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy reading my story about my pet dog. My dog's birthday will be in May, the same month as mine. I am going to make him a surprise, getting him a new collar, also his license. He will be a year old. He is brown in color, that is how he got his name Brownie. He often goes out into the road playing with his playmates. I whistle for him and he comes running up to me as fast as he can, and don't go there again.

In The Country

Dear Uncle Jed: My first story proved a [illegible] story and I hope this one will [illegible] ough my second one was a complete failure as I know.

Last summer my cousin wrote to mother asking if I could spend two weeks with her in the country. Mother said I could go, though she thought I would make too much trouble. I promised her I would be as good as gold all the time, so mother let me write the answer, saying I could go and would arrive on Tuesday.

Mary, a great friend of mine lives near Cousin Rose and when she heard from me when I wrote to let her know I was coming she was so excited she could hardly wait. I told her to be ready for some fun so that we wouldn't lose any time. I hadn't been there since last summer and I was sure there would be many new things to see on the farm.

I went to bed early Monday and slept as sound as a top. It didn't seem but a few minutes before mother woke me up and said the car was waiting to take me to Cousin Rose's.

At quarter of eight we started and arrived at the farm at eight.

We are always busy on the farm and the days don't last long enough to suit me. Mother says I rip more dresses in two weeks than a whole orphan asylum.

Mary Philips and I explored the entire farm in the two weeks I was there. First we explored the yard around the house where the chickens and geese were kept and then the barn. It rained while there, but I didn't care for I played in the hay loft. The last week was spent in the orchard and barn. I was very sorry when it was time to come home, but I had such a lovely time that I promised to come again.

A Runaway

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pet rabbit. I have a pet rabbit I am very fond of.

One day I gave my pet rabbit some grass, and as I opened the door he took one leap and jumped. My brother and sister and I ran after the rabbit. At last we caught him and put him back. Another day he ran away again. He went in the wonderful green grass, which the rabbits are very fond of. Father came home and almost ran over him with the wagon, but he saw him just in time.

A Day At The Beach

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide Awakes. I hope you will enjoy reading my story. I am going to tell you about the day at the beach. We left early Saturday morning and got there at 9.45 o'clock. We then went in swimming and then ate our lunch. We then went on the chute-the-chute and then at 12 o'clock ate our lunch again and went on the hobby horses. Then we started for home happy and content.

Building A Seaplane

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you. I am an ardent reader of the Wide Awake Circle. During the Easter vacation I've been building a seaplane. I have given it a trial run on a nearby river. I plan to use the pusher type of propeller to increase the speed. Oh, boy! I'm anxious to see my seaplane cut the waves and the breezes.

Making Paper Beads

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy reading my story about "How to make paper bead door curtains. All you need to make a pair of these paper bead door curtains are a roll of wallpaper, a pencil, a ruler, a pair of scissors and a cardboard.

First you measure the cardboard, 12 inches long and three inches wide. This you will have as a pattern to measure your paper beads. You take this paper pattern and measure 356 of these patterns on the wallpaper. Then you take and cut them all out. After cutting them take a pattern and roll by taking the end three inches wide and rolling till it is very tight, as tight as you can do it. This will make a paper bead. Continue doing this until you have rolled the 356 patterns. After this take a paint brush, a small one, and many colors of paints and paint each bead and let it dry for a week at least.

I pointed my pair of curtains like this: 66 beads light green; 66 beads light red; 44 gold; 44 brown; 22 silver; 22 white; 22 orange; 22 yellow. Then you can string them in any way or design you wish to. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy making these curtains. I have made three pairs.

A Bird's Nest

Dear Uncle Jed: I saw my sister writing to you so I thought I would like to write to you about my plum tree. My plum tree is growing right under my bedroom window and south of our dining room. As it started to bloom earlier this spring, I run every day to see how many flowers come out. I noticed this morning something new beside the blossoms and the tree looked happier, it seemed to me. Why, right within my hands' reach was a foundation of a bird's nest. How I jumped for joy. Nobody had to come and call me to get up. Later in the summer I'll write and tell you and the Wide Awakes about the nest and what will come out of it.

EDWARD PUDLO, Age 9.

My Rabbits

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to you before and now I'm putting in a few words about my rabbits. I call them the comic section rabbits because they are named after characters in the comic section. Their chief ambition is to run away for a reason I don't know. When they are given food they sniff suspiciously at it, then gobble it down at a mile a minute rate.

A Vegetarian Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sure you would like to hear about a vegetarian cat. She is my pet. But she will eat all kinds of vegetables. I guess she likes salad just as good as milk. She will eat lettuce, celery, beans and tomatoes. She likes to play. One night she woke me up by rolling an empty spool around the floor. Then she jumped on the foot of the bed and slept there the rest of the night.

My Fishing Trip

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide Awakes. In the story I am telling you about my first fishing trip this year.

Early one morning, when I ate my breakfast I decided to go fishing. After digging my bait, then swinging my fishing pole over my shoulder I started for the brook. Before I knew it I was down by the brook with my line in the water waiting for a bite. A sudden jerk made me pull my line to the shore. To my surprise a beautiful trout was laying on the grass near by. This was the first fish I had caught this year. I was very happy indeed as I made my way through the bushes homeward.

My Surprise

Dear Uncle Jed: I am interested in the Wide Awake circle and want to tell you about my surprise. I was going to the barn to see my papa milk the cows, when I saw a strange cat. He was afraid of me at first and when I tried to pick him up in my arms he struggled and got away from me. But I thought of a better way to make friends with him. I ran into the house to get a dish of milk and gave it to him. He was hungry and came for it. As he drank the milk I patted his soft fur. He is one of my best pets now and I like to play with him.

A Flower Hunt

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide Awakes. I hope you all will enjoy my story. Yesterday my friend and I went for a flower hunt. Some of the flowers found were violets, Mayflower, fivefingers and others. I was surprised to see so many flowers out at this time of the year. Then my friend and I decided to go home. We had a very nice time.

My Pet Dog.

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pet dog. She is all tan with a white spot. One day I was on a raft on our little pond and I told my friend to hold the dog so that she would not come out too. But he let the dog go and she came out and tipped the raft over and let me tell you I was wet. Her name is Tiny. She loves to play with a ball. She can jump over anything.

ROBERT COUTU, Age 12.

Japanese People.

Dear Uncle Jed: We have studied about the Japanese and I am going to tell you about them. They have straight black hair and yellow skin. On Boy's day, which comes May 17th, the boys fly kites, shaped like fishes on bambo poles. The Girl's day comes on May 15th. On that day they play with their dolls and toys.

Now I will tell you something about the Japanese schools. They sit on mats and read from the book. They read down and we read across. When the pupils don't mind they get a whipping from the teacher.

I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story.

Bowser Guarded the Baby

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy reading my story that I have thought up.

It was a warm, sunny day and everything was peaceful and quiet. A large farmhouse stood near the edge of a beautiful little village. There was a wide porch, on one side of the house with lovely red roses growing by its side. Bowser, the dog, was asleep on the porch, as he was tired from running around in the fields. Near by was a baby girl who was playing in a pen. She had many toys to keep her busy. The farmer told Bowser, who was a good faithful dog, that he must watch baby, while they all went to work in the fields, except grandmother, who was in the house getting dinner ready. While grandmother was inside, a man opened the gate and slowly tip-toed up the walk. His shoes were old and dusty, and his clothes were in rags. As he neared the porch, Bowser opened his eyes and growled. The baby became frightened and began to cry. The grandmother heard the noise and came running out of the house. She saw the ragged man outside. "What is it you want, my poor man?" she asked.

"I am very hungry," said the man. "I had nothing to eat all day." "Well, come in the house, and I will give you something to eat," said grandma.

"Thank you very much," said the man and he went away feeling very happy.

Riding To A Cross

"Rejoice greatly, O Daughter of Zion; behold thy king cometh unto thee"

Unto the city of the King
There cometh now His greater Son—
O Zion's daughter shout and sing,
'Tis He, the long expected One.

He Whom the prophets did foretell,
Now lowly rideth here today.
Hosannas loud in chorus swell,
Whil'st palms and garments strew His way.

Behold, He rideth on to die,
And this bestrewn, triumphal road
But leadeth to a cross raised high
Where He for us shall bear sin's load.

O Saviour, hear the prayer we bring,
That we may on Thy strength rely—
Lest we who now "Hosanna" sing,
Should one day join in "Crucify."

—By Priscilla E. Hedley, in Boston Transcript.

By The Sea

The curved strand of cool gray sand
Lies like a sickle by the sea;
The tide is low, but, soft and slow,
Is creeping higher up the lea.

The beach-birds fleet, with twinkling feet,
Hurry and scurry to and fro;
And sip, and chat of this and that
Which you and I may never know.

The runlets gay, that haste away,
To meet each snowy-bosomed crest,
Enrich the shore with fleeting store
Of art-defying arabesque.

Each higher wave doth touch and lave
A million pebbles smooth and bright:
Straightway they grow a beauteous show,
With hues unknown before bedight.

—John White Chadwick.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Who is Thomas Edison, anyway?"
"He's the man who invented the phonograph to keep us awake so we would stay up all night and use his electric lights."—Boston Transcript.

Ossip—Is Mrs. Nayber the modern kind of a woman who sings in the rain?

Gossip—No, she's the old-fashioned kind who reigns in the sink.—The Pathfinder.

Beggar—Spare me a copper, sir.

Business Man—I haven't time now—call again tomorrow.

Beggar—The impudence, asking for credit in these hard times.—Faun.

A man has run away from his wife eleven times. It is thought that he is under the impression that if be completes the twelfth time he automatically becomes his own property.—London Opinion.

Policeman (to motorist who nearly collided)—Don't you know that you should always give half of the road to a woman driver?

Motorist—I always do, when I find out which half of the road she wants.—Exchange.

"The rapidly increasing divorce rate," remarked the wit, "indicates that America is indeed becoming the land of the free."

"Yes," replied the prosaic friend, "but the continued marriage rate suggests that it is still the home of the brave."—Epworth Herald.

A loud-voiced orator was holding forth at the street corner when he was interrupted by one of the audience. "Come down, old man, an' talk sense. You're nothin' but a blitherin' idiot."

"Be quiet," said a speaker; "you're drunk!"

"I know," said the man, "but I shall be sober in the mornin', and you'll still be an idiot!—Exchange.

KALEIDOSCOPE

While fearfully throwing his flash light from side to side "to make sure that no murderer was lurking among the trees," and to light the path for his wife a Vienna bank employe, returning home late in the evening from an outing in the Cobenzl section of the Vienna forests, suddenly saw something glitter near the path and picked up a small diamond brooch for which a reward of $500 had been offered.

A unique "premiere" is scheduled for the coming operatic season at Halle, Saxony. It is that of Jacques Offenbach's opera "Mariella," the manuscript of which had mysteriously disappeared before it was copied or printed. Recently, by a mere chance, the manuscript has been discovered and now "Mariella" will have its "first night" over fifty years after it was written and long after the composer's death.

Styles of clothes, mannerisms of speech and attitudes in debate of members of parliament have all elicited comment by observing members of the house. The latest comment has been about the strange assortment of front bench pencils. Stanley Baldwin, former Conservative premier, favors a small stub, for which he fumbles in a waistcoat pocket. Sir Philip Conliffe-Lister always takes his seat with a new, shiny pencil of a bright color in his pocket. Winston Churchill uses a propelling pencil and takes notes on envelopes instead of note paper.

Prison sentences totaling seventy-five years have not made Alphonse Bruneau, of Rouen, France, lose his good humor. Bruneau, who is serving one of his many sentences, has filed suit against the municipality of Rouen for 100 francs a day damages for two years of alleged false imprisonment. Bruneau does not contend that his other sentences are illegal, but he does insist he was imprisoned for two years for a crime he did not commit. He alleges he was falsely imprisoned for the theft of twelve bicycles which he really did not steal. If Bruneau wins his suit he will have 73,000 francs to spend, but no place to spend them because he is still in prison.

SPECIAL HYMN ON ANNIVERSARY OF MONTAUK AV. CHURCH NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 27—This was a day of anniversaries for the Montauk Avenue Baptist church. Fifteen years ago the handsome church at the corner of Alger street and Montauk avenue was erected. That was the beginning of its great prosperity, though for ninety years the church had been organized. Twenty-five years ago the old wooden church building at the head of Golden street, on Union, was abandoned and the congregation first worshipped on Montauk avenue. It has, in that time had several pastors, and now has Rev. R. W. Ferguson, a zealous worker determined to accomplish things for his church. This forenoon four members were received into the church. Rev. E. E. Gates, secretary of the Baptist state convention, of Hartford, and Rev. H. B. Sloat, assistant secretary, were present to participate in the services, which were interesting to the large congregation. This afternoon, service were held, with Rev. Byron U. Hatfield of Westerly, a former pastor of the church and Rev. C. F. Eldredge of Niantic officiating. At this service the mortgage on the church was burned as it had been paid and the church was out of debt, with a balance in the treasury of $169. Three years ago, when Rev. Mr. Ferguson assumed the pastorate the debt was $5,600. The membership of the church is without earners of large salaries and that young people are in the majority so, the accomplishment financially is highly commendable. The music for the day was by the church orchestra and choir. A hymn, written and set to music by Prof. Paul F. Laubenstein and dedicated to the church was sung. Prof. Laubenstein, who is of the faculty of Connecticut college, has named church way a gift from John Coe of the composition "Montauk," as a tribute to the church. The bell on the Meriden. It called the people to the services today.

EASY TO SECURE $345 FROM THE J. D. AVERY SAFE

A robbery was perpetrated between 5 o'clock Friday afternoon and 8 o'clock Saturday morning at the automobile sales station of J. D. Avery, Inc., 342 Williams street. When the station was opened for business Saturday it was discovered that $345 was missing from the safe. From investigation by Sergeant Nelson it is apparent that the robbery is another of the type known as "inside" jobs. The safe is of an old-fashioned type, locked by means of a key. The key is kept in the cash register, which stands upon the safe and access to the former is entrusted to six employes of the station. Each employe, however, has a key letter, in order to open the register. The key letter which was used in order to obtain the key to the safe was "E" and to open the register this letter was used twice. The register was opened another time by the rightful employe using this letter, who advanced himself $5, which act he admits. Because of the location of the register the drawer was opened twice by the thief, one to get the key to the safe and again to return it. The money was removed from a drawer, but checks found there were not disturbed. Neither was $20 in cash in the register, or an envelope containing about $100. There is no evidence to show that entrance was forced for all doors and windows, excepting one, were locked. A window found unlocked could not have admitted the thief for a layer of dust on the sill was not disturbed by finger marks or the crook's body.

Carl Albano, married and Maurice Gilmore and Lionel Craddock, youths, were charged with breach of the peace upon complaint of Mrs. J. H. Marshall, 24 Hamilton avenue, Groton. The charge against Albano and Craddock was nolled, but Gilmore was fined $25 and costs because testimony revealed it was apparent that Gilmore was guilty of the offense which caused the arrest of the trio. The youths were driving about the streets at 1 o'clock Friday morning and on Bank street encountered Mrs. Marshall, who was driving her auto. The car of the youths was so operated as to cause Mrs. Marshall to stop her machine and she was subjected to abuse and obscene language. Mrs. Marshall made complaint at headquarters and the boys were arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey.

YOUNG AUTO THIEVES TO BE IN COURT TODAY

In a gang of youthful automobile thieves, who were rounded up Friday night by the police, it is believed that the wholesale theft of cars will have ended at least for the present. The youths have confessed to stealing at least ten automobiles within a few weeks. When in the police court Saturday they were charged with taking automobiles without the permission of the owners, their cases were continued to Monday and all furnished a surety on their respective bonds of $500. Friday night Samuel Harris, 827 Ocean avenue, parked his Nash sedan on Reed street and when he returned, the car had been stolen. Harris reported the theft at police headquarters and Sergeant Samuel Hick and Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey made a tour of the East New London section. In passing through Winthrop street, the stolen auto of Harris was found beside the highway near Mill street. The radiator was hot, showing that the car had been abandoned but a short time. An automobile was observed parked nearby and its occupants were questioned by the officers. They stated that three young men had alighted from the stolen auto but a few minutes before and one of the youths had entered a house, which was pointed out to the officers. Going to the house William Fenn, one of the youths, was questioned, and finally admitted driving the auto from Reed street. He implicated Donald Toohey and Philip Santangelo for they had also been in the auto and entered it when it was stolen. Toohey and Santangelo were rounded up and the trio locked up at police headquarters. Within ten days two stolen autos were found abandoned on Cole and Lewis street, which streets are within a block of where Harris' auto was found.

SUB-BASE LIEUTENANT PAYS $50 FOR INDECENCY

Lieut. G. R. Crowther, submarine base, was in court Saturday charged with indecent exposure and was fined $50 and costs. The officer, to all visible appearances, was not intoxicated when arrested, which made his conduct all the more serious. Crowther went to Williams Memorial park about 6 o'clock Friday evening, an hour when young women were returning to their homes from employment. Crowther walking in an opposite direction, would open his coat and expose himself as the women were about to pass. One of the women happened to be Miss Evelyn McGee, 7 Griswold court, and she lost no time in making complaint at police headquarters. Officer Harry Watterson was sent to the park and finding Crowther still there, he was arrested, for he was identified as the man complained against.

Skin Kept Clear By New Laxative..

Now that doctors know how often pimples, blemishes, etc., come from clogged up systems there is really no excuse for having a bad complexion. Just do what men and women everywhere are doing and keep the system clean with Feen-a-mint, the modern chewing gum laxative.

This pleasant new corrective for constipation is just the thing to use for the ailments that come from harmful intestinal bacteria" such as coated tongue, bad breath, or unusual tired feeling. When you notice the first symptom of these conditions take one of these tiny white Feen-a-mint tablets.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness if its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity so necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store. —Adv.

WESTERLY

FIRE EARLY ON SUNDAY AND ONE IN AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 27—At 2:20 a. m. Sunday the Pawcatuck fire alarm was sounded from Box No. 54, West Broad and Morgan streets for a fire in the basement of the three apartment house at 3 Williams street, Pawcatuck, a large frame house owned and occupied by Alvin B. Kenyon and family, Michael Faris and Mrs. Mason and sister. Miss Sturtevant, teacher of French at the Westerly high school. Chief Joseph Purtill, Captain Charles Connors and a large number of firemen of Pawcatuck Co. No. 1 with motor apparatus responded and found smoke pouring from all floors of the house. Two of the cellar windows of the house were broken in and firemen found the floor beams charred and burning from what was reported as a short circuit between annunciator wires and an electric circuit, through which the woodwork caught fire. A line of fire hose was laid from a West Broad street hydrant and the booster tank hose was used to advantage by the firemen in putting out the blazing floor beams. The damage was confined chiefly to smoke and water. The firemen remained to clear the upper apartment of smoke and to be sure that no other fires had started from the wiring. Recall sounded at 3:10 a. m.

At 4:20 p. m. Sunday an out of the Westerly fire district alarm, No. 82 was sounded on the Westerly fire whistle for a brush and grass fire beyond the Waite farm, the Westerly-Bradford state highway and between the road and the tracks of the New Haven road. The wind swept the blaze toward Bradford and threatened houses. Chief George E. Egger with the Seagraves motor pumper and men answered the call and did not return to Westerly until after 6 p. m.

Shortly before 9 p. m. Saturday the Ahrens-Fox motor pumper with assistant engineers and firemen was run out for a telephone call for a fire which had started from the chimney of the house formerly owned by the late Henry C. Green, now owned by Michael D. G. Papalia. The house is occupied by the families of J. M. Toth and Frederick Brucker. The blaze was reported as caused by paper being lighted in a stove in the lower apartment which came through an opening in the chimney in the apartment above. The house was filled with smoke and on the arrival of the firemen a line of booster tank hose was taken in the front door and the contents directed into the chimney. Mr. Papalia, the owner, and Fire Chief George E. Egger, in the business section of the town, from the fact that the call came by telephone, knew nothing of the fire until the next day.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

The ease with which Norma Shearer steps from one characterization to another of wide departure will never cease to be a wonder to her fans.

When she played in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," it was something of a startling revelation. Then she went right into "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" and won new laurels.

Now, in "Their Own Desire," which opened last night at the Breed theatre, Miss Shearer effects another equally surprising character transition, that of a very modern daughter who knows what she wants and how to get it. It is not a flaming flapper role, but rather a study of an intelligent young woman of today.

One of the unusual photographic effects is the big lakeside dancing scene in which the entire action on the ballroom floor is mirrored in the water. Another spectacular camera picture is the night fireworks celebration in which a gigantic pyrotechnical display is featured.

Robert Montgomery plays the leading masculine role in the new Shearer film with the supporting cast including Lewis Stone, Belle Bennett, Helene Millard, Cecile Cunningham and Mary Doran.

Tonight every lady attending the Breed will receive free a piece of beautiful sea green pearl vanity ware.

Broadway Theatre

Rent due? Mother-in-law visiting? Toothache? Fish won't bite? Brew went sour? Forget it! See William (Bill) Haines, and his partner in hilarity, Marie Dressler, in "The Girl Said No"! and you'll forget all your troubles, and be just as happy as the crowds who giggled and laughed at his antics at the Saturday-Sunday opening. Harking back to the days when Haines was "Brown of Harvard," he is the same joyous, mischievous young devil with the world by the tail, and a downhill pull, and he renews his old feud with Francis X Bushman, Jr., in this case over the heart of a blonde young menace, lovely Leila Hyams, who is the girl that said "No!" and almost meant it until "Wild Bill" stole her from the very altar, wedding gown and all, in the groom's car(!) and heard her faintly whisper "yes!" What a picture! Marie Dressler has the howl of her career, and Haines is at his very best. A picture you must see, and then bid goodbye to doctors, for it'll cure all your ills! On the same bill Water Hagen and Leo Diegel, the world's champion golfers, have a smashingly funny comedy of the greens entitled "Match Play," in which the world's worst foursome almost wrecks a golf course and the surrounding countryside. Every Norwich golfer, amateur, "dub," or "pro" should see this comedy feature, and immediately lower their best score—for laughing! The greatly augmented "Our Gang" has a thrilling experience in "Shivering Shakespeare," and Charles K. Harris, the immortal song writer, makes a personal and unexpected screen appearance in the screening of the "bouncing ball" song, "After the Ball," probably the best known melody of bygone years. The latest Paramount Sound news shows views of last week's terrible prison fire, the end of the international naval parley, and the arrival of "the Lindys" in New York after their record-breaking trans-U. S. flight.

Palace Theatre

Harry Richman, former star of George White's Scandals, is now strutting his stuff at the Palace theatre where the Warner Brothers are presenting "Puttin' on the Ritz," the snappiest, peppiest, merriest musical romance ever screened. Among the other members of the cast are: Joan Bennett, James Gleason, Aileen Pringle and Lilyan Tashman.

Irving Berlin has written several captivating melodies for the production many of which are well known to radio listeners. Perhaps the most popular of these song hits are: "With You," "There's Danger in Your Eyes Cherie," "Puttin' on the Ritz," and "Singing a Vagabond Song."

The story of "Puttin' on the Ritz" is not unlike the story of Harry Richman's own career. As Harry Raymond, a song-plugger in a publishing house, his rise from obscurity to fame as he becomes Broadway's favorite night club cut-out and song bird is entertainingly shown in this picture.

This is no sudden rise, however, and the sunshine and laughter, pathos and heartbreak, love and happiness of a small trouper in a small act with three other small troupers seems to be the fate of Harry until he is given a chance to play on Broadway.

"Puttin' on the Ritz" is part of the spring festival program now being held in all Warner Brothers' theatres. At this time Warner Brothers will set the standard for the pictures which will be shown in all of their theatres during the coming year.

On Wednesday the Palace will present a double-feature bill combining "A Notorious Affair," a seductive love story starring Billie Dove and Basil Rathbone and a thrilling and spine-tingling picture, "The Second Floor Mystery," with Loretta Young and Grant Withers.

Coming to the Palace next Saturday for only four days, the king of all, Al Jolson in his latest and greatest hit, "Mammy."

Squad A, was also ordered out to the fire but less than a minute after the call came in there was another telephone call for a brush fire beyond Fox Hill and the squad was detailed to respond to that call. FIREMEN MAKE RESCUES AT BLAZE AT STERNLIEB BUILDING ON WATER ST.

One woman was carried down a ladder to safety, another was assisted down a rear stairway and several firemen were nearly overcome by dense smoke at a fire which gutted the second and third stories of the Sternlieb building, Nos. 3-7 Water street, late Saturday night. All occupants of the five tenements on the upper floors escaped, but four of the families lost all of their household furnishings. The Norwich Bargain House, retail men's and boys' clothing store, on the ground floor and the wholesale clothing establishment of Max Sternlieb and Sons, in the basement, were considerably damaged by fire, water and smoke.

Louis and Joseph I. Sternlieb, proprietors of both establishments, had left the building only a half hour before the fire broke out. They closed up the store shortly after 9:30 o'clock and there was no sign of smoke or fire when they left for their homes. Shortly before 10 o'clock, Leonard King, son of Mrs. C. J. King, who occupied one of the second floor tenements, discovered the fire as he was taking a bath and saw smoke seeping into the bathroom. He spread the alarm and his brother pulled in Box 116, Washington Sq. This was at 9:55 o'clock.

Called Extra Company

The flames shot up through the building with lightning-like rapidity and when the firemen arrived smoke was pouring from all sides of the structure. A few minute slater Acting Chief Brennan called out an extra company, Engine No. 3, from the Joseph Perkins road. Praiseworthy work by Acting Chief Brennan and splendid cooperation by the firemen kept the flames confined to the building, thus cutting down the loss materially.

Carried Down Ladder

At the outset of the fire Mrs. Frank Kammer was taken out of a window in her third floor tenement and carried down a ladder by firemen. The other occupants of that floor and also on the second floor managed to get to safety by the stairway and side entrance. Acting Deputy Chief John E. Blackburn assisted a woman down a rear stairway.

While endeavoring to shoot a stream into an upper floor window Captain Robert F. Woodmansee was nearly overcome by dense smoke and had to be assisted down the lader he was standing on but he recovered a few minutes later. Several other firemen were nearly overcome.

Used Five Lines of Hose

Owing to the nature of the building, a wooden frame structure with brick walls in front and rear, two stories in height in the rear and three stories in front, the fire was an extremely hard one to fight. Five lines of hose, 2200 feet of two and a half inch, and 200 feet of inch and a half hose, were laid and water was poured into the building from all sides. Although the flames were hardly visible from the Water street side, the interior of the building, on the second and third floors, was a roaring furnace. Water lines were run through the narrow alleyway at the westerly end of the building and onto the second story roof at the rear, from where the flames in the upper floors were fought.

So dense was the smoke that rolled back on them, that the firemen could hardly see each other, but they stubbornly fought their way into the flame-filled tenements. A stream from a cellar nozzle was directed through a skylight on the third story roof, into a blind attic and streams were also used through two or three holes cut in the roof. Another water line was run through the alley on the easterly side of the building and into the basement from the rear.

Kept Watch Through Night

The firemen remained on the scene for several hours and when the apparatus was finally sent back to the stations, a water line was left at the building and two call men remained on duty there the rest of the night.

The occupants of the tenements are: Frank Kammer, third floor; Joseph Kammer, second floor; Mrs. C. J. King, second floor; Nelson Lansing, third floor; John Urban, rear tenement. All of the tenants, except Mr. Urban, lost all their furniture and personal effects. Little is left of the second and third floors, the building as a whole being practically wrecked.

Started in Wood Bin

The fire originated in a wood bin in the cellar, near the furnace. The furnace and smoke pipe were found intact. The wood bin where the fire started is in a section of the cellar entirely separate from the clothing establishment in the basement. Entrance to the cellar is gained only from a side door in the alley at the westerly end of the building. The janitor banked the furnace fire about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and everything was all right when he left the building. Just how the wood in the bin caught fire is not known.

Insurance Coverage

The loss on the building and to the clothing establishments is covered by insurance but the loss to most of the tenants is total, as they carried no insurance on their household effects.

Traffic through Washington square east, was routed by the police, through Church street. Sergeant Matthew Delaney and a squad of police were on duty directing traffic and handling the large crowd of spectators.

Asked Sunday for an estimate of the loss on the building and contents, Joseph I. Sternlieb, one of the proprietors of the clothing establishments, stated that he could not make any definite estimate as he had not had an opportunity to make a thorough check. It is probable, however that the damage will be several thousand dollars.

In appreciation of the praiseworthy way in which the fire department handled the blaze, Max Sternlieb and Sons presented a check for $50 to the department for the pension fund and in appreciation of the services of the police a $25 check was presented to that department for its pension fund.

Schwartz Bros., Main street furniture dealers, who use the adjoining building for storage, etc., suffered some damage from smoke which got into their building.

He gave them a talk, telling them of his experience with pumpers and of various points in fire fighting. During Sunday he had a pleasant motor drive around the island and returned here in the early evening with Mr. Fillmore.

TAFTVILLE MOTORISTS PICK UP UNKOWN MAN WHO TOOK IODINE ON ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, April 27.—An unidentified young man, exceptionally well dressed and refusing to give his name or address, is a patient at the Westerly hospital, having taken a dose of iodine. About 8:45 p. m., tonight, an automobile driven by Eugene Boileau of 32 Providence street, Taftville, who was accompanied by his sister, Armand, also Gael Souza and his sister, Mary Souza, 8 Rose avenue, Westerly, was being driven along the Boston Post road toward Stonington from Westerly. When near the intersection of the Anguila road they observed, ahead of them, a man walking in the street who toppled and fell into the roadway. They stopped and picked the man up, thinking he had been struck by an automobile. Receiving the information that he had not been struck by a machine, he said he wanted to be left alone and remarked, "It will soon be over, now." They decided from the appearance of his mouth that he had taken poison and brought him to Dr. Michael H. Scanlon's office in Westerly. Police Officer Paul M. McCarthy of Westerly and Policeman Adin R. Sheldon of Pawcatuck were called and, accompanied by the motorists, went to the Stonington road and found a four-ounce bottle of iodine and a paper drinking cup. The label on the bottle was scraped off. The bottle was found in a barway by the roadside.

At the doctor's office the man refused to give either his name or address and continued to refuse to do so at the Westerly hospital when he was asked by Police Lieutenant George H. Champlin.

DEBATE OPENED IN SENATE ON THE PARKER NOMINATION

Senator Borah, Leader of the Opposition to Confirmation of Judge Parker As Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, Objected to the Delay Asked By Senator Overman—Galleries Were Crowded As Senator Overman Extolled Judge Parker As a Man of Courage, Character and Extreme Ability—Vote On the Nomination Is Not Expected Before Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Before crowded galleries and an intensely attentive membership, debate was begun late today in the senate on confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as an associate justice of the supreme court.

Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, lauding the personal character and judicial qualifications of the nominee, opened with a plea for confirmation. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, severely assailing Parker's decision upholding the "yellow dog" contract for employes, demanded his rejection.

Senator Borah had not concluded at nightfall and the debate upon which leaders believe will hinge the ultimate fate of President Hoover's second nominee to the high tribunal is expected to continue for several days.

The two speakers received the closest attention, interrupted occasionally by inquiries. Senator Black, democrat, Alabama, raised a new point when he read from a newspaper editorial charges that Judge Parker as government counsel in war frauds suits concealed evidence tending to show the innocence of defendants.

The Alabaman demanded of Senator Overman that this charge be disproven and expressed the view that unless it was "he would get no votes for confirmation."

Senator Overman said he had never heard of the charge, but that Justice Bailey who tried the war frauds case in question had lauded Judge Parker for his conduct. He said he would seek to disprove it.

Senator Borah devoted his attack entirely to Judge Parker's decision in the contract case upon which organized labor based its protest against his confirmation. Senator Overman said the Negroes of his state were for Judge Parker.

Senator Borah asserted that Judge Parker in upholding the injunction restraining the United Mine Workers from soliciting membership among Red Jacket Coal company employes in West Virginia who had signed contracts not to join unions was not bound to follow a particular decision of the supreme court, as contended by the administration.

The complaint of the Idahoan was principally that Parker had held as a member of the circuit court of appeals that the United Mine Workers could not seek to have miners break the contract even by peaceful persuasion. He said that was the issue involved and emphasized that he did not contend that an injunction should not have been issued against the mine union.

Senator Borah argued that the supreme court had not dealed in the Hitchman "yellow dog" contract case the right of unions to solicit membership peacefully.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that the judges who sat upon the bench in the Red Jacket case were anxious to find some way to sustain and maintain that contract. Why did they go back to the Hitchman case, ten years ago, and follow it, instead of following the Tri-City case?"

He cited the decision of the supreme court in the Tri-City case in 1921 which, he argued, held "where there is no malice, where there is no deception, where there is no deceit, where there is no fraud, peaceful persuasian is not to be restrained."

Assailing the contracts by which employers bind employes not to join unions or to go on strikes during the term of employment, Senator Borah said they were "reprehensible" and "void." He believed the legality of this contract has never been passed upon by the courts finally. He said Judge Parker's name was intimately connected with this contract because of his decision.

"I undertake to say that the question of whether working men may associate themselves with their friends or with their fellow laborers, as to whether working men may discuss with their fellow men or cooperate with their fellow working men as to how they shall conduct their business, is not a matter of concern to union labor alone, but it is a matter of concern to the state and to the government which is interested in maintaining and building up the character and the physical and moral well being of its citizens.

"If we had dug this contract (yellow dog contract) out of the archives of the common law about the time that it was also a crime and conspiracy for two men to meet together and discuss their wages, it would seem to be more nearly akin to that time than this."

NEW MOVE BY GANDHI FOR CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

BOMBAY, April 28.—(AP)—In the absence of any serious disorders today, Mahatma Gandhi introduced a new move in his civil disobedience campaign that may mean more trouble for the British authorities.

The nationalist leader authorized non-payment of land revenue taxes in the districts of Broach and Taluka, and that, in the opinion of observers here, may have serious consequences in the future.

Mrs. Gandhi sponsored the chief activity of the Mahatma's non-violent program today. With women volunteers in two motor buses she left Jalalpur for Onjar to carry on the fight against liquor. The women followed their usual procedure of picketing saloons and marching in the streets while chanting songs against the evils of drink.

The large cities apparently were quiet today, for no reports of disorders were received following the riots in Madras last night, where two natives were killed and numerous natives and policemen injured.

BOMBER WAS LYNCHED BY PERSONS UNKNOWN

TAMPA, Fla., April 28.—(AP)—A coroner's jury today brought in a verdict of death from gunshot wounds and strangulation at the hands of persons unknown after an inquest over the body of John Hodaz, 40, found near Antioch, earlier in the day. The man was taken by a mob last night from Deputy Sheriff Robinson, who had arrested him here in connection with the bombing of one home last week in Plant City and an attempt to bomb another.

Finger-print experts of the Tampa police department announced that Hodaz had handled dynamite which failed to explode at the home of H. D. Willaford, in Plant City.

Mrs. J. I. Waller, neighbor of Willaford, suffered injuries which may prove fatal when dynamite wrecked the back porch of her home.

ANSONIA HAS THE WORST RECORD FOR FOREST FIRES

HARTFORD, April 28.—(AP)—Forest fires during the first four months of 1930 will exceed by nearly 100 the total for the entire year of 1929, it was estimated by State Forester Austin F. Hawes, today. A total of 61 fires which burned over 996 acres were reported during the week ending April 26, Mr. Hawes announced, with several additional fires reported on today.

The state's loss from this source will run into thousands of dollars, as already 593 fires which have burned over a total of 11,874 acres have been reported. But 591 fires were reported during the 12 months of 1929. Ansonia has the worst record, with 56 fires reported to date.

CHURCH CORNERSTONE STOLEN IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, April 28.—(AP)—Theft of the cornerstone of a church, apparently in an attempt to obtain papers and church documents supposedly hidden in it, was reported to the police today.

The cornerstone, two feet long, one and a half feet wide and three inches thick, was pried from the foundation of the Mount Olive Baptist church. Rev. James Spencer of the church reported that the thieves gained nothing.

BRIDGE PARTY PUNCH WAS "SPIKED" WITH ALCOHOL

WICHITA, Kansas, April 28.—(AP)—The Beacon said today that nine women, members of a bridge club in the fashionable College Hill district, here were under care of physicians following a bridge-luncheon at the home of one of the members where punch "spiked" with alcohol was served.

Three of the women were reported completely paralyzed, three others confined to their beds, having lost the use of their legs, and the others were able to get about only on crutches. Two of the women told their physicians they had but one drink of the punch and that they had partaken of no other alcoholic beverages for weeks.

Dr. M. H. Hostetler, county physician, today reported 35 new liquor paralysis cases outside the city in Sedgwick county. Twenty-eight men and one woman now are being cared for at an emergency dormitory at the county poor farm.

DIAMOND RINGS VALUED AT $8,017 DISAPPEARED

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—Nine diamond rings, valued at $8,017, disappeared today from a tray on the counter of a Wall street jewelry store, while B. J. Banks, manager, was showing a customer three other rings from the same tray, Banks told police.

He said he and the patron walked to a window so the light of Broadway could fall upon the stones he had selected, and that when they returned a few moments later to the counter the rest of the rings in the tray were gone.

Four other clerks and two other customers in the store at the time cleared each other of suspicion, but could throw no light on the mystery.

$96,607 FORECLOSURE GRANTED STANLEY WORKS, NEW BRITAIN

BRIDGEPORT, April 28.—(AP)—A foreclosure to the amount of $96,607.17, was granted in superior court today by Judge Christopher L. Avery to the Stanley works, of New Britain. Through the judgment, the Commercial Aircraft Corporation of America, Inc., relinquishes title to factory land and buildings in this city.

The court fixed the law date as May 12 for the owner of the equity.

The Commercial Aircraft Corporation of America, Inc., was formerly the Bell Tone Manufacturing company and as such, on March 27, 1926, owed the plaintiff concern $95,000 on a promissory note.

ALLEGED TO HAVE STOLEN $11,000 FROM CLUB

UNEMPLOYMENT MEASURES PASSED BY THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Two Wagner unemployment measures—to set up a federal program for emergency construction, and to provide for collection of complete employment statistics—were passed today by the senate without a record vote.

A little later, over outspoken objection by administration leaders, the senate voted 37 to 32 to consider the third point of the Wagner unemployment program immediately after discussion of the nomination of Judge John J. Parker for the supreme court is completed.

The third bill by Senator Wagner, New York democrat, would provide a federal system of employment, to cooperate with state agencies. Wagner asserted confidence after the vote, that the senate also would agree to the third measure.

The first of the two measures passed today would require the department of labor to publish monthly figures on the volume and changes in employment, covering not only numbers of workers, but hours worked for the federal government and for various industries.

The other would create a federal employment stabilization board composed of the secretaries of the treasury, of commerce, agriculture and labor. The measure also would request the president to direct the secretaries of war, agriculture and the treasury to accelerate construction within their control during periods of depression.

BUYER OF LIQUOR CASE BEFORE SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—The question whether the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes is guilty of violating the national prohibition law was argued today before the supreme court in two cases.

Attorney General Mitchell, pursuing to clarify some of the prohibition enforcement problems, through Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, submitted a case from Boston, where James E. Farrar had been indicted on the charge of unlawfully purchasing liquor from a bottlegger. Youngquist frankly explained that much could be said on both sides.

Facing numerous court decisions and congressional action adverse to its contentions, the government argued that the prohibition law should be construed to mean that lawful purchases of intoxicating liquor required permits and that as a permit could not be issued for the purchase of liquor for beverage purposes, such purchases were illegal.

William H. Lewis as counsel for Farrer, attacked the indictment as defective because it had not charged that the purchase had been made without a permit, but waiving all technicalities he insisted that congress never intended that a purchaser should be punished.

THOUSAND CITIZENS WERE SLAIN BY CHINESE BANDITS

SHANGHAI, April 28.—(AP)—Bandits, armed with machine guns, massacred 1,000 residents of Kingsuchen, northern Kiangsu province, Saturday, it was learned today. One thousand captives were carried off with loot of the city which was burned.

This latest massacre by outlaws who recently have slain thousands in other sections of China took place within 100 miles of Nanking, seat of the nationalist government.

The countryside about Kingsu-Chen was ravaged and peasants were tortured.

Mounted upon horses, the bandits dashed into the town, posted machine guns and mowed down the helpless inhabitants, afterward looting their homes before setting fire to them.

Two priests were kidnaped by brigands who sacked the city of Sientaochen, 50 miles northwest of Hankow.

BODY OF MAN FOUND BESIDE RAILROAD TRACKS

SHARON, Conn., April 28.—(AP)—The body of George Croft, of Amenia, who had evidently been struck and killed by a New York Central railroad train, was found beside the tracks between Sharon and Amenia this morning. Though many of his bones were broken it was apparent that Croft was not killed instantly as marks in the soft ground show that he had struggled for some time to get help. Death resulted from loss of blood through a bad leg wound. The body was found by Harold Hughes, railroad signalman.

STOVE EXPLODED IN CARNIVAL COOK TENT

MIDDLETOWN, April 28—(AP)—Fire which followed explosion of a gasoline stove in the cook tent of Coleman's carnival here, this afternoon, seriously burned Richard Halloran, 33, of 24 Huntington street, Hartford, and did over $5,000 damage.

The carnival began its season last week. The cook tent owned by Steve Passas and three other tents were burned, Passas put his loss at about $3,000, William Quinn, who had two concessions, $1,500, Frank Curley, another concessionaire, $500 and Paul Smith, $300. Halloran is expected to recover.

Tilson Suggests Extra Session Of The Senate

Immediately After Congress Adjourns to Deal With the London Conference Naval Treaty.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—House Leader Tilson of Connecticut has expressed approval of a proposed plan to let congress adjourn as soon as pending business and appropriation bills are passed, leaving the London conference to be considered by the senate at a special session of the senate to be called by the president immediately after congress adjourns. As the house takes no part in action on treaties under the constitution, the president and the senate having exclusive power, such a program would not delay action on the London conference.

In that case adjournment could probably be taken early in June, otherwise the entire congress may be kept here till July, although Tilson is hopeful of earlier adjournment.

"The house could finish its work by May 20 if not delayed by the senate," said Tilson today. "But have no prediction to make on what course the senate will pursue. I see no reason why the president would not approve of adjournment of congress and an extra session of the senate to follow it at once."

When Senator Watson, senate republican leader, was informed of the Tilson suggestion he said, "I had not heard of it, but shall be glad to learn how the president regards it. Until then I do not feel I would express an opinion, and of course should need to know the sentiment of the house also."

All the same, it seems apparent the leaders of both senate and house would favor the extra session for treaty program as suggested by Tilson.

OHIO PENITENTIARY INMATES REFUSE TO WORK

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 28.—(AP)—The mutinous convicts in Ohio penitentiary kept prison officials in a constant state of turmoil today, obtained concessions from them and refused to work, but never once got beyond their control.

Still seething in a spirit of unrest that followed the disastrous fire a week ago in which 320 lives were lost, the prisoners rose up in revolt again after a comparatively quiet week-end.

A detail of 150 Columbus policemen was rushed into the prison yard this morning. National guardsmen mounted machine guns on the walls and on the outside, and leaders of the revolt were gathered up and either placed in solitary confinement or transferred to other institutions.

FOREST FIRE IS RAGING NEAR KENNEBUNK, ME.

KENNEBUNK, Me., April 28.—(AP)—A raging forest fire which authorities considered of incendiary origin late today had swept through 2,000 acres of heavy standing timber in four towns and tonight burned fiercely six miles from Sanford.

The spreading fire engulfed 700,000 feet of sawed lumber in South Sanford and threatened to consume the large tract of forest land owned by the Bates college forestry department, considered one of the finest stands of timber in the state.

John M. Balch, chairman of the board of selectmen at Sanford, and a fire observer at Ogunquit declared that fires had been spotted throughout the day burning a half mile to a mile apart. Both expressed the opinion they were incendiary.

Officials believed the total loss would reach approximately $50,000 if the fire was held in its present confines.

GUARDSMEN ON DUTY AT OHIO PENITENTIARY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 28.—(AP)—Thirty-one National guardsmen with loaded rifles and tear gas bombs were sent into Ohio penitentiary tonight to quell disorders among prisoners in a tunnel leading from a cell block to the prison power house.

Seven of the soldiers went into the prison court while 24 men stationed themselves in the guard room with fixed bayonets.

100 BOYS IN NEW LONDON COAST GUARD ACADEMY

NEW LONDON, April 28.—(AP)—The junior naval militia of Richmond Hill, N. Y., made up of about 100 boys, arrived here today on the coast guard destroyer, Porter, from New York, to spend the week at the Coast Guard academy.

Members of the unit will be instructed in seamanship and will hold infantry and boat drills during the week.

Charged With Murder Of Smith Brothers

John L. W[illegible] and P. G. Seeley, [illegible]panions of Slain M[illegible] Held At Muskogee, [illegible]

Police had announced previously that Wike and Seeley, who had been questioned for several hours, had been released from custody. After their release, both men told officers they would remain in Muskogee until the mystery of the double slaying had been solved.

The officers declined to discuss what developments had prompted the filing of the murder charges. It was known, however, that the men again were being questioned by police detectives, who indicated statements might be made later regarding the reason for the charges.

The date of the preliminary hearing for Seeley and Wike had not been set late today but court officials said it probably would be held Wednesday.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—An explosion in the after end of General Cornelius Vanderbilt's $1,000,000 yacht, Winchester, off the New York Yacht club, today did $50,000 damage to the vessel and shook the East river waterfront for several blocks.

General Vanderbilt was not aboard, and none of his crew of 22 was injured. They were all forward at lunch at 12:34 p. m., when the explosion occurred.

The blast, in a 90-gallon gasoline tank just astern of the engine room, tore out the deck just aft of the second smokestack and caused a fire which burned out the crew's quarters, part of the wooden deck and the sun sails, or awnings, above the main deck. The cause of the explosion was not known.

Capt. Leonard Jeffries and his crew fought the blaze with fire extinguishers and ship's hose lines until the arrival of a fireboat and several nearby tugs. After 45 minutes the fire was under control and 15 minutes later the last embers had been wet down.

The Winchester had been in southern waters all winter and had steamed back to her anchorage, 500 feet off the Yacht club in the East river at 29th street, three weeks ago.

She is a long, rakish craft, 225 feet overall, powered with two steam turbines and with a gross tonnage of 466, ranking her with the world's largest private yachts.

ECLIPSE OF SUN WAS TOTAL IN NORTHWEST

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—(AP)—The rare phenomenon of a total eclipse of the sun was witnessed over a narrow swath across northwestern United States today and in addition to being a spectacle of much interest may have brought to astronomers new information regarding our chief source of heat, light and energy.

In San Francisco, the largest city near the center of totality, where the sun was 99 per cent obscured, lights were necessary indoors.

HOLYOKE WITH $500,000 FIRE CALLED ASSISTANCE FROM THREE OTHER CITIES

HOLYOKE, Mass., April 28.—(AP)—A fire which for a time threatened widespread destruction, did damage estimated by fire department officials at $500,000, necessitated the summoning of aid from three other cities and the calling out of the National guard here tonight.

Starting in the yard of the Ranger Casper Lumber company, the fire swept through the property destroying six buildings, only one of which was brick, and then attacked nearby properties. Sparks were carried blocks away by a high wind and they accounted for fires at the city hall, the People's Savings bank, Farr Alpaca mills, Skinner Silk mills and Fred H. Frantz's garage, one-eighth of a mile away.

A night watchman for the lumber company discovered the fire. As soon as fire department officials reached the scene they sent in a general alarm.

At the height of the fire sparks started a blaze on the city hall tower and on the roof of the bank. The members of the board of aldermen were meeting at the city hall and rushed with hand extinguishers to aid city employes who were attempting to reach the flames with water hoses.

The fire at the lumber yard grew to such proportions that calls were sent to Northampton, Springfield, and Chicopee for aid. As soon as the Springfield apparatus arrived it went to the city hall and put out the fire there.

SENATE REFERRED HOOVER MESSAGE TO COMMITTEE

President Hoover Adopted the Unusual Course of Writing to Congress Urging Completion of His Law Enforcement Program—Senate So Busy That It Waived the Formality of Having the Executive Message Read

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—Adopting the unusual course of writing to congress urging completion of his legislative law enforcement program, President Hoover today found a senate so busy with other matters that it even waived the formality of having the executive message read. It was referred to the judiciary committee without a word of discussion.

Most of the measures cited by the president are caught behind the tariff and the controversy over the Parker nomination in the senate, but both houses are progressing with the legislation and republican leaders believe ample time is left at this session for action on at least the high points of the administration program.

Calling attention to the approaching adjournment of the legislature, Mr. Hoover asserted "substantial progress" had been made on some of the relief measures he proposed, but he added that early adoption of the complete five-point program was necessary "if I am to perform the high duty which falls upon the executive of enforcement of the federal laws."

The five points stressed were transfer of prohibition enforcement functions from the treasury to the justice department, methods to relieve congested court dockets, extension of federal prison facilities, consolidation of border patrol agencies to more effectively prevent illegal entry of aliens and goods, and an "adequate" dry enforcement law for the national capital.

The prohibition transfer bill has passed the house. The senate judiciary committee was prepared to report it to the senate, but only today referred it back to a sub-committee for modification of a provision transferring employes of the dry unit to the justice department.

The committee previously had voted against transfer of the treasury employes on the ground that the attorney general should have a free hand in selecting his personnel.

Prison extension bills have advanced farther than any embraced in the five-point program. They have passed the house and have been reported by the senate judiciary committee.

"There must be extension of federal prisons with a more adequate parole system and other modern treatment of prisoners," the president said in this connection, adding:

"The overcrowding of the prisons themselves is inhumane and accentuates criminal tendencies."

Declaring "no conclusion appears to have been reached" by committees of either house on proposed relief from court congestion, the president said the "so-called bargain days, when light fines are imposed as the result of pleas of guilty, clear the docket, but the result distinctly undermines respect for law."

Border patrol consolidation measures are pending in committees, as is a measure to tighten enforcement in the District of Columbia.

In the house, the letter was read and referred to the six committees that are considering measures relating to the various recommendations.

Speaker Longworth said he had not been informed as to the progress being made by the committees but that he understood they had been making considerable study.

The speaker declined to speculate on whether the remainder of the president's law enforcement proposals would be acted on at this session.

DEBATE OPENED IN SENATE ON THE PARKER NOMINATION

Senator Borah, Leader of the Opposition to Confirmation of Judge Parker As Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, Objected to the Delay Asked By Senator Overman—Galleries Were Crowded As Senator Overman Extolled Judge Parker As a Man of Courage, Character and Extreme Ability—Vote On the Nomination Is Not Expected Before Wednesday.

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Before crowded galleries and an intensely attentive membership, debate was begun late today in the senate on confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as an associate justice of the supreme court.

Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, lauding the personal character and judicial qualifications of the nominee, opened with a plea for confirmation. Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, severely assailing Parker's decision upholding the "yellow dog" contract for employes, demanded his rejection.

Senator Borah had not concluded at nightfall and the debate upon which leaders believe will hinge the ultimate fate of President Hoover's second nominee to the high tribunal is expected to continue for several days.

The two speakers received the closest attention, interrupted occasionally by inquiries. Senator Black, democrat, Alabama, raised a new point when he read from a newspaper editorial charges that Judge Parker as government counsel in war frauds suits concealed evidence tending to show the innocence of defendants.

The Alabaman demanded of Senator Overman that this charge be disproven and expressed the view that unless it was "he would get no votes for confirmation."

Senator Overman said he had never heard of the charge, but that Justice Bailey who tried the war frauds case in question had lauded Judge Parker for his conduct. He said he would seek to disprove it.

Senator Borah devoted his attack entirely to Judge Parker's decision in the contract case upon which organized labor based its protest against his confirmation. Senator Overman said the Negroes of his state were for Judge Parker.

Senator Borah asserted that Judge Parker in upholding the injunction restraining the United Mine Workers from soliciting membership among Red Jacket Coal company employes in West Virginia who had signed contracts not to join unions was not bound to follow a particular decision of the supreme court, as contended by the administration.

The complaint of the Idahoan was principally that Parker had held as a member of the circuit court of appeals that the United Mine Workers could not seek to have miners break the contract even by peaceful persuasion. He said that was the issue involved and emphasized that he did not contend that an injunction should not have been issued against the mine union.

Senator Borah argued that the supreme court had not dealed in the Hitchman "yellow dog" contract case the right of unions to solicit membership peacefully.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that the judges who sat upon the bench in the Red Jacket case were anxious to find some way to sustain and maintain that contract. Why did they go back to the Hitchman case, ten years ago, and follow it, instead of following the Tri-City case?"

He cited the decision of the supreme court in the Tri-City case in 1921 which, he argued, held "where there is no malice, where there is no deception, where there is no deceit, where there is no fraud, peaceful persuasian is not to be restrained."

Assailing the contracts by which employers bind employes not to join unions or to go on strikes during the term of employment, Senator Borah said they were "reprehensible" and "void." He believed the legality of this contract has never been passed upon by the courts finally. He said Judge Parker's name was intimately connected with this contract because of his decision.

"I undertake to say that the question of whether working men may associate themselves with their friends or with their fellow laborers, as to whether working men may discuss with their fellow men or cooperate with their fellow working men as to how they shall conduct their business, is not a matter of concern to union labor alone, but it is a matter of concern to the state and to the government which is interested in maintaining and building up the character and the physical and moral well being of its citizens.

"If we had dug this contract (yellow dog contract) out of the archives of the common law about the time that it was also a crime and conspiracy for two men to meet together and discuss their wages, it would seem to be more nearly akin to that time than this."

NEW MOVE BY GANDHI FOR CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

BOMBAY, April 28.—(AP)—In the absence of any serious disorders today, Mahatma Gandhi introduced a new move in his civil disobedience campaign that may mean more trouble for the British authorities.

The nationalist leader authorized non-payment of land revenue taxes in the districts of Broach and Taluka, and that, in the opinion of observers here, may have serious consequences in the future.

Mrs. Gandhi sponsored the chief activity of the Mahatma's non-violent program today. With women volunteers in two motor buses she left Jalalpur for Onjar to carry on the fight against liquor. The women followed their usual procedure of picketing saloons and marching in the streets while chanting songs against the evils of drink.

The large cities apparently were quiet today, for no reports of disorders were received following the riots in Madras last night, where two natives were killed and numerous natives and policemen injured.

BOMBER WAS LYNCHED BY PERSONS UNKNOWN

TAMPA, Fla., April 28.—(AP)—A coroner's jury today brought in a verdict of death from gunshot wounds and strangulation at the hands of persons unknown after an inquest over the body of John Hodaz, 40, found near Antioch, earlier in the day. The man was taken by a mob last night from Deputy Sheriff Robinson, who had arrested him here in connection with the bombing of one home last week in Plant City and an attempt to bomb another.

Finger-print experts of the Tampa police department announced that Hodaz had handled dynamite which failed to explode at the home of H. D. Willaford, in Plant City.

Mrs. J. I. Waller, neighbor of Willaford, suffered injuries which may prove fatal when dynamite wrecked the back porch of her home.

Three of the women were reported completely paralyzed, three others confined to their beds, having lost the use of their legs, and the others were able to get about only on crutches. Two of the women told their physicians they had but one drink of the punch and that they had partaken of no other alcoholic beverages for weeks.

Dr. M. H. Hostetler, county physician, today reported 25 new liquor paralysis cases outside the city in Sedgwick county. Twenty-eight men and one woman now are being cared for at an emergency dormitory at the county poor farm.

UNEMPLOYMENT MEASURES PASSED BY THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Two Wagner unemployment measures—to set up a federal program for emergency construction, and to provide for collection of complete employment statistics—were passed today by the senate without a record vote.

A little later, over outspoken objection by administration leaders, the senate voted 37 to 32 to consider the third point of the Wagner unemployment program immediately after discussion of the nomination of Judge John J. Parker for the supreme court is completed.

The third bill by Senator Wagner, New York democrat, would provide a federal system of employment, to cooperate with state agencies. Wagner asserted confidence after the vote, that the senate also would agree to the third measure.

The first of the two measures passed today would require the department of labor to publish monthly figures on the volume and changes in employment, covering not only numbers of workers, but hours worked for the federal government and for various industries.

The other would create a federal employment stabilization board composed of the secretaries of the treasury, of commerce, agriculture and labor. The measure also would request the president to direct the secretaries of war, agriculture and the treasury to accelerate construction within their control during periods of depression.

BUYER OF LIQUOR CASE BEFORE SUPREME COURT

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—The question whether the purchaser of liquor for beverage purposes is guilty of violating the national prohibition law was argued today before the supreme court in two cases.

Attorney General Mitchell, pursuing to clarify some of the prohibition enforcement problems, through Assistant Attorney General Youngquist, submitted a case from Boston, where James E. Farrar had been indicted on the charge of unlawfully purchasing liquor from a bottlegger. Youngquist frankly explained that much could be said on both sides.

Facing numerous court decisions and congressional action adverse to its contentions, the government argued that the prohibition law should be construed to mean that lawful purchases of intoxicating liquor required permits and that as a permit could not be issued for the purchase of liquor for beverage purposes, such purchases were illegal.

William H. Lewis as counsel for Farrer, attacked the indictment as defective because it had not charged that the purchase had been made without a permit, but waiving all technicalities he insisted that congress never intended that a purchaser should be punished.

SHANGHAI, April 28.—(AP)—Bandits, armed with machine guns, massacred 1,000 residents of Kingsuchen, northern Kiangsu province, Saturday, it was learned today. One thousand captives were carried off with loot of the city which was burned.

Mounted upon horses, the bandits dashed into the town, posted machine guns and mowed down the helpless inhabitants, afterward looting their homes before setting fire to them.

Tilson Suggests Extra Session Of The Senate

Immediately After Congress Adjourns to Deal With the London Conference Naval Treaty.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—House Leader Tilson of Connecticut has expressed approval of a proposed plan to let congress adjourn as soon as pending business and appropriation bills are passed, leaving the London conference to be considered by the senate at a special session of the senate to be called by the president immediately after congress adjourns. As the house takes no part in action on treaties under the constitution, the president and the senate having exclusive power, such a program would not delay action on the London conference.

In that case adjournment could probably be taken early in June, otherwise the entire congress may be kept here till July, although Tilson is hopeful of earlier adjournment.

"The house could finish its work by May 20 if not delayed by the senate," said Tilson today. "But have no prediction to make on what course the senate will pursue. I see no reason why the president would not approve of adjournment of congress and an extra session of the senate to follow it at once."

When Senator Watson, senate republican leader, was informed of the Tilson suggestion he said, "I had not heard of it, but shall be glad to learn how the president regards it. Until then I do not feel I would express an opinion, and of course should need to know the sentiment of the house also."

All the same, it seems apparent the leaders of both senate and house would favor the extra session for treaty program as suggested by Tilson.

OHIO PENITENTIARY INMATES REFUSE TO WORK

COLUMBUS, Ohio, April 28.—(AP)—The mutinous convicts in Ohio penitentiary kept prison officials in a constant state of turmoil today, obtained concessions from them and refused to work, but never once got beyond their control.

Still seething in a spirit of unrest that followed the disastrous fire a week ago in which 320 lives were lost, the prisoners rose up in revolt again after a comparatively quiet week-end.

A detail of 150 Columbus policemen was rushed into the prison yard this morning. National guardsmen mounted machine guns on the walls and on the outside, and leaders of the revolt were gathered up and either placed in solitary confinement or transferred to other institutions.

FOREST FIRE IS RAGING NEAR KENNEBUNK, ME.

KENNEBUNK, Me., April 28.—(AP)—A raging forest fire which authorities considered of incendiary origin late today had swept through 2,000 acres of heavy standing timber in four towns and tonight burned fiercely six miles from Sanford.

The spreading fire engulfed 700,000 feet of sawed lumber in South Sanford and threatened to consume the large tract of forest land owned by the Bates college forestry department, considered one of the finest stands of timber in the state.

John M. Balch, chairman of the board of selectmen at Sanford, and a fire observer at Ogunquit declared that fires had been spotted throughout the day burning a half mile to a mile apart. Both expressed the opinion they were incendiary.

Officials believed the total loss would reach approximately $50,000 if the fire was held in its present confines.

Police had announced previously that Wike and Seeley, who had been questioned for several hours, had been released from custody. After their release, both men told officers they would remain in Muskogee until the mystery of the double slaying had been solved.

The officers declined to discuss what developments had prompted the filing of the murder charges. It was known, however, that the men again were being questioned by police detectives, who indicated statements might be made later regarding the reason for the charges.

The date of the preliminary hearing for Seeley and Wike had not been set late today but court officials said it probably would be held Wednesday.

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—An explosion in the after end of General Cornelius Vanderbilt's $1,000,000 yacht, Winchester, off the New York Yacht club, today did $50,000 damage to the vessel and shook the East river waterfront for several blocks.

General Vanderbilt was not aboard, and none of his crew of 22 was injured. They were all forward at lunch at 12:34 p. m., when the explosion occurred.

The blast, in a 90-gallon gasoline tank just astern of the engine room, tore out the deck just aft of the second smokestack and caused a fire which burned out the crew's quarters, part of the wooden deck and the sun sails, or awnings, above the main deck. The cause of the explosion was not known.

Capt. Leonard Jeffries and his crew fought the blaze with fire extinguishers and ship's hose lines until the arrival of a fireboat and several nearby tugs. After 45 minutes the fire was under control and 15 minutes later the last embers had been wet down.

The Winchester had been in southern waters all winter and had steamed back to her anchorage, 500 feet off the Yacht club in the East river at 29th street, three weeks ago.

She is a long, r.kish craft, 225 feet overall, powered with two steam turbines and with a gross tonnage of 466, ranking her with the world's largest private yachts.

ECLIPSE OF SUN WAS TOTAL IN NORTHWEST

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—(AP)—The rare phenomenon of a total eclipse of the sun was witnessed over a narrow swath across northwestern United States today and in addition to being a spectacle of much interest may have brought to astronomers new information regarding our chief source of heat, light and energy.

In San Francisco, the largest city near the center of totality, where the sun was 99 per cent obscured, lights were necessary indoors.

HOLYOKE WITH $500,000 FIRE CALLED ASSISTANCE FROM THREE OTHER CITIES

HOLYOKE, Mass., April 28.—(AP)—A fire which for a time threatened widespread destruction, did damage estimated by fire department officials at $500,000, necessitated the summoning of aid from three other cities and the calling out of the National guard here tonight.

Starting in the yard of the Ranger Casper Lumber company, the fire swept through the property destroying six buildings, only one of which was brick, and then attacked nearby properties. Sparks were carried blocks away by a high wind and they accounted for fires at the city hall, the People's Savings bank, Farr Alpaca mills, Skinner Silk mills and Fred H. Frantz's garage, one-eighth of a mile away.

A night watchman for the lumber company discovered the fire. As soon as fire department officials reached the scene they sent in a general alarm.

At the height of the fire sparks started a blaze on the city hall tower and on the roof of the bank. The members of the board of aldermen were meeting at the city hall and rushed with hand extinguishers to aid city employes who were attempting to reach the flames with water hoses.

The fire at the lumber yard grew to such proportions that calls were sent to Northampton, Springfield, and Chicopee for aid. As soon as the Springfield apparatus arrived it went to the city hall and put out the fire there.

SENATE REFERRED HOOVER MESSAGE TO COMMITTEE

President Hoover Adopted the Unusual Course of Writing to Congress Urging Completion of His Law Enforcement Program—Senate So Busy That It Waived the Formality of Having the Executive Message Read

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP)—Adopting the unusual course of writing to congress urging completion of his legislative law enforcement program, President Hoover today found a senate so busy with other matters that it even waived the formality of having the executive message read. It was referred to the judiciary committee without a word of discussion.

Most of the measures cited by the president are caught behind the tariff and the controversy over the Parker nomination in the senate, but both houses are progressing with the legislation and republican leaders believe ample time is left at this session for action on at least the high points of the administration program.

Calling attention to the approaching adjournment of the legislature, Mr. Hoover asserted "substantial progress" had been made on some of the relief measures he proposed, but he added that early adoption of the complete five-point program was necessary "if I am to perform the high duty which falls upon the executive of enforcement of the federal laws."

The five points stressed were transfer of prohibition enforcement functions from the treasury to the justice department, methods to relieve congested court dockets, extension of federal prison facilities, consolidation of border patrol agencies to more effectively prevent illegal entry of aliens and goods, and an "adequate" dry enforcement law for the national capital.

The prohibition transfer bill has passed the house. The senate judiciary committee was prepared to report it to the senate, but only today referred it back to a sub-committee for modification of a provision transferring employes of the dry unit to the justice department.

The committee previously had voted against transfer of the treasury employes on the ground that the attorney general should have a free hand in selecting his personnel.

Prison extension bills have advanced farther than any embraced in the five-point program. They have passed the house and have been reported by the senate judiciary committee.

"There must be extension of federal prisons with a more adequate parole system and other modern treatment of prisoners," the president said in this connection, adding:

Declaring "no conclusion appears to have been reached" by committees of either house on proposed relief from court congestion, the president said the "so-called bargain days, when light fines are imposed as the result of pleas of guilty, clear the docket, but the result distinctly undermines respect for law."

Border patrol consolidation measures are pending in committees, as is a measure to tighten enforcement in the District of Columbia.

In the house, the letter was read and referred to the six committees that are considering measures relating to the various recommendations.

Speaker Longworth said he had not been informed as to the progress being made by the committees but that he understood they had been making considerable study.

The speaker declined to speculate on whether the remainder of the president's law enforcement proposals would be acted on at this session.

He will be arraigned in the May term of the criminal superior court upon a charge of operating a lottery.

DANIELSON

KILLINGLY TRUST CO. DECLARES TWO DIVIDENDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 28—In making announcement that the Killingly Trust company has declared a regular dividend to stockholders and a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent per annum to its savings depositors, Nathan D. Prince said today that the company has had a very successful six months. He also points out that the trust company occupies a very distinctive and unique position in that its capital, surplus and undivided profits exceed its deposits. This is the only bank in the state, Mr. Prince says, and probably in New England, that can make a similar showing.

In addition to paying its regular dividend to stockholders a substantial amount has been carried to the profit and loss account.

Since its organization the Killingly Trust company has been specializing in the handling of estate and trust funds. Even though the bank has not been particularly active in the commercial field, it has grown from a small beginning, with a capital of $25,000 and $2,750 surplus to a capital of $100,000 at the present time and a surplus of $100,000.

EFFECT ORGANIZATION OF Y. M. C. A. BASEBALL LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 28—The Windham County Y. M. C. A. Baseball league has been organized with three divisions, the Northern, Central and Southern. The teams in the Northern division are to be known as Brown, with Arthur Broughton of Thompson as manager; Dartmouth, with Daniel Cunningham of North Grosvenordale as manager; Yale, with Arthur Watson of Putnam as manager and Harvard, with William Lucas of Putnam as manager. The schedule in this division opens on May 1 and will close on May 27. Games are to be played on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Danielson will be represented by three teams in the Central division, and the other teams in this division are from Dayville, Brooklyn and East Brooklyn. This section of the league will open on April 30. Teams in the Central division are named after teams in the American league. New York, Arthur Del Pesco, manager; Philadelphia, Robert Marland, manager; Chicago, Raymond Withey, manager, will represent Danielson. Dayville has the Washington team, George Wakefield, manager. East Brooklyn the Boston team with Alexander Paskavitch as manager and Brooklyn the Cleveland team, the manager yet to be selected.

In the Southern division Aaron French will manage the Sterling team, Leon Rockwell the Wauregan team, Cecil Butler, the Plainfield team and W. H. Bailey the Moosup team.

The winners in each of these divisions will play each other for the Windham County Y. M. C. A. Junior world's championship at the end of their respective league seasons.

Forest fire crews battled until about midnight last night overcoming various fires that broke out in territory hereabouts. One fire was in the region east of Half hill, another in the Fall brook area. Considerable areas were burned over before the fires were extinguished, state fire-fighting apparatus being used effectively by the workers. One arrest was made in the case of a man who started a fire without having a permit to do so.

Lack of rain recently has caused a recurrence of a dangerous condition in woods and fields, and only extreme care can keep forest or grass fires from getting started.

Two cases were disposed of by Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis in the town court this morning. Frank Winslow of Providence was fined $1 and costs for operating a car without having a license to do so. Miss Lillian Anderson was fined $1 and actual costs for operating a car on which the taillight was not working.

Announcement was made this afternoon in the interest of about a dozen grocers and marketmen of Danielson that they are to close their places of business on Thursday afternoons beginning this week. The agreement, coming earlier than usual this year, is effective May 1. There was no announcement as to how long the arrangement will continue, but it is believed that it will be at least until fall.

The proposition was heard today that repair work on the town's roads be put up for bids. When and in just what form this proposal will be put before the voters is not stated. It is, however, somewhat in line with a recent proposal that the town buy motor trucks for use in highway work, instead of hiring, as is now the practice. The plan to buy the trucks died aborning. There was to have been a special town meeting to consider the matter, but it never came to pass. Discussion of the plan proved to the satisfaction of numbers of people that the town would be laboring under many disadvantages in owning and operating trucks. The talked of plan to have the town put up its road work fo rbids, the lowest responsible bidder to get the work, is new in this town, though it has been tried out in other towns at times. Back of it all, sponsors of the idea say, is a desire to reduce road upkeep costs if possible.

Advance work on the construction of nearly three miles of concrete highway betwen Wauregan and Danielson may get underway this week. For weeks past crews of the Southern New England Telephone company have been at work moving poles and wires that in their old locations would be along the new layout for this highway. Many of the curves now encountered along the state highway between Danielson and Wauregan will be eliminated when the new road is finished, which probably will be in the fall.

The borough has resumed its side-walk building activities. Additional walks in upper Mechanic street will be completed in the not distant future. Work on the walks in this street was started last year and continued until cold weather set in.

DANIELSON BARRACKS TO HAVE TELEPHONE TYPEWRITER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 28—A telephone typewriter is to be installed at the state police barracks on North Main street, as in other barracks throughout the state. The installation will be made during the summer season, and the apparatus is expected to be in working order by August 1. Over the line that will connect state police headquarters in Hartford with the barracks here will come police alarms and police reports of various sorts. The messages are typed much the same as on a typewriter and automatically transmitted over the telephone line to the receiving instrument, which types out the message exactly as it will be originally made in Hartford.

WEDDING

Landry-Caron

This morning at 7:30 o'clock at St. James' church and in the presence of many relatives and friends, Miss Rose Helen Caron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Octave Caron of 57 South Main street, was united in marriage with Joseph Landry, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Landry of the Connecticut Village section of Danielson.

The marriage was performed by the pastor, Rev. Anthelme Moillard, M. S., and he also was celebrant of the nuptial mass.

Napoleon Landry, brother of the groom, was best man.

After the service there was a reception for the newly married couple, with many attending, at the home of the bride's parents. The bride received a great variety of beautiful gifts.

During the day Mr. and Mrs. Landry left on their wedding trip, during which they will visit in New York state and in Canada.

A long train of the Ringling-Barnum and Bailey circus rolled northward through Danielson this morning, Boston bound after a stay of several weeks in New York.

The second session of the Danielson Standard Leadership Training classes for church school teachers and others was held at the Westfield Congregational church this evening.

Repairs are underway at the Diamond building, damaged by fire the past week. The north side of the building will be entirely refinished and new roofing is being put on.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM MAN ARRESTED FOLLOWING ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 28.—Levi Minard, Water street, this city, was placed under arrest early this morning by State Officer James Carmody of the Danielson barracks on charges of evading responsibility and operating under the influence of liquor. Minard is alleged to have collided with a Buick sedan, which was in charge of William Thibeault of Maple street, Danielson, and was, at the time of the accident, parked alongside the highway in the village of Mechanicsville. There were three other passengers in the sedan, when the heavy truck smashed into the rear end of the parked vehicle, denting the mudguard and causing other minor damages to the car. The driver of the truck refused to stop. After taking to the highway he increased speed and made off in the direction of Putnam. Thibeault gave chase, overtaking him near the Prentice filling station on School street and following him to his home on Water street. A complaint was filed with the police and following an investigation by Patrolman Harry Wallen and Sergt. A. J. Sponcey of the local police, Minard was taken into custody and detained at police headquarters until the arrival of Officer Carmody who placed him under arrest.

Old Sol lost 58 per cent of his candlepower this afternoon which was shut off for several minutes when the moon moved across its face in eclipse. The eclipse of the sun began exactly at 3:20 p. m., the hour mentioned in scientific reports. Interested observers lined Main street during the period of eclipse and with necks craned skyward peered through smoke colored glasses and photograph negatives to view the phenomenon.

Enumerators who have been at work taking the 15th decennial census have nearly completed their canvass of the various districts in the town and are preparing the reports to submit them to the district supervisor in charge of the work for this district. In one instance an enumerator here was forced to go over his territory a second time because of difficulties encountered on the first tour.

Putnam people, who are residents of the summer colony at Alexander's lake in Dayville, are preparing their warm weather homes for occupancy which will take place within a few weeks. The same question as to whether or not bathing in the waters of the beautiful lake can be legally prohibited when existent circumstances are considered, which arises annually, has bobbed up again at this time and is being widely discussed in circles hereabouts. Undoubtedly officers representing the state bureau of public health will be charged again this year with the responsibility of placarding trees on the shore of the Killingly lake to the effect that swimming there constitutes a violation of state laws and those apprehended in the act may be punished in court. The practice has been followed for some years past and it is expected that the weather beaten signs of last season will be replaced before the advent of the warm weather, reported to be just ahead.

Now—Festival Week—Bradley theatre. Biggest hit of the week, "Ladies of Leisure," today and Wednesday.—adv.

The circus came to town this morning, but departed almost as quickly as it came. However, in the brief space of time that the gaily decorated cars of Ringling Brothers— Barnum and Bailey circus reposed on the local siding of the Norwich and Worcester branch of the New Haven road, a number of interested spectators chanced to peer into the slat covered coaches to obtain a fleeting glimpse of the elephants, lions, tigers, 'noceroususes 'n everything. The circus special was made up of 25 cars in the first section and 22 in the second cordon which passed through here late this afternoon. The train was en route to Boston from the winter training quarters in Bridgeport. Among the personnel of the big top was Peter Magnant, a former resident of this city who joined the circus crew a few years ago. While the locomotive was stopped for water Mr. Magnant was given an opportunity to renew several acquaintances and explained various features of the three ring caravan to his old friends.

It appears that brook trout in this section have become spoiled sons of the rapids, according to a number of fishermen who report that the fish can no longer be lured to the hook baited with common every day worms or night crawlers. Perhaps the county game officials could offer some satisfactory explanation of this queer incidence that is occurring regularly in Windham county brooks. About a week ago, the fish were feted with millions of perch fry, an un-matured species of fish dumped into the streams for food.

Committees for the 50th annual graduation exercises of Putnam high school have been appointed by members of the senior class. The phrase, "He conquers who conquers himself," has been selected as the class motto. The committees named are as follows: Stunt day committee, Donald MacLearn, Edna Kent, Lauretta Gildard, Winifred Lepire; committee on class motto, Dorothy Whitehouse, Eleanor Richardson, Edna Kent, Philip Maynard; orchestra committee: Robert Bulger, Manuel Anas; printing, Norman Sherlock, Winifred Lepire, George Connell.

In the city court this morning a fine of $1 and costs of court was imposed upon J. L. Griffin of Chapel street, who pleaded guilty to a charge of refusal to produce his operator's license, which was preferred against him by Patrolman Benoni Durand. Judge M. H. Geissler was on the bench and imposed the fine.

JEWETT CITY

AGAINST MILK ORDINANCE, BUT FOR CURB-TO-CURB ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, April 28.—The largest attendance at a meeting of the freemen of the borough ever noted here was that of Monday evening, in Rioux hall, after an adjournment had been taken from the town hall, which was inadequate to accommodate the over 300 assembled. Warden E. J. Jodoin called the meeting to order and presented the following ordinance for action: Section 1. On and after Jan. 1, 1931, no milk or cream shall be sold in the borough of Jewett City except the same has been produced from herds or from cows free from tuberculosis, as determined by the official tuberculin test and retest, made in a manner and by a veterinarian approved by the commissioner on domestic animals; provided, however, that if the milk or cream has been subjected to the process commonly known as pasteurization under specifications provided by law the requirement for the tuberculin test need not apply. Section 2. Any person violating any provision of this ordinance shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than $100. Signed, George H. Jennings, health officer.

The meeting was addressed by Health Officer Jennings and by Millard Knowlton, M.D., of the Connecticut state department of health, bureau of preventable diseases of Hartford, and by W. J. Warner, deputy dairy and food commissioner, also of Hartford. Following remarks by several from the floor and upon motion of Rev. G. F. Goodenough this ordinance was unanimously rejected.

The matter of new highway construction, as contained in the warning, from Slater avenue to Green avenue was debated at considerable length by a dozen speakers, all of whom were in favor of a curb-to-curb cement highway. Estimates of cost were read by the warden. On motion of Mr. Goodenough, it was voted to place in the hands of the board of borough government the matter of securing the building of the road, from curb to curb, between the points stated in the warning in whatever manner they shall deem advisable. Another meeting will be called for necessary appropriations, also to consider a further road project to Brown avenue, or to the north borough line.

ROSS TOURISTS RETURN AFTER 10,000 MILE TRIP

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, April 28—Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ross returned Monday safe and sound from a trip to California, overland by automobile and return. They have covered close to 10,000 miles, by water through the Panama canal.

During the tour Mr. Ross wrote 31 letters to this correspondent. All of these, which told of sights, scenes and experiences, which were read with much interest, and profit have been published by The Bulletin as received. The party returned from New York in a new car, purchased in San Diego, Cal. Among other remembrances, Mr. Ross brought to his two friends, Warden E. J. Jodoin and Lionel E. Boucher, each, a Mexican sombrero. These wonderful hats, with a spread as wide as an umbrella, he purchased during one of his trips over the Mexican border. Away since early in November, the party was of one accord Monday in declaring, that the experience of getting back home, and the first view of the old homestead on the hill, were hardly to be outclassed by any of the many wonders of the west.

Watched the Eclipse

Smoked glass was at a premium all over the borough Monday afternoon when people took a peek at the eclipse of the sun. The sky was cloudless here and local visiability was perfect. One local woman, who has lived over a half century, and had never seen an eclipse, was induced to peep through the corner of a glass darkly. "Now," said a friend, "that is good luck for you, and tomorrow morning you may find a ten dollar bill under your bed." The woman was there with the goods when she answered, "Well, if I do, it will be one that I put there myself."

MANY FRIENDS SORROW FOR DEATH OF MELL BABY

Reginald Harry Mell, infant son of Frank A. and Martha L. Mell of Lisbon, died Friday noon at the Backus hospital, Norwich, after an illness of only a few hours. He was born July 11, 1929. Everybody loved him for he had such a sweet disposition. He was known as the "Community Baby." He is mourned by parents, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Davis and Mrs. Clarence Mell, uncles and aunts and one cousin. Also a great grandmother. A host of friends also sorrow for him.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon with prayer at the home of his parents followed by public services at Newent Congregational church, at two o'clock.

Rev. Wm. J. Reynolds conducted the services. Mrs. Adam Medick, Jr., sang Safe in the Arms of Jesus and Lead Kindly Light. The bearers were four uncles, Hugh Jr., George and Theodore Davis and Harold Mell. Beautiful floral tributes came from the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Davis and family, Mrs. Clarence Mell and Harold Mell, Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, Dobbie Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Davis and Bertha Davis, Miss Bessie Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Hull, Mrs. Jesse Phillips and Mrs. Sterry, the Helmboldt family, Annie and Caroline Hoffman, James and Bessie McCluggage, G. Curtis Hull, Helen Hull and Sarah Adams, Mr. and Mrs. John Perkins and family, Mr. and Mrs. Leon James, Lisbon grange, Newent Ladies' Aid society, Thames Past Grands association, Helena Kaempfe, Mr. and Mrs. James Proctor. Relatives were present from Jewett City, Lisbon, Norwich, New London, Providence, Pawtucket and Griswold. Burial was in the Ames cemetery annex.

Local passenger service is now totally removed from public interest, as far as the New Haven railroad is concerned, so the thriller of two north-bound Ringling Bros. circus trains which passed over the local iron Monday, failed of a proper gallery. Some of the older hearts quickened up a bit as long-past times were recalled when there was water to be carried to the elephants. Probably the days of the big tops are gone from this burg forever, yet there still remains a member or two of the old guard, who although caring nothing for the circus himself, would mighty quick, if opportunity were offered, take his grandchildren to see the animals, buy a bag of peanuts, and get a "long one" of that one-time pink lemonade.

Is Miss Jewett City

Miss Gertrude Casper won the name of Miss Jewett City Saturday evening at the Bijou hall. She was gowned in blue with light colored shoes and hat to match. The judges declare that they found the winner to be a very charming young woman indeed. The prize was awarded by John Parish, director of the American Polish corporation.

Traffic Officer William Blake is now assigned steadily for that duty while road construction is going on in the borough. John McCarthy, has been sworn in and is on duty daily at Main and School streets.

"Our Gang" won the second game of the season by defeating the R. G. S. 12 to 4. The game was played Sunday at Ashland park, the winners' lineup being: Charles Brochu, catcher; Edwin Walazak, pitcher; Walter Nowakowski, first base; Donald Nicols, shortstop; Joe Skocyzlas, second base; Edmond Gaska, third base; Fred Lamirand, left field; Lawrence Belisle, center field; Albert Belisle, right field.

Albert Allen of Providence has been visiting his sister, Mrs. J. T. Stewart.

Mrs. William Nofle lies in a critical condition at her home on North Main street. She was brought from Backus hospital in the ambulance to her home, Monday morning.

The girls of Miss Virginia Goodenough's Sunday school class are planning an entertainment to be given for the benefit of the new Sunday school singing books. They are to present a play Ma Cucu's Family as a part of the program.

LEARN HOW TO SWIM

April hasn't warmed us up quite enough as yet to create any great amount of interest in swimming in the river, at the beach or even at the old swimmin' hole, but the appeal is sure to come sooner or later and when it does it will be well to know how to take care of yourself in the water before venturing to do stunts which may involve a sacrifice of life.

Thus, even though the weather is a bit cold, it is a timely step that is being taken in certain of the cities, Willimantic included, in opening Y. M. C. A. tanks for the free instruction of those within certain ages in the art of swimming.

There is a desire on the part of most youngsters to want to know how to swim. It is a laudable ambition and it is unfortunate that more of them do not have the opportunity to get some real instructions. There are those who can boast of the fact that they learned to swim by being pushed off a float, tipped over from a rowboat or rushed into the water beyond their depth. They succeeded where many others drowned, or came near it. Such a method may be all right if one likes it, but much more can be said in favor of teaching boys and girls the rudiments of swimming. It is something that everyone in good health ought to know. There is no telling when it will come in handy as a matter of protection for self or others, to say nothing of the pleasure that goes with the ... wholesome exercise. ... to the shore for bath- ... hose who venture into ... or a dip, should know ... iere are many deaths each year from drowning because of the failure to acquire a knowledge of how to take care of oneself in the water. There is no telling when an emergency situation will develop, no way of knowing when a canoe is going to overturn or when you are going to step in a hole where the water is deep. Knowing how to swim doesn't necessarily mean that persons must take wild chances in the water, or to tax their endurance unjustly. It is, nevertheless, a part of a person's education and each and every opportunity that is opened for young people to learn how to swim should be grasped. If everyone knew how to swim fewer would be drowned.

THE DEMANDS AT COLUMBUS

Ever since the fire in the Ohio penitentiary there has been a demand on the part of certain leaders among the convicts in that institution for the removal of Warden Thomas. That effort has been blocked by the governor, who has insisted upon a complete inquiry as to the facts. It may be revealed from the investigation that the warden ought to go, but it is not the purpose of the governor to drop him simply because leaders among the convicts are demanding it.

Those leaders are men who have demonstrated the fact, from the very fact that they are in the penitentiary, that they cannot get along with the public in general and respect the laws which govern society. That being so, it would not be surprising if they found things which did not satisfy them behind prison walls. But the fact that they encounter things not to their liking does not necessarily mean that they ought not to prevail or that the warden is to blame for them. Thus when a clamor comes from the convicts for the removal of any official, it is certain that their complaints must be well substantiated before they can expect favorable action.

The governor of Ohio is thus correct in insisting upon getting all the facts leading up to and during the tragic fire which occurred in the penitentiary. It is to be expected that any who are guilty of misdeeds or inefficiency, of cruelty or improper treatment, will be dealt with in accord with the disclosures. It seems apparent, even now, that the blame for the overcrowding at the institution or the efforts that have been made to prevent a wholesale escape cannot react upon the warden. If Ohio has maintained a prison that was inadequate it was not the fault of the warden. If he has been obliged to govern a crowded institution and take measures which would not prevail under other conditions, it would seem to be the failure of the state.

It is an old story that those in prison many times fail to get as much consideration as they think they should have. They have made themselves dangerous characters requiring restraint. They often demonstrate their viciousness under emergency conditions and they can hardly expect that their demands are going to be heeded just because they make them and accompany them with a rumpus. It is one thing to make demands and it is another to show that there is a real basis for them.

STRUGGLING WITH IMMIGRATION

After the upper house of congress acted favorably upon the abolition of the national origins provision in the immigration bill it proceeded to engage in such a lot of amending that it was needed for a grand mixup and it was in the interest of getting the situation cleared up that the bill was referred back to the committee. The effort seems to have been to create such a situation that for every step ahead there would be a step backward. Progress under such a plan was impossible and so recognized.

When the bill was brought out the purpose was to place a limitation upon the immigration from Latin-American countries. It was a provision that would be certain to arouse opposition for several reasons. It could be depended upon to create resentment among the republic affected, inasmuch as there is already an unfounded feeling of suspicion among certain of them relative to the position of the United States in western hemisphere affairs. It is a feature that is objectionable to the employers of much help in agricultural activities in the southwest during certain parts of the year, and there are those who maintain that there should be no quota restriction placed upon immigration from countries making up the American continents, these of course including Canada.

The bringing forth of the bill provided an opportunity for repealing the national origins plan and it was successful. The following day the action was reversed but provision was made for nearly cutting in two the annual number of immigrants admitted. That meant that there were two methods of dealing with the restriction of immigration and the longer the senate battled with the bill the more it became involved.

Sending the measure back to the committee should result in taking out the snarls but there is no telling what will happen when it reappears. If the national origins plan should be eliminated it would please the president and many others who believe that desirable immigrants are discriminated against and that the plan can never be made to work with accuracy, but it has long since been revealed that what pleases the president is sufficient to obtain the opposition of the senate.

BETTER HOMES WEEK

A good home is the ambition of most people. That is the heritage of many but it is the goal of others. To have a good home for many means that there must be better homes and the effort that is being made this week in behalf of such a movement is one that may well arouse interest and support in all parts of this country.

A good home doesn't mean the same to everyone. It must of necessity vary because of different conditions. A good home, even in localities where the facilities are available in others cannot be obtained, is nevertheless possible. There is always room for improvement, regardless of the point on the scale where one starts. As head of the Better Homes in America movement, Secretary Wilbur of the department of the interior points out that "Many who are accustomed to conveniences which are termed the 'roots' of the house, only dimly appreciate the burden of carrying water by hand, of tending oil lamps, or trying to keep warm in winter without modern heating equipment, or the hardships of living in an isolated spot where there is no telephone nor even a near neighbor. They do not stop to realize that millions of our families are still without many or all of the every-day conveniences to which they are accustomed. Every one of us who honestly sets about improving his own home, or who starts to buy or build a house, soon realizes that it would take a lifetime to become competent to make the best possible decisions in regard to every feature in the house. Since this is a practical world we have to go ahead with what knowledge and experience we can acquire in a comparatively short time."

It is in this connection that the Better Homes in America does its work. It is able to demonstrate through its study the best that can be had within the particular limit and to set forth the various points in a manner that will be of much value to those concerned. In the stimulation of thought along such lines and in giving assistance, the movement is responding to a genuine need. Because of it, interest in better homes and the realization of hopes in that direction are not only possible but actually being accomplished.

REMINDING CONGRESS

While the president is well aware of the fact that congress has not shown speed in dealing with certain of the recommendations he has made for legislation in order to bring about more effective criminal law enforcement, and while he knows that to tell the senate what he favors invariably means contrary action, he does not refrain, nevertheless, from keeping congress informed of the things which need to be done and have not been done, while the date for adjournment is rapidly approaching.

In reminding congress that action should be hastened on certain law bills he is able to point out the existence of conditions which ought not to prevail. While attention is being directed to the overcrowded condition in the Ohio penitentiary it cannot be overlooked that this same condition in federal penitentiaries was placed before congress almost a year ago and again last December.

President Hoover makes point of the fact that certain progress has been made in regard to remedial legislation, but he is mindful of his responsibility and unwilling to let the time dwindle away without jogging the minds of the law-makers. What the president is asking for does not conflict with the plea which he has made for economy. It is apparent that what he refers to involves emergency conditions. Some of the recommendations involve outlays and some do not, but conditions which need correction now and have needed attention for the past year at least are simply going to grow worse through neglect. Before developments on a par with those in Ohio occur, the president wants action and he has a right to expect it. Failure puts the responsibility on congress.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Cheer up, May will soon be here.

If, as is claimed by certain mariners, the Gulf stream is nearer the Atlantic coast than usual, how cold would it be this week if it were in its customary place?

There was an impressive silence when the naval treaty was being signed. You'll not have to hold your hand on your ear when the senate begins its treatment.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, April 28—New England, under Tilson leadership, stood steadfast for the smaller appropriation for the veterans, in order that the sum asked for should not exceed an amount the president could be counted on accepting. The Rankin bill put in so many prohibitive amendments that it swamped the bill, and no one expects the president will sign it, unless the senate eliminates the objectionable features.

The date of adjournment still hangs in the balance. The latest suggestion is that when the appropriation bills are all out of the way, and nothing left on hand but the London treaty, which is considered only by the senate, that congress adjourn, and then the president calls an extra session of the senate to consider the treaty. That would enable the members of the house to look after their political candidacies for reelection, and not interfere with any of their congressional duties.

Whether or not such a move would meet the approval of the president is not certain, but the suggestion is being whispered into attentive ears.

Under the Constitution nothing longer than a three days' recess can be taken except by consent of the two bodies, but the president can call either branch into special session without calling the other, after an adjournment is taken. It would be no innovation to do so in this case.

Digging for sunken treasure, which is nothing new, has recently come to the front, and Captain Kidd, and the British ship Hussah stand in the front row of submarine search. Way back in 1639 ancestors of the New York Gardiners purchased from the Indians land in New York harbor. That was Lieut. Lien Gardiner, who was of the king's foot guard. The family intermarried with the Tylers, Julia Gardiner being President Tyler's second wife. Part of the land purchased in 1639 remains today in the Gardiner family, and searchers for the Captain Kidd treasures have long believed it lay off the Gardiner land. The story runs that in those early days not only did the Gardiner's know of the sinking of the treasure, but later when search was being made, the mistress of the mansion aided the gold diggers, feeding them with excellent food cooked in the mansion of the great kitchen. But so far as known none of the sunken treasure has ever been recovered.

About that time a British ship, the Hussah, bringing large sums of gold with which to pay off the British soldiers in America, was sunk somewhere in the vicinity of New York harbor. Search for that treasure has almost outstripped that for the Captain Kidd gold. From time to time permission has been granted to search for the Hussah the government going so far as to accord protection to the gold hunters. The latest move has been made by Simon Lake of Connecticut, whose request for protection from interference while conducting the search, is now before the United States treasury deartment, but not yet answered.

There have been "hot times in the old town" since the immigration, rivers and harbors and the Parker nomination came to the front. Men ordinarily polite, have called names, threatened to fight out their differences in old fashion fisticuff ways, pranced up and down the aisles, shouting and gesticulating, in spite of the pounding of the speaker's and the vice president's gavels, and loud calls for order.

Sometimes a representative making what he regarded as a most convincing argument, was forced to yield the floor, when the shouts of "Vote, vote, vote" echoed from all parts of the chamber. Everybody wanted to talk—nobody wanted to listen.

The only time it was quiet, was when Representative Rogers, not able to make herself heard on the Veterans bill, from the seat she occupied, trotted demurely down the aisle to a place of vantage in front of the presiding officer. Turning her back to the 400 representatives, she looked no bigger than the proverbial "pint of cider," as they say way down east. She won her point on rules, if she was not able to muster votes to sustain her bill, which had been approved by the legion and other veterans' organization.

The Star Spangled Banner waves as the accepted national anthem by double authority, for by unanimous vote of the house, it was so accepted this week. All that now remains is to have it accepted by the senate and receive presidential signature. Then it becomes the authoritative national anthem not only by presidential order but also by act of congress. Pacifists and pureists failed to win out. The former claimed it was too war-like in sentiment and the latter that its melody had been used hundreds of years ago as a popular drinking song in Great Britain. However, that may be, the overwhelming sentiment among soldiers, sailors and veterans of our several wars, that no other anthem should take its place, won the victory. After passed by the senate it would require the double action of congress and the president to set it aside. The president cannot undo the acts of congress; and congress can not set aside a presidential order. Apparently there will be little or no opposition in the senate when the measure comes up for action.

"Did you say there are 13 at the table, and that it may be a hoodoo at the fall election?" queried Representative Stobbs of Massachusetts, as one of his unofficial guests, wearing a troubled expression, whispered in his ear, just as his other guests took their seats.

With a broad smile, Stobbs called to Representative Wigglesworth, sitting at the other end of the long table, "Go get Fletcher Hale of New Hampshire. Tell him to come a-running, and save the day!" Off raced Wigglesworth, both he and Stobbs ardently protesting, "I am not afraid of 13 but want everybody to be happy." Wigglesworth found Representative Hale lunching at the speaker's table, with several members of the house, but Hale was game; he forsook them and scurried back with Wigglesworth to the Stobbs luncheon, another chair was brought, and peace and happiness was restored.

Glancing round the long table Stobbs, Wigglesworth and Hale, who had formed the emergency crew to save Massachusetts election from a possible 13 at the table hoodoo, saw the original disturber of the peace placidly eating shad roe, without a trace of guile or superstition showing on the surface.

This happened at the luncheon Stobbs gave at the capitol, in honor of Mrs. Frank Roe Batchelder, vice chairman of the Massachusetts republican state committee. His guests were members of the Massachusetts delegation, and several unofficial guests.

At her own request, the coffin in which she expects to be buried was constructed at Ocracoke, N. C., for Mrs. Fannie Howard, member of one of the oldest families of this banks community. It was placed in the sun parlor of the cottage in which she lives.

A CHANGE OF MIND

As usual, Lois waved to her husband from the side porch as he drove off to begin his round of calls. Then suddenly she signaled him to wait. "Oh, Bruce," hurrying up to him, "I want to remind you again about my party this afternoon. Be sure and stop in, if only for a little while."

Dr. Snowdon made a good-natured grimace, at which Lois added hastily, "You know you promised me you would, so please don't forget. You've never showed yourself at one of my club affairs, and," artfully, "you're a whole lot better looking than some of the other husbands I've seen!"

"Is this taffy or just applesauce?" He smiled shrewdly. "Sure you haven't got me lined up to deliver a talk on 'How to eat all you want and dwindle,' or some equally palpitating topic?"

"What suspicious minds some people have!" she evaded. "Now Bruce try to get here by 4 o'clock, and before you present yourself be sure to put on your new suit, and see that your tie harmonizes with it and that your sox match your tie. These women are so critical about such things." Having dutifully promised to attend and to garb himself in his best, Dr. Snowdon finally was permitted to drive off.

The much discussed party began, progressed and came to an end, but Dr. Snowdon did not arrive. "I might have known he wouldn't come," reflected Lois. "A doctor always can fall back on that good old alibi 'had to make a call' when he doesn't want to do things!"

She picked up two plates of cake from the table in the dining room, pushed open the swing door with her foot and entered the kitchen. "Why, Bruce!" Surprise, anger and disappointment were blended in the exclamation. "So you were right here in the house. What in the world are you doing?"

"Operating on a little friend of mine." He was bending over a ragged looking pigeon which Jimmie, the janitor's boy, was holding. "Why, honey, is the party over? Well, I'm surely sorry. I came in late, and was just about to make my grand entrance through the dining room when I happened to see little Brown-Ring at the window."

Lois herself had given the pigeon that name because of the ring of brown that encircled its neck. For some weeks it had been alighting on the window sill to pick up crumbs. Brown-Ring was crippled by a wad of string which in time had so tightly wound itself that one toe was already destroyed.

"You know, Lois, it's troubled me for some time, seeing the poor bird in this condition, so when I came through the kitchen and saw Brown-Ring on the sill, I decided to fix him up right then. And I called Jimmie to hold the bird while I did it."

"Yeah, and say, Mrs. Snowdon, the way Dr. Snowdon caught him was pretty slick, I'll say!" exclaimed Jimmie. "He made a snare of some twine and put some crumbs inside it, and when Brown-Ring stepped into it he was caught, just as easy." Lois nodded, but her eyes were upon the sharp-pointed surgical knife as her husband expertly snipped at the string where it had made a groove into the foot.

"And you know my dog, Dash?" excitedly. "Well, this afternoon Dr. Snowdon fixed his paw. He cut it on some glass and Dr. Snowdon cleaned it and bandaged it and everything!" The physician looked up apologetically.

"That's why I was late getting into the house."

As Jimmie passed Lois on his way out with the pigeon to set it free, Lois reached out and stroked the bird's little head.

"I suppose you'll never forgive me," ruefully, observed her husband, picking up pieces of dirty twine from his best suit, "for bothering with a tramp pigeon when I should have—" Swiftly Lois leaned down and kissed his tanned cheek.

"I love you for it," she said—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 28—One day each week during a session of Congress, the house sits as the board of aldermen of the city of Washington. It is "district day" on the calendar.

But the real big local show for voteless Washington always comes when the annual appropriation bill for the district is on its passage. Nobody else in the country hears much about that.

Due to the prohibition fuss this year—and also to the relentless energy with which Senator Cole Blease has been filling the Congressional Record for months with Washington police news items, there was a lot said about the way the Washington police are recruited.

Time was when every Washington policeman, by law, had to be a veteran of the army, navy or marine corps. That has gone by now, however, and they are picked from a civil service list.

Representative Holaday of Illinois, head of a sub committee that explored the police situation for the house, found that this civil service origin of Washington "coppers" had in it no educational qualification whatever. He told the house it reminded him of the story of the college footballer who was asked just two questions on his entrance examinations; what color is blue litmus paper; and what is electricity? He answered "red" to the first and "I don't know" to the second so he was given a standing 50 per cent and passed.

Educational Test

For Washington police job applicants Holaday found this educational test, taken from a civil service examination blank:

"Which of the following is the chief reason why a police department is necessary:

"To enforce law and order.
"To control traffic.
"To prevent criminals from escaping from jail.
"To record finger prints.
"To direct strangers."

All the hopeful applicant had to do was to check the duty he thought of greatest importance. No record of what most of them thought about it was available.

Objection

Holaday said a revision of civil service examinations for policemen was in process and that the committee proposed to require that they have the equivalent of an eighth-grade education.

"If the constitution contained that requirement as to qualifications for members of congress a number of men would not have been able to serve here," said Cochran of Missouri.

"But we are talking about Washington's police," countered Holaday.

"And if this proviso becomes law, that outstanding hero, Sergeant York, could not become a district policeman," said Cochran.

"I expect that is the fact," answered Holaday.

And there you are.

Civil service authorities defended their course on the ground that what they were seeking was to test the intelligence, not the education of applicants. "Horse sense" was the quality sought. It ought to be styled "motor sense" these days.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Trout Fishing

Mr. Editor: What fine sport it must be to catch a lot of six or seven inch trout. One has got to be a clever fisherman to do it, and if you should happen to show them to some real sport he will want to soak you in the eye. I know a lot of fishermen and if you should find a fish under ten inches in their basket they would turn red in the face and apologize. All the sportsmen I have talked to in the past three years think that a stream stocked with six or seven inch trout should be closed to the public for one or two years and if the fish show they are not getting feed enough stock with food fish for the trout.

Veterans Legislation

Mr. Editor: During mid-February, the house committee on World war veterans legislation was considering two bills of vital importance to tens of thousands of disabled service men who are not drawing compensation from the government. The first bill was the one introduced by Royal C. Johnson of South Dakota, chairman of the committee. It embodies the recomendations for amendments to the World war veterans acts made by the Louisville national convention of the Legion. Perhaps the most important effect of the passage of this bill would be automatically to entitle to disability compensation a large number of veterans suffering certain chronic constitutional diseases. The Johnson bill would extend to men suffering from chronic constitutional disease the benefit of the presumption of service connection, providing the disabled can prove the existence of the diseases to a disabling extent prior to January, 1925. In other words, the Johnson bill would give to men suffering from these diseases the same presumptive service connection rights which are now given men suffering from tuberculosis, or mental and nervous disorders.

The Legion's national rehabilitation committee has long argued before congress that bright's disease and diabetes develop as slowly as tuberculosis and neuro-psychiatric ailments. Similarly, many other common diseases are known to require years between onset and the manifestation of disabling effects.

The second bill to amend the World war veterans act was introduced by John E. Rankin, representative from Mississippi. It would accomplish more far reaching results than the Johnson bill, and it would do this principally by eliminating January, 1925, as the arbitrary date for presumptive service connection and establishing instead the date January 1st, 1930. It would make automatically eligible for compensation thousands of service men now in hospitals, suffering from tuberculosis and mental diseases, but not drawing compensation for the reason they are unable to present medical and legal proof that their diseases had been developed to a disabling degree prior to January 1, 1925. The Legion's national legislative committee bulletin for January 25 made this comment on the comprehensive provisions of the Rankin bill: "Passage of the Rankin bill would cure the great majority of difficulties now facing disabled veterans, as it would bring compensation to a large proportion of the uncompensated veterans now in hospitals, and in addition, would immediately clear up thousands of claims which are either pending or have been denied because of inability to establish service connection under the comptroller's interpretation of existing law. The veterans bureau estimates that the first year cost of this bill would be $42,000,000. While this in itself seems a large sum, it is less than one-third of the annual refund on income taxes.

The house has accepted the Rankin proposal to enlarge the scope of the bill, Mr. Johnson has moved that the name of the measure be changed to the Rankin bill. Last Thursday the house by a large majority passed this bill. It now goes before the senate where there may be considerable opposition. This bill must be passed in justice to these disabled veterans and the American Legion, on behalf of these disabled, ask that those who realize that they for whom the war will never be over are entitled to what few comforts the passage of this bill will bring, that they bring pressure on their senators to vote for the early passage of the Rankin bill. During the time that this matter has been prolonged these uncompensated veterans have been dying at the rate of about 72 a day. Many of them died in want and invariably as a result of their inability to secure the necessary comforts of life. It is reported that in the event of the passing of this bill by the senate that President Hoover would veto it. Representative Rankin doubts that he would take such a step but in the events that he does he states that it would be passed over the veto and that the battle would continue until the necessary relief was secured for hese unfortunate men who offered their lives and sacrificed their health in defense of their country during the dark days of the World war.

Write or wire your senators without delay to vote and work for the early passage of this bill and you will receive the grateful thanks of many thousands of deserving and helpless ex-service men.

JOS. BELLEFLEUR,
District Commander, The American Legion.

Wise Cracks

Mr. Editor: I have heard people say and I have taken this with a certain amount of leeway that they never are worried nor do they lose their mental poise. Yet, there are times when certain things get on our nerve and this will perhaps explain what is meant. A little girl was told by her mother that she had been very disobedient all day and she would have to go right to bed. She had not been up in bed but a very short time when she called down and said: "Mother, I want a drink." Mother said: "You go right to sleep for you don't want a drink." Silence for a few minutes and then: "Mother, I want a drink." Mother's answer was the same. Again silence, then the same request came down, "I want a drink of water," and then mother said, "If you don't go right to sleep I am coming up to whip you." Five minutes later: "Mother, when you come up to whip me, will you bring me a glass of water?" Who could resist such an appeal? Has this ever happened in your house, for no doubt you have a little fairy in the home.

I was coming in from Detroit at one time and going into the dining car I ordered some coffee and toast, with a request to the waiter to eliminate the eggs. He went to the chef who shook his head and then he returned to me and said: "What was it you all said?" I told him I wanted coffee and toast and eliminate the eggs. He looked kind of puzzled and went back to the chef, and then back to me and said: "Man, wouldn't you all rather have a poached egg for we can't eliminate the egg for we done broke the eliminator." No, this wasn't Amos and Andy.

A sparrow cop, while on his rounds noticed a young woman sitting on a park bench reading a paper, which she would put down now and then and laugh. The cop watched her go through this. As she laid the paper down and laughed he became interested. She finally laid the paper down, took off her shoes and stockings, turned the stockings inside out and put them on again. He walked over to her and said: "What is the big idea?" "Why," she said, "I have been reading a divorce case in the paper and it was such hot stuff I had to turn the hose on myself."

What a little thing changes the tenor of our ways and reveals the calling of some of us! Just recently, a young lady entered a drug store and asked for an egg shake and the clerk for a moment was in a trance and said: "Pardon me, light or dark?" A vaudeville artist was telling a friend he was going to South Africa to do six months. His friend advised him to stay away for the ostrich lays an egg that weighs two to four pounds.

A man went to a doctor and complained that his hair was coming out and wouldn't he give him something to keep it in. The doctor gave him a pill box.

This happened in school. The teacher told the scholars to write an account of a baseball game. One boy turned in: Rain—No game.

A man who owned a dog talked to him thus: "You are only a dog but I wish I were you. When you go to bed you just turn around three times and then lie down and sleep. When I go to bed I have to lock up, shut the windows, put coal in the furnace, wind the clock, then I have to unlock the door again, put out the cat, lock the door, undress myself, stub my toe in the dark. My wife wakes up and scolds, because I make so much noise and the baby wakes up and cries and I have to take her and walk around the house until she goes to sleep again. Finally, I get to bed in time to get up again. But you, when you get up you just stretch yourself, scratch your neck a little and you are ready for the day. But me, I have to light the fire, carry out the ashes, drop a pan on the floor, put the kettle on, scrap with the wife and get my own breakfast. You lay around all day, have lots of fun. I have to work all day, and have plenty of trouble. When you die you are dead. When I die I go somewhere else and start all over again. I ask you, who has the dog's life, me or you?"

On April 1st, a certain M. D. had a telephone call at 1 a. m. with a request that he see if the electric arc light at the corner of his street was on. After a lot of trouble he raised the curtain and then phoned back: "Yes, it is on." The next request was if he would be kind enough to go and blow it out. Who could refuse such a reasonable request. All right, you will have to laugh for yourself I can't do it for you.

YOUR HEALTH

How Do You Stand?

By Nina M. Munson, R. N., Washington, D. C.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

We need only to look about us to be forcefully reminded that "Good posture is an asset which very few possess." But it is well within the scope of every individual, not afflicted with diseases of the bones, to possess this asset.

Ill health can very often point an accusing finger at poor posture. Poor digestion; poor circulation; restricted lung expansion, resulting in improper or insufficient interchange of gases in the lungs and depriving the blood of needed oxygen with which to carry on its work; and poor elimination—these are only a few of the effects of poor posture upon the body. The drooping of the shoulders crowds the lungs and heart, and pushes the abdominal organs downward. A general relaxation of the abdominal muscles follows the relaxation of the shoulders.

There are also three curvatures of the spine which may be caused from faulty posture in standing, walking, and sitting.

A man was indignant at this accusation from his physician: "You have a crease in your stomach. Poor posture is causing your trouble." On a bet that the doctor was wrong he lost the bet, for correcting his posture cured his trouble.

The very first essential in possessing good posture is the desire backed by the will. The old habit of "comfortable" relaxation must be broken, and this can only be accomplished through constant effort and thought in holding the body in erect position.

Our personality and character are to a large degree portrayed in our bodily carriage. The individual who walks with dragging step and sagging shoulders, and with facial muscles equally relaxed, can not impart much inspiration or confidence. His posture lacks the evidence of health or success. Good posture speaks of energy, vitality, strength, and well-being; of determination, ideals, and a vision of something to be accomplished.

Posture affects our mental state to a surprising degree. The next time you feel that the world is entirely against you, examine your posture, and as one writer expressed it "pick yourself up by the ears." Hands at the sides, chest up, chin slightly in, shoulder-blades flat, abdomen in and up, weight on the balls of the feet with the feet parallel,—this is correct posture—the natural upright position. It is not tense or stiff, but is comfortable, graceful, and health-promoting. It holds the body in the best position for the performance of its natural functions.

Stand beside the edge of an open door. If you find a straight line can be drawn from the ear, through the middle of the shoulder, hip, knee, and slightly forward of the heel, you are in good posture.

If you are not, you know what to do about it.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Uses His Heels for a Purpose

Some people take peculiar joy
In seeking beauty to destroy.
—Peter Rabbit.

A little bramble-tangle was growing right near where Peter had found the Columbine. He could sit in that bramble-tangle and be safe and at the same time look at and admire the nodding blossoms. So Peter made himself very comfortable there. From time to time he dozed off. Between each little nap he watched the Columbine blossoms as the Merry Little Breezes swayed them this way and that.

It was along in the middle of the morning that Peter heard voices. They were the voices of children. They were laughing and shouting and Peter knew by the sound that they were in the lower part of the Old Pasture. At first he paid little attention to them. Then curiosity led him to go see what they were doing. He didn't have to go far, for by this time they were halfway up to where he had been sitting.

Peeping out from beneath some brambles, Peter saw two boys and a girl. In the hands of all three were flowers and Peter saw that they were looking for more flowers. He heard the little girl give a shriek of delight when she found a patch of exquisite arbutus. From where Peter sat he could watch her. He saw her tear it up, root and all. Afterwards she broke off some of the roots. Peter wanted to stamp angrily at her. He knew it was thoughtlessness on her part, but he also knew that in time there would be no arbutus left if every one were so thoughtless. Later he saw one of the boys do the same thing.

Some of the flowers in the hands of these children were sadly wilted. All their beauty was gone. Peter knew just how lovely they had been growing and he couldn't understand at all why these children should want those sickly, drooping blossoms, which no longer were beautiful. But they did want them and they wanted more, for they were searching here, there and everywhere.

Then Peter remememebred the Columbine blossoms up on the rocky ridge. Those children would be sure to find them and, if they found them, they would take not only the blossoms, but the whole plant as well. At least, that is what Peter feared. He must do something about it. Yes, sir, he must do something about it and he must do it quickly. But what could he do? He couldn't tell those little folk that they shouldn't pick the flowers. Of course not. Then Peter remembered how often he had been chased by boys.

After him raced the children

"I'll have to use my long heels to save those flowers," said he to himself, and hopped out into one of the winding cowpaths.

Up this path Peter hopped. Presently, just ahead of him, he saw one of the boys. Peter stopped. Then he thumped the ground with his long hindfeet. The boy heard the thump and turned. Of course, he saw Peter at once. Right then and there he forgot all about the flowers. "A Rabbit!" he shouted. "Here's a Rabbit!"

At once the other little boy and the little girl came running over. Peter dodged into the bushes at one side. The children threw stones and sticks. Peter ran out. Away he went, lipperty-lipperty-lip, down the little cowpath and dodged into a bramble-tangle. After him raced the children. They saw him in the bramble-tangle and tried to drive him out. When he saw a good chance he slipped out and away he went, lipperty-lipperty-lip, for another bramble-tangle. The children followed—excited, shouting and out of breath. Peter wasn't at all afraid. It was all a game to him. And so, little by little, he led them far away from that part of the Old Pasture where the Columbine was growing. Then, when they were quite tired out, Peter gave the children the slip.

Once more he made his way back to the little bramble-tangle where he could watch the Columbine blossoms. "Of course, you don't know it," said he, "but I saved you with my long heels. Why, oh why, do people want to destroy such beautiful things!"

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Pickering Governor Company, Portland.

The beginning of rapid progress in the 19th century was marked by the development and use of steam, through which came power adaptions and more rapid transportation. After Watt's discovery of steam and its potentialities, the real problem was not in producing, but in controlling it.

In 1861, while running an engine, Thomas R. Pickering saw the necessity for closer regulation, and conceived the idea for a governor employing thin leaf springs in the revolving head portion, which, although of novel design at the time, has proven by its long-time use, the ideal construction for perfect control of steam admission to an engine.

Rumor has it that the necessary springs for experimenting were obtained from Mrs. Pickering's hoop skirt frame, which fact cannot be confirmed at this late day.

Thus, the Pickering Governor company came into being nearly seventy years ago in a small Jersey town during the hectic days of the Civil war. Shortly afterward, the company moved to Portland, where it has been located ever since.

In the hey-day of steam power, nine out of ten of the steam engines produced in this country included Pickering governors as original equipment, and even today they have the largest sale of any such equipment, both at home and abroad.

With the advent of other forms of power, governors have been developed to follow the trend, until today "Pickering" is recognized as a name that stands for perfect power control in many fields. The line of products is necessarily a broad one, in order to meet the various applications that present power control necessitate.

The product—in addition to being supplied direct to steam engine, gasoline motor, steam turbine, water wheel and many other manufacturers—is sold by agents in all parts of this country and the world in general, wherever accurate and dependable control is demanded.

The officers of the company are: Stephen S. Hall, president and treasurer; and George C. Pascall, vice president and secretary.

Always Something New

MAYBE it's true there's nothing new under the sun. But there are certainly new variations of old products and old themes available for the person who wants to take advantage of them.

Sometimes we hear the query, "Where do all the new ideas come from?" The answer, more than likely, is that they come from folks who have something to sell.

Take paper. The manufacturers of paper seem never to empty their bag of new ideas. Constantly we are receiving samples of new papers, new colors in old papers, new ways to use paper, new finishes, and even new ideas for printed messages.

We maintain a careful file of these things and we welcome the opportunity to show them to you at any time. If you'd like to print something different in a letterhead, present your catalog in new dress, or send out an original and novel idea in a folder, telephone us about it and we'll gladly bring to your desk an array of suggestions that will open up new avenues to business for you.

No cost, no obligation. We'll appreciate the opportunity to serve you.

ROUGHAGE IS ESSENTIAL IN REDUCING DIETS

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Ideal Roughage

If you are following a reducing diet, it is doubly important that you take a regular amount of roughage into the system daily. Most reducing diets do not contain a sufficient amount of roughage. The result is constipation—thief of both health and beauty.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is recommended by many doctors and dietitians because it contains the bulk necessary to insure proper elimination.

Also, because it contains the iron needed to help prevent anemia—another danger in reducing diets. ALL-BRAN is not fattening. Its bulk sweeps the system clean of poisonous wastes—helping to promote glorious health and beauty.

A popular way to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is soaked in fruit juice. Try it! It is delicious with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over cereals, salads and soups. It adds flavor to cooked foods and is equally effective. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It is served in restaurants, hotels and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

At the death of his father, 20 years ago, he became cashier of the bank and later its president. He was elected to represent Stonington in the state legislature in 1891 and served on the banking committee. He was a trustee of the Elm Grove Cemetery association.

ELEANOR HUTTON'S MARRIAGE OF NEW LONDON INTEREST

Society is still in the dark regarding the elopement of fashionable Eleanor P. Hutton with the young playwright, Preston Sturges. Miss Hutton made her debut amid a colorful pageant representative of New York society, in 1927. Her mother inherited the millions of her father, inventor of Post cereals. In 1928 she was one of the eight American women presented to the King and Queen of English.

Miss Hutton, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton of New York and Palm Beach, won first prize for her costume at the costume ball held recently at the Everglades club, Palm Beach. She is a graduate of Miss Porter's School in Farmington, where she was the room-mate of Miss Mary Louise Congdon, daughter of Mrs. J. P. Taylor Armstrong, of New London. She was the guest of Miss Congdon at the Yale-Harvard races last June; Miss Congdon toured Europe with her several years ago.

SPECIAL MEETING AUTHORIZES CITY TO BORROW $60,000 FOR CURRENT NEEDS

A special city meeting Monday evening at the town hall voted by resolution to authorize the court of common council to borrow a sum not to exceed $60,000 to provide for the expenses of the city from May 15th until after the annual city meeting in June. This is an annual custom and is more or less a matter of form. The city's fiscal years ends May 15th, and after that date until the city budget is authorized by the annual city meeting in June, there would be no money available for city expenses unless it were borrowed in anticipation of the city tax collections. Until quite recently, as was explained by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, it was the custom for the city to borrow the necessary money without the formality of a vote at a city meeting. The state bank commissioner has ruled, however that no money can be borrowed from banks by the city without the city being authorized to do so by the voters. The resolution authorizing the city to borrow the needed money and a resolution authorizing the common council to appropriate the money for city expenses were adopted by ballot.

Another matter in the call for the meeting was action on a resolution approving a deed from the city of Norwich to Howell S. Bailey, owner of the Bailey property at Burnham square. The purpose of the deed is to determine exactly the southerly boundary line of the Bailey property, or, in other words, to determine the exact sidewalk line, which has, in the past, been somewhat in doubt. This deed is granted in return for the delivery by Mr. Bailey of a deed for certain premises northerly of the premises deeded by the city to Mr Bailey. A resolution approving the deed was adopted, the resolution being introduced by the corporation counsel, Edmund Perkins.

The final matter before the meeting was action on the granting of a right of way, for a pole line, to the Connecticut Light and Power Co., on the Bog Meadow tract, owned by the city. Corporation Counsel Perkins explained that the Connecticut Light and Power Co., is to build another pole line and the layout is so located that the company needs a right of way over a strip of land, 250 feet in width, across the Bog Meadow tract. The right of way is over bog and swamp land. The company is to pay $500 for the right of way which was granted by the adoption of a resolution presented by the corporation counsel. The meeting adjourned about 8:20 o'clock, daylight saving time.

BRINGS EASTERN CHEER TO UNCAS-ON-THAMES

One of the patients at Uncas-on-Thames, with the initials M. R., has written an appreciation of what the holiday fund does for those at the "San" as follows:

Easter at Uncas-on-Thames might well be called a festival of flowers. Patients have cut flowers and small potted plants in all the gay and bright spring colors. At times, the nurses held their breath in wonder whether they would be able to find vases, baskets or holders enough for them. These flowers were sent or brought in by friends and relatives of patients.

In addition to these flowers, large baskets of potted plants are distributed throughout the sanatorium. They decorate each ward, six in all; the men's shack, the women's shack, and the dining rooms, and add to the joyousness of the season. These miniature gardens come to the "San" from the holiday fund.

To many of the patients this fund means Christmas. However, it is used throughout the year to bring cheer in various ways, as the name implies, on holidays. It was started by Mrs. Frederick Byrnes and Miss Mary Richards of Norwich, friends of the "San." As from its beginning, it is now supported by the people of Norwich and nearby towns. Recently, ex-patients who care to do so, and are able to, contribute to it also.

It is at Christmas time, that patients are more conscious of the bounty of the fund. For each patient who remains at the "San," (those who are well enough and who desire to do so may have three days' leave), there is a gift. There are no disappointments for each patient is asked in advance what he or she especially wants. This may be a real necessity for some patients; for others it may be a luxury which would otherwise be denied them, and to a few, more fortunate in friends, relatives and outside contacts, this may be an opportunity of gracious receiving so that a fellow patient may not be made to feel "different".

Thus it is that the holiday fund, started by Mrs. Byrnes and Miss Richards is still carrying on and at this season brings to Uncas-on-Thames, cheer and joy in flowers.

GAVE TRAVEL TALK FOR BUSINESS WOMAN'S CLUB

The Business and Professional Woman's club held its monthly business meeting Monday evening in the parlors of the Church of the Good Shepherd. After a delicious chicken pie supper served by the Ladies' Aid of the church, a short business meeting was held.

Plans for the annual meeting, which will come the first week in June, were discussed and the nominating committee was appointed. At the close of the business meeting, Earle W. Stamm gave a most interesting account of his trip to Honolulu, which he made last September. Six reels of motion pictures taken by Mr. Stamm on the trip were shown. With him the club members journeyed across the wide prairie lands and across the Rockies, stopping in Glacier national park, where snowstorms and zero weather were experienced. They traveled along the Columbia river and saw the salmon and the fisheries. San Francisco, with its Chinatown and wonderful harbor, was most interesting.

Sailing through the Golden Gate, the party spent seven delightful days aboard ship, passing only one other boat on the way to Hawaii. Here visits were made among the natives, surfboat riding was enjoyed at Waikiki beach and trips were made to the volcanoes on some of the uninhabited islands.

Journeying back again across the Pacific, through the Royal Gorge in the Rockies and again across the wheat lands in the middle west, Mr. Stamm and his party arrived in Norwich. The photography in the pictures was exceptionally good. Many very interesting details and incidents of the trip were shown and on the whole the club members had a most delightful and successful journey.

HUNTINGTON HEIRESS HAD FOREBEARS IN NORWICH

The old Samuel Huntington house at Norwich Town, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Welte, 34 East Town street, was once the home of the forebears of Vivienne Maud Huntington of New York, who has recently startled society circles in which she moved by admitting that she eloped, March 13, with Alfred Cecil Durban, an English newsboy.

Vivienne is the daughter of a millionaire, heiress to an old fortune and an old distinguished name. Her husband is the son of a butcher and had a newsstand when he married the Huntington heiress.

They have now left the old world for the new and arrived a few days ago at St. John, New Brunswick. They are to make their home in Toronto.

ANOTHER CONTINUANCE IN MARQUARDT CASE

Further continuance in the case of Henry Marquardt, former tax collector, of the borough of Groton, charged with the embezzlement of about $16,000 of the borough funds, was made in Groton town court yesterday pending completion of an audit to determine definitely the amount of defalcation. The case was continued two weeks.

Last Monday, in the first presentation of the case, a continuance until yesterday was made. Marquardt has restored $13,000 of the money estimated taken, and the amount still owed the borough is expected to be paid as soon as it is definitely determined by the audit.

Mrs. W. F. Lester, chairman of the membership committee, reports no new members.

For the flower committee, Mrs. David Sussler reports that the wards and corridors were trimmed with flowers for Easter, while Mrs. Roy D. The linen is still coming in slowly in small quantities, but any amount is more than welcome. Any one wishing to donate any old linen or soft white cloth, may call Mrs. John F. Rogers, Tel. 331, and she, or a member of her committee will be very glad to call for it.

ROUGHAGE IS ESSENTIAL IN REDUCING DIETS

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Ideal Roughage

If you are following a reducing diet, it is doubly important that you take a regular amount of roughage into the system daily. Most reducing diets do not contain a sufficient amount of roughage. The result is constipation—thief of both health and beauty.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is recommended by many doctors and dietitians because it contains the bulk necessary to insure proper elimination.

Also, because it contains the iron needed to help prevent anemia—another danger in reducing diets.

ALL-BRAN is not fattening. Its bulk sweeps the system clean of poisonous wastes—helping to promote glorious health and beauty.

A popular way to eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is soaked in fruit juice. Try it! It is delicious with milk or cream. Sprinkle it over cereals, salads and soups. It adds flavor to cooked foods and is equally effective. Your grocer has Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It is served in restaurants, hotels and dining-cars. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

ELEANOR HUTTON'S MARRIAGE OF NEW LONDON INTEREST

Society is still in the dark regarding the elopement of fashionable Eleanor P. Hutton with the young playwright, Preston Sturges. Miss Hutton made her debut amid a colorful pageant representative of New York society, in 1927. Her mother inherited the millions of her father, inventor of Post cereals. In 1928 she was one of the eight American women presented to the King and Queen of English.

A special city meeting Monday evening at the town hall voted by resolution to authorize the court of common council to borrow a sum not to exceed $60,000 to provide for the expenses of the city from May 15th until after the annual city meeting in June. This is an annual custom and is more or less a matter of form. The city's fiscal years ends May 15th, and after that date until the city budget is authorised by the annual city meeting in June, there would be no money available for city expenses unless it were borrowed in anticipation of the city tax collections. Until quite recently, as was explained by Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, it was the custom for the city to borrow the necessary money without the formality of a vote at a city meeting. The state bank commissioner has ruled, however that no money can be borrowed from banks by the city without the city being authorized to do so by the voters. The resolution authorizing the city to borrow the needed money and a resolution authorizing the common council to appropriate the money for city expenses were adopted by ballot.

Another matter in the call for the meeting was action on a resolution approving a deed from the city of Norwich to Howell S. Bailey, owner of the Bailey property at Burnham square. The purpose of the deed is to determine exactly the southerly boundary line of the Bailey property, or, in other words, to determine the exact sidewalk line, which has, in the past, been somewhat in doubt. This deed is granted in return for the delivery by Mr. Bailey of a deed for certain premises northerly of the premises deeded by the city to Mr Bailey. A resolution approving the deed was adopted, the resolution being introduced by the corporation counsel, Edmund Perkins.

The final matter before the meeting was action on the granting of a right of way, for a pole line, to the Connecticut Light and Power Co., on the Bog Meadow tract, owned by the city. Corporation Counsel Perkins explained that the Connecticut Light and Power Co., is to build another pole line and the layout is so located that the company needs a right of way over a strip of land, 250 feet in width, across the Bog Meadow tract. The right of way is over bog and swamp land. The company is to pay $500 for the right of way which was granted by the adoption of a resolution presented by the corporation counsel. The meeting adjourned about 8:20 o'clock, daylight saving time.

BRINGS EASTERN CHEER TO UNCAS-ON-THAMES

One of the patients at Uncas-on-Thames, with the initials M. R., has written an appreciation of what the holiday fund does for those at the "San" as follows:

Easter at Uncas-on-Thames might well be called a festival of flowers. Patients have cut flowers and small potted plants in all the gay and bright spring colors. At times, the nurses held their breath in wonder whether they would be able to find vases, baskets or holders enough for them. These flowers were sent or brought in by friends and relatives of patients.

In addition to these flowers, large baskets or potted plants are distributed throughout the sanatorium. They decorate each ward, six in all; the men's shack, the women's hack, and the dining rooms, and add to the joyousness of the season. These miniature gardens come to the "San" from the holiday fund.

To many of the patients this fund means Christmas. However, it is used throughout the year to bring cheer in various ways, as the name implies, on holidays. It was started by Mrs. Frederick Byrnes and Miss Mary Richards of Norwich, friends of the "San." As from its beginning, it is now supported by the people of Norwich and nearby towns. Recently, ex-patients who care to do so, and are able to, contribute to it also.

It is at Christmas time, that patients are more conscious of the bounty of the fund. For each patient who remains at the "San," (those who are well enough and who desire to do so may have three days' leave), there is a gift. There are no disappointments for each patient is asked in advance what he or she especially wants. This may be a real necessity for some patients; for others it may be a luxury which would otherwise be denied them, and to a few, more fortunate in friends, relatives and outside contacts, this may be an opportunity of gracious receiving so that a fellow patient, may not be made to feel "different".

Thus it is that the holiday fund, started by Mrs. Byrnes and Miss Richards is still carrying on and at this season brings to Uncas-on-Thames, cheer and joy in flowers.

GAVE TRAVEL TALK FOR BUSINESS WOMAN'S CLUB

The Business and Professional Woman's club held its monthly business meeting Monday evening in the parlors of the Church of the Good Shepherd. After a delicious chicken pie supper served by the Ladies' Aid of the church, a short business meeting was held.

Plans for the annual meeting, which will come the first week in June, were discussed and the nominating committee was appointed. At the close of the business meeting, Earle W. Stamm gave a most interesting account of his trip to Honolulu, which he made last September. Six reels of motion pictures taken by Mr. Stamm on the trip were shown. With him the club members journeyed across the wide prairie lands and across the Rockies, stopping in Glacier national park, where snowstorms and zero weather were experienced. They traveled along the Columbia river and saw the salmon and the fisheries. San Francisco, with its Chinatown and wonderful harbor, was most interesting.

Sailing through the Golden Gate, the party spent seven delightful days aboard ship, passing only one other boat on the way to Hawaii. Here visits were made among the natives, surf-boat riding was enjoyed at Waikiki beach and trips were made to the volcanoes on some of the uninhabited islands.

Journeying back again across the Pacific, through the Royal Gorge in the Rockies and again across the wheat lands in the middle west, Mr. Stamm and his party arrived in Norwich. The photography in the pictures was exceptionally good. Many very interesting details and incidents of the trip were shown and on the whole the club members had a most delightful and successful journey.

HUNTINGTON HEIRESS HAD FOREBEARS IN NORWICH

The old Samuel Huntington house at Norwich Town, now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. Welte, 34 East Town street, was once the home of the forebears of Vivienne Maud Huntington of New York, who has recently startled society circles in which she moved by admitting that she eloped, March 13, with Alfred Cecil Durban, an English newsboy.

Vivienne is the daughter of a millionaire, heiress to an old fortune and an old distinguished name. Her husband is the son of a butcher and had a newsstand when he married the Huntington heiress.

They have now left the old world for the new and arrived a few days ago at St. John, New Brunswick. They are to make their home in Toronto.

ANOTHER CONTINUANCE IN MARQUARDT CASE

Further continuance in the case of Henry Marquardt, former tax collector, of the borough of Groton, charged with the embezzlement of about $16,000 of the borough funds, was made in Groton town court yesterday pending completion of an audit to determine definitely the amount of defalcation. The case was continued two weeks.

Last Monday, in the first presentation of the case, a continuance until yesterday was made. Marquardt has restored $13,000 of the money estimated taken, and the amount still owed the borough is expected to be paid as soon as it is definitely determined by the audit.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

The various departments of the woman's auxiliary have been enjoying a period of comparative quiet through March and April, after the busy whirl of activities in February.

Mrs. W. F. Lester, chairman of the membership committee, reports no new members.

For the flower committee, Mrs. David Sussler reports that the wards and corridors were trimmed with flowers for Easter, while Mrs. Roy D. Judd and her committee arranged each patient's tray with a small blossoming plant and Easter napkin, and each child received with delight a tiny cart filled with candy and drawn by a bunny.

The production committee, Miss Mary Paddock, chairman, assisted by the motor corps, have been working steadily.

The women of Grace church, Yantic, the First Congregational church, and the Methodist Episcopal church, Norwich Town, met April 2 and 9, and the women of the Greeneville and Taftville Congregational churches met the 16th and the 23, with a total of 3,532 dressings.

The linen is still coming in slowly, in small quantities, but any amount is more than welcome. Any one wishing to donate any old linen or soft white cloth, may call Mrs. John F. Rogers, Tel. 351, and she, or a member of her committee will be very glad to call for it.

Also, magazines and papers will be called for by Miss Constance Learned, tel. 239, or any of her committee. Miss Learned's committee, Mrs. Eben Learned, Jr., Miss Alice M. Sayles, Mrs. Goffe Briggs, and Mrs. B. H. Palmer, Jr., assisted by the children of Miss Gallahan's class, Broad street school, worked very energetically and collected a great many magazines, which were taken to the hospital. This literature is gladly received by the patients. It helps as nothing else does, to pass over the weary hours either of actual illness or convalescence.

Mrs. Rollin C. Jones, chairman of the finance committee, is very grateful for the response given by the women of Norwich to the suggestion that they entertain with bridges or teas in their own homes. PLAINFIELD SWIMMING TEAM BEATS PROVIDENCE DUCKS IN EXCITING MEET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, April 28.—The Plainfield mermen splashed through the water here tonight to a victory over the Providence ducks in a very exciting meet, winning by the score of 32 to 21. The meet was keenly contested throughout with first one team taking the lead and then the other. Derby and Lang were star performers for Plainfield in the relay race, which was taken by the locals.

In addition to the meet the audience had opportunity to see Gorden Peers and Bud Latham of Providence, give a sweet exhibition of diving. These two boys are New England champions and what they don't know about diving wouldn't take long to tell. They astounded the watchers with a variety of difficult and not often seen dives, including the jackknife, swan dive and what not.

The results of the meet follow:

40 yard free style—Derby (Pl) first, Korab (Pl) second, Higgins (Pr) third. Time 21 2-5 sec.

40 yard back stroke—Knowles (Pr) first, Connelly (Pl) second, Parker (Pr) third. Time 28 1-5 sec.

40 yard breast stroke—Higgins (Pr) first, Westcott (Pr) second, Smith (Pl) third.

100 yard free style—Derby (Pl) first, Korab (Pl) second, Tetlow (Pr) third.

Diving—Westcott (Pr), first, Lang (Pl) second and Smith (Pl) third.

Relay—Won by Plainfield with team comprising Lang, Connelly and Derby.

RESENT LETTER OF "TWO INTERESTED FANS"

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 28.—There was recentment aplenty here today among friends of Louis Peloquin over a communication that appeared on the sports page of The Bulletin this morning and signed "Two Interested Fans." The insinuation that Mr. Peloquin deliberately bluffed the public in presenting Big Boy Burlap and Rocky Knight of Boston is both untrue and unfair. These boys were paid to box to the best of their ability for a price agreed upon, and because their bout failed to live up to expectations was no fault of Mr. Peloquin's. No more honest or well intentioned man is promoting boxing matches in Connecticut than Mr. Peloquin. Naturally, his interests are to give the fans the most possible for their money, and he has done that thing repeatedly.

Because one bout went sour, his friends here feel, no one is justified in abusing him as "Two Interested Fans" did in today's edition of The Bulletin.

Mr. Peloquin said this afternoon that he feels the letter referred to was deliberately written to spoil attendance at his shows here, especially the one scheduled for Tuesday evening—to do him a real personal injury. Mr. Peloquin is recognized by those who know him as a credit to the boxing game. Nothing is farther away from his mind than to bluff the public. It just isn't true, no matter who says so.

PERSONNEL OF THREE YALE CREWS CHOSEN

NEW HAVEN, April 28—(AP)—The boatings of three of the four Yale crews, which will row against Pennsylvania and Columbia Saturday in the Blackwell cup races, on the Housatonic river at Derby, were announced today.

The contest between Sam and Bill Gillespie for the coxswain seat in the varsity boat, was settled by Coach Ed Leader with the selection of Sam, a sophomore. Bill Gillespie was chosen coxswain of the junior varsity crew.

Besides the boatings for the varsity and junior varsity crews, the boating for the freshman crew was announced today. The 150-pound crew that will participate in Saturday's races will probably be announced tomorrow.

The varsity crew selected follows: Anthony, bow; Goodbody, 2; McCalmont, 3; Walter Garnsey, 4; Ladd, 5; Rogers, 6; Captain G. Blagden, 7; Tappen, stroke; Sam Gillespie, coxswain.

Junior varsity: G. Munson, bow; Cussler, 2; Mosle, 3; Esselstyn, 4; Knott, 5; Goodale, 6; Foster, 7; Palmer, stroke; W. Gillespie, coxswain.

Freshman: Urquhart, bow; V, Munson, 2; Vested, 3; W. Garnsey, 4; Babcock, 5; Keppelman, 6; Burke, 7; Shepard, stroke; Hotchkiss, coxswain.

With the exception of Anthony, Goodbody and Rogers, all of the men in the varsity crew have won their Y in rowing.

EXPECTS REAL BATTLE IN WALKER CUP PLAY

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—When Robert T. Jones, Jr., captain of the Walker cup team reached New York today he admitted in a modest way that he has been "playing pretty fair golf."

He was told the professionals had brought a story from the south of decided improvement in his short game.

"Yes," he smiled, "I have been playing better golf close to the greens. Maybe now I have become a fair mashie niblick player. For a long time I was terrible with that club in my hand. But maybe all this good golf will leave me when the tournament season starts."

The captain will be joined by seven other crack amateurs and all will sail Wednesday afternoon.

"I have been playing much more golf this winter than usual and do not feel the need of additional play until we get over there."

Jimmy Johnston and George Von Elm played Saturday and Sunday but over different courses in the metropolitan district. Von Elm played Lido and Johnston at National links.

"Of course we expect to have a real battle on our hands in the Walker cup play," said the captain today. "I think we have the best team we can assemble but the British seem to have their best too. I have seen only the old-timers play but I have the greatest respect for them and I hear the younger players are as good or better than the veterans.

"We will not play any team match in England other than the Walker cup."

Jones was asked about the Sandwich course where the bi-annual competition will be decided.

"Sandwich is a course where the wind plays a big part, a difference in the wind can change it from a fairly easy to a course that will not listen to reason. I recall once when I was on a long hole with a drive and a brassie one day and the next day was short with a drive, brassie and spoon."

Bob could not say what competitions other than the Walker cup, open and amateur championships would attract the American players on their visit abroad.

"There are a lot of events our fellows will be able to play in if they wish," said the open champion. "Outside the British amateur and open championships, I probably will play in only one other tournament in England, and I don't think I will be able to play in any outside Great Britain. I hope to visit France and Germany and possibly Italy between the amateur and open events, but I will not play much golf—possibly an 18 hole match or so."

Captain Jones said no effort had been made yet to arrange the players for the foursomes in the Walker cup matches. "That will come later," he said, "probably the night before the foursomes are to be played."

AIDED BY ERRORS AND ERRATIC PITCHING A'S WIN

BOSTON, April 28—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics broke a three game losing streak here today at the expense of the Boston Red Sox and took a 5 to 4 victory.

Danny McFayden, who had held the A's to five hits for eight innings, lost control and Ed Morris, who relieved him, continued on the erratic path. Errors by O. Miller and Regan also aided in giving the visitors the four runs. The score:

MEMBERS OF BOARD OF ARBITRATION OF DUSTY LEAGUE ARE APPOINTED

Norwich fans were served a delectable dish of baseball by member teams of the Norwich Industrial league, sponsored by the recreation commission, in their almost nightly contests at the Academy campus last year, but they have not seen anything to what will be handed out to them this year, said William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the commission, Monday evening, in making several announcements.

Chairman Fitzgerald is getting the loose ends into shape in respect to the continuation of the league again this year. His appointments of interested persons on various committees to have charge of the matter have begun. The board of arbitration will comprise Al Bliven, James Sheridan and Earl Brigham, reappointments, and Dr. Clarence Thompson and Edward Gleason, new members.

In the not distant future the commission will call a meeting of the board for a discussion of matters that need their attention. Up to date 12 teams have signified their intentions of joining the league, and other nines desiring to enter are asked to send in their applications to the commission at once. It is not likely that more than six teams will be chosen fro mthe list of applicants, it has been intimated.

The tentative date for the official opening of the league has been set for June 9.

HENDRICK'S DOUBLE IN NINTH BEATS NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 28—(AP)—Harvey Hendrick's double with the bases full in ninth inning broke the Giants' winning streak and gave Brooklyn a 6 to 4 victory over New York today.

The defeat was the Giants first of the season and also broke Bill Walker's strong of eleven straight mound triumphs, nine of which were in 1929 and two this year. The big southpaw was exceptionally wild, however, handing out seven bases on balls and hitting three batsmen.

Due to some timely hitting, including Jackson's fifth home run of the year, the Giants went into the ninth leading by one run. Walker hit Frederick and Gilbert and walked E. Moore, loading the bases. Genewich was rushed into the box but Hendrick came through with a double that cleaned the sacks.

HOME RUN BARRAGE GAVE CHICAGO 7 TO 4 VICTORY

CHICAGO, April 28—(AP)—A home run barrage led by Gabby Hartnett who twice hit for the circuit today gave the Chicago Cubs a 7 to 4 victory over Pittsburgh in the second game of the series.

Cliff Heathcote and Charley Root also hit homers, Root gave the Pirates 11 hits, while Jess Petty and Spencer held the Cubs to eight. Root, however, was strong with men on and fanned nine. Both Petty and Spencer had wild moments, Petty hitting two batsmen and Spencer walking five.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28—(AP)—The Phillies broke their three game losing streak today when they came from behind to trounce the Boston Braves 7 to 4.

Alexander, who started the fray, was relieved by Elliott in the sixth inning with the Phillies trailing 4 to 2, and the latter got credit for the victory. GREENE SLATED TO HURL AGAINST WINSTED WEDNESDAY

Boots Greene, the Academy's latest pitching sensation, will get his third pitching assignment of the season when Coach Brigham sends him against Gilbert high of Winsted at the campus tomorrow afternoon. Boots has twirled brilliantly so far this year and should turn back the boys from the western end of the state. This means that Butsy Weisgraber will pitch against Weaver high of Hartford Saturday.

The Academy held a long batting drill Monday, aided by the fine weather, that was not over until nearly 5 o'clock.

So far the team has lived up to all expectations. All of the boys are playing their heads off to win back that state title that was lost last year, in fact, this year's team has more pep and hustle than any in some time.

The infield is going at top speed, with each and every one of the quartet of Arico, Reardon, Gibbs and Breen, getting on base their share of times and fielding well. The outfield, although composed of men new to their positions, is rounding into shape slow but sure.

The pitching staff is the strongest in years with Green and Weisgraber going at top speed. Bud Fontaine is a much improved catcher this year, seemingly headed for a big season.

Over-confidence is a big enemy sometimes and that seems to be the only bar to a state title for the Wildcats this season.

ERICKSON GIVEN BAD BEATING BY CHOCOLATE

TORONTO, Ont., April 28—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban featherweight, made his Canadian debut tonight and gained the decision over Johnny Erickson of New York in a ten round bout at the Coliseum. It was Chocolate's third victory over the New Yorker.

The dusky Cuban sensation gave Erickson a thorough trouncing from start to finish and nearly knocked him out in the last round. Erickson was taking a terrific lacing when the final bell sounded. Chocolate weighed 124 1-2; Erickson 123.

Black Bill, Chocolate's Cuban stable-mate, scored a victory by decision over Routier Parra, Chilean flyweight, in a six rounder. Johnny Goodrich, Toledo, a flyweight, outpointed Harry Hill of Montreal in six rounds.

PLENTY OF ACTION PROMISED FANS ATTENDING DANIELSON BOUTS TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 28.—Six bouts, five of them 6 rounders, the other a four, for a total of 34 rounds, are on the card for the boxing show to be held in the town hall here Tuesday evening.

There should be plenty of action for the boys appear well matched and are anxious to be in there. Mr. Peloquin, the promoter, considers this the best card he has yet arranged.

Rene Peloquin, local boy who has been making such a great record, will go on in the star bout of six rounds with Julius Lurkey, the Worcester boy, who gave him such a hard battle when they met here a few weeks ago—and that was a thriller. That was just nobody's fight until the last round when the Danielson Midget staged a great rally to win the decision. This return match has been arranged at the request of many fans. The boys will weigh in at around 123 pounds.

In the semi-final Alex Touraine of New Haven will have Ero Peterson of Worcester as his opponent. Here is a promising battle between two boys who have made good records around these parts. Both are well known by eastern Connecticut fans. This will be their first bout together. Both hold decisions over Al Koziol of Norwich, and boys who can beat Koziol are worth seeing in action. Bout in 133 pound class.

Billy Champigny of Worcester will meet Joe Barre of Fall River in another 6 rounder, at 138 pounds. Both are promising lightweights. Barre is reported going great guns of late. Champigny has fought a lot of tough ones in Worcester and only recently lost a very close decision to Eddie Williams of Worcester in eight rounds. Those knowing Williams will appreciate what that means.

Vic Darr of Norwich and Benny Novak of New London will go in for 6 rounds at 140 pounds. Here is a pair of hard hitters and willing fighters. The winner of this bout gets a match with the winner of the Barre-Champigny go.

Two Webster boys, Jimmie Barde and Edgar Gaboury, who do not like each other too much, as to ring affairs, are carded to go six rounds at 144 pounds. A delegation of about 100 of their home town fans will be on hand to see them in their first bout against each other.

In the opener Al Brouillard of Danielson will meet Johnny King of Fall River. Both of these boys have won their first four professional fights, Al getting two by the knockout route, King one that way.

"THRICE NO!" Yelled PANSY WAFFLEIRON

"None such as you can deceive me with your city tricks."

"I am growing impatient," said Silas Weaseltassle. "Take what I offer you."

Old Silas saw his error for he knew that Pansy's father was running for mayor and needed OLD GOLDS to give him the voice to win. Not a defeat in an electionload.

PLAINFIELD SWIMMING TEAM BEATS PROVIDENCE DUCKS IN EXCITING MEET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PLAINFIELD, April 28.—The Plainfield mermen splashed through the water here tonight to a victory over the Providence ducks in a very exciting meet, winning by the score of 32 to 21. The meet was keenly contested throughout with first one team taking the lead and then the other. Derby and Lang were star performers for Plainfield in the relay race, which was taken by the locals.

In addition to the meet the audience had opportunity to see Gorden Peers and Bud Latham of Providence, give a sweet exhibition of diving. These two boys are New England champions and what they don't know about diving wouldn't take long to tell. They astounded the watchers with a variety of difficult and not often seen dives, including the jackknife, swan dive and what not.

The results of the meet follow:

40 yard free style—Derby (Pl) first, Korab (Pl) second, Higgins (Pr) third. Time 21 2-5 sec.

40 yard back stroke—Knowles (Pr) first, Connelly (Pl) second, Parker (Pr) third. Time 23 1-5 sec.

40 yard breast stroke—Higgins (Pr) first, Westcott (Pr) second, Smith (Pl) third.

100 yard free style—Derby (Pl) first, Korab (Pl) second, Tetlow (Pr) third.

Diving—Westcott (Pr), first, Lang (Pl) second and Smith (Pl) third.

Relay—Won by Plainfield with team comprising Lang, Connelly and Derby.

RESENT LETTER OF "TWO INTERESTED FANS"

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 28.—There was recentment aplenty here today among friends of Louis Peloquin over a communication that appeared on the sports page of The Bulletin this morning and signed "Two Interested Fans." The insinuation that Mr. Peloquin deliberately bluffed the public in presenting Big Boy Burlap and Rocky Knight of Boston is both untrue and unfair. These boys were paid to box to the best of their ability for a price agreed upon, and because their bout failed to live up to expectations was no fault of Mr. Peloquin's. No more honest or well intentioned man is promoting boxing matches in Connecticut than Mr. Peloquin. Naturally, his interests are to give the fans the most possible for their money, and he has done that thing repeatedly.

Because one bout went sour, his friends here feel, no one is justified in abusing him as "Two Interested Fans" did in today's edition of The Bulletin.

Mr. Peloquin said this afternoon that he feels the letter referred to was deliberately written to spoil attendance at his shows here, especially the one scheduled for Tuesday evening—to do him a real personal injury. Mr. Peloquin is recognized by those who know him as a credit to the boxing game. Nothing is farther away from his mind than to bluff the public. It just isn't true, no matter who says so.

PERSONNEL OF THREE YALE CREWS CHOSEN

NEW HAVEN, April 28—(AP)—The boatings of three of the four Yale crews, which will row against Pennsylvania and Columbia Saturday in the Blackwell cup races, on the Housatonic river at Derby, were announced today.

The contest between Sam and Bill Gillespie for the coxswain seat in the varsity boat, was settled by Coach Ed Leader with the selection of Sam, a sophomore. Bill Gillespie was chosen coxswain of the junior varsity crew.

Besides the boatings for the varsity and junior varsity crews, the boating for the freshman crew was announced today. The 150-pound crew that will participate in Saturday's races will probably be announced tomorrow.

The varsity crew selected follows: Anthony, bow; Goodbody, 2; McCalmont, 3; Walter Garnsey, 4; Ladd, 5; Rogers, 6; Captain G. Blagden, 7; Tappen, stroke; Sam Gillespie, coxswain.

Junior varsity: G. Munson, bow; Cussler, 2; Mosle, 3; Esseletyn, 4; Knott, 5; Goodale, 6; Foster, 7; Palmer, stroke; W. Gillespie, coxswain.

Freshman: Urquhart, bow; V. Munson, 2; Vested, 3; W. Garnsey, 4; Babcock, 5; Keppelman, 6; Burke, 7; Shepard, stroke; Hotchkiss, coxswain.

With the exception of Anthony, Goodbody and Rogers, all of the men in the varsity crew have won their Y in rowing.

EXPECTS REAL BATTLE IN WALKER CUP PLAY

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—When Robert T. Jones, Jr., captain of the Walker cup team reached New York today he admitted in a modest way that he has been "playing pretty fair golf."

He was told the professionals had brought a story from the south of decided improvement in his short game.

"Yes," he smiled, "I have been playing better golf close to the greens. Maybe now I have become a fair mashie niblick player. For a long time I was terrible with that club in my hand. But maybe all this good golf will leave me when the tournament season starts."

The captain will be joined by seven other crack amateurs and all will sail Wednesday afternoon.

"I have been playing much more golf this winter than usual and do not feel the need of additional play until we get over there."

Jimmy Johnston and George Von Elm played Saturday and Sunday but over different courses in the metropolitan district. Von Elm played Lido and Johnston at National links.

"Of course we expect to have a real battle on our hands in the Walker cup play," said the captain today. "I think we have the best team we can assemble but the British seem to have their best too. I have seen only the old-timers play but I have the greatest respect for them and I hear the younger players are as good or better than the veterans.

"We will not play any team match in England other than the Walker cup."

Jones was asked about the Sandwich course where the bi-annual competition will be decided.

"Sandwich is a course where the wind plays a big part, a difference in the wind can change it from a fairly easy to a course that will not listen to reason. I recall once when I was on a long hole with a drive and a brassie one day and the next day was short with a drive, brassie and spoon."

Bob could not say what competitions other than the Walker cup, open and amateur championships would attract the American players on their visit abroad.

"There are a lot of events our fellows will be able to play in if they wish," said the open champion. "Outside the British amateur and open championships, I probably will play in only one other tournament in England, and I don't think I will be able to play in any outside Great Britain. I hope to visit France and Germany and possibly Italy between the amateur and open events, but I will not play much golf—possibly an 18 hole match or so."

Captain Jones said no effort had been made yet to arrange the players for the foursomes in the Walker cup matches. "That will come later," he said, "probably the night before the foursomes are to be played."

SCHAAF AWARDED JUDGES' DECISION OVER LOUGHRAN

PHILADELPHIA, April 28—(AP)—Ernie Schaaf, Boston sailor boy, won the judges' decision over Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia, former light heavyweight champion, in a slashing 10 round bout at the Arena tonight. Schaaf weighed 200 pounds, Laughran 189.

Babe Hunt, heavyweight, Ponca City, Okla., won a 6 round decision over Big Bill Hartwell, Kansas City Negro. Hunt weighed 198 and Hartwell 217 pounds.

Other 6 round bouts resulted as follows:

A. Ettore, Philadelphia, 159, knocked out Johnny Kingsley, Philadelphia, 152, in the first round.

Willie Henry, California, 182, decision over Jack Decimes, Boston, 195. Decimes was dazed in the final round when both fighters fell through the ropes.

Frank Cawley, Pittston, Pa., 186, beat Abe Calahan Lipschutz, New York, 185, by a technical knockout in the first round.

Walter Cobb, Baltimore, 217, knocked out Jack De Mave, Hoboken, N. J., 200, in the second round.

AIDED BY ERRORS AND ERRATIC PITCHING A'S WIN

BOSTON, April 28—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics broke a three game losing streak here today at the expense of the Boston Red Sox and took a 5 to 4 victory.

The world champions gathered four runs in the ninth inning without making a hit. Danny McFayden, who had held the A's to five hits for eight innings, lost control and Ed Morris, who relieved him, continued on the erratic path. Errors by O. Miller and Regan also aided in giving the visitors the four runs. The score:

[illegible]

Two base hits, Bishop, Regan.

Would Like Games

The Sterling baseball club has organized for the coming season and would like to arrange some games with any fast amateur teams in the state. Saturday and Sunday dates open. Address all communications to L. O. McMahon, manager.

Collegians Win

The Gas House Collegians defeated the Ice House Gang at Mohegan park Sunday by a score of 9 to 2. Snyder, the Gas House pitcher, struck out 13 men. Smitty, Jr., furnished the fielding features.

PLENTY OF ACTION PROMISED FANS ATTENDING DANIELSON BOUTS TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 28.—Six bouts, five of them 6 rounders, the other a four, for a total of 34 rounds, are on the card for the boxing show to be held in the town hall here Tuesday evening.

There should be plenty of action for the boys appear well matched and are anxious to be in there. Mr. Peloquin, the promoter, considers this the best card he has yet arranged.

Rene Peloquin, local boy who has been making such a great record, will go on in the star bout of six rounds with Julius Lurkey, the Worcester boy, who gave him such a hard battle when they met here a few weeks ago—and that was a thriller. That was just nobody's fight until the last round when the Danielson Midget staged a great rally to win the decision. This return match has been arranged at the request of many fans. The boys will weigh in at around 123 pounds.

In the semi-final Alex Touraine of New Haven will have Ero Peterson of Worcester as his opponent. Here is a promising battle between two boys who have made good records around these parts. Both are well known by eastern Connecticut fans. This will be their first bout together. Both hold decisions over Al Koziol of Norwich, and boys who can beat Koziol are worth seeing in action. Bout in 138 pound class.

Billy Champigny of Worcester will meet Joe Barre of Fall River in another 6 rounder, at 138 pounds. Both are promising lightweights. Barre is reported going great guns of late. Champigny has fought a lot of tough ones in Worcester and only recently lost a very close decision to Eddie Williams of Worcester in eight rounds. Those knowing Williams will appreciate what that means.

Vic Darr of Norwich and Benny Novak of New London will go in for 6 rounds at 140 pounds. Here is a pair of hard hitters and willing fighters. The winner of this bout gets a match with the winner of the Barre-Champigny go.

Two Webster boys, Jimmie Barde and Edgar Gaboury, who do not like each other too much, as to ring affairs, are carded to go six rounds at 144 pounds. A delegation of about 100 of their home town fans will be on hand to see them in their first bout against each other.

In the opener Al Brouillard of Danielson will meet Johnny King of Fall River. Both of these boys have won their first four professional fights, Al getting two by the knockout route, King one that way.

DETROIT, April 28—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers outhit the White Sox by 14 safe blows to eight today, but the Chicago batters made every blow count and won the game 9 to 7.

White Sox runners were advanced by bases on balls, a wild pitch, a passed ball and by two batters being hit by pitchers.

The visiting White Sox had one big inning, the sixth, in which they ran in four runs on four hits.

The Tigers came back in their half of the same frame to chase in five runs on as many hits.

Reynolds, Sox center fielder, was the star slugger of the contest, getting a home run, a triple and single in four trips to the plate. His four base blow came in the seventh with Lyons on base.

MEMBERS OF BOARD OF ARBITRATION OF DUSTY LEAGUE ARE APPOINTED

Norwich fans were served a delectable dish of baseball by member teams of the Norwich Industrial league, sponsored by the recreation commission, in their almost nightly contests at the Academy campus last year, but they have not seen anything to what will be handed out to them this year, said William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the commission, Monday evening, in making several announcements.

Chairman Fitzgerald is getting the loose ends into shape in respect to the continuation of the league again this year. His appointments of interested persons on various committees to have charge of the matter have begun. The board of arbitration will comprise Al Bliven, James Sheridan and Earl Brigham, reappointments, and Dr. Clarence Thompson and Edward Gleason, new members.

In the not distant future the commission will call a meeting of the board for a discussion of matters that need their attention. Up to date 12 teams have signified their intentions of joining the league, and other nines desiring to enter are asked to send in their applications to the commission at once. It is not likely that more than six teams will be chosen fro mthe list of applicants, it has been intimated.

The tentative date for the official opening of the league has been set for June 9.

HENDRICK'S DOUBLE IN NINTH BEATS NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 28—(AP)—Harvey Hendrick's double with the bases full in ninth inning broke the Giants' winning streak and gave Brooklyn a 6 to 4 victory over New York today.

The defeat was the Giants first of the season and also broke Bill Walker's strong of eleven straight mound triumphs, nine of which were in 1929 and two this year. The big southpaw was exceptionally wild, however, handing out seven bases on balls and hitting three batsmen.

Due to some timely hitting, including Jackson's fifth home run of the year, the Giants went into the ninth leading by one run. Walker hit Frederick and Gilbert and walked E. Moore, loading the bases. Genewich was rushed into the box but Hendrick came through with a double that cleaned the sacks.

Score:

[illegible]

Two base hit, Hendrick. Three base hit, Lopez. Home run, Jackson.

HOME RUN BARRAGE GAVE CHICAGO 7 TO 4 VICTORY

CHICAGO, April 28—(AP)—A home run barrage led by Gabby Hartnett who twice hit for the circuit today gave the Chicago Cubs a 7 to 4 victory over Pittsburgh in the second game of the series.

Cliff Heathcote and Charley Root also hit homers. Root gave the Pirates 11 hits, while Jess Petty and Spencer held the Cubs to eight. Root, however, was strong with men on and fanned nine. Both Petty and Spencer had wild moments, Petty hitting two batsmen and Spencer walking five.

Score:

[illegible]

Two base hit, Hemsley. Three base hit, Cuyler. Home runs, Heathcote, Hartnett 2, Root.

PHILLIES BREAK LOSING STREAK, TROUNCE BRAVES

PHILADELPHIA, April 28—(AP)—The Phillies broke their three game losing streak today when they came from behind to trounce the Boston Braves 7 to 4.

Alexander, who started the fray, was relieved by Elliott in the sixth inning with the Phillies trailing 4 to 2, and the latter got credit for the victory. Cunningham after blanking the Phils, the first four frames was hammered for three runs in the sixth inning, enough to give the Phillies the victory. Brandt who relieved him, was nicked for two more in the seventh. Welsh hit a home run in the fifth inning. Score:

[illegible]

Two base hits, Welsh, Williams, Klein. Home run, Welsh.

STONINGTON WINS FIRST LEAGUE GAME 8 TO 4

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, April 28—The Stonington aggregation waded through Bulkeley opposition here this afternoon in a league game and trounced the Whaling City representatives by an 8 to 4 score. The locals started right in scoring in the very first inning, chalking up one run and countering for five more in the next inning. Godomsky pitched a nice game for the locals, allowing only six hits. The score:

[illegible]

Two base hits, John Murphy, Williams, Duberry, Godomsky. Struck out, by Godomsky 6, Dayton 6, Callahan 4. Base on balls, off Godomsky 1, Dayton 1. Double plays, Rowley to Brennan to Gigliotti.

CARDINALS TRIM REDS 8 TO 3, ALTHOUGH OUTHIT

CINCINNATI, April 28—(AP)—Bases on balls got Al Eckert, Cincinnati recruit pitcher, into difficulties today and the Cardinals although outhit took advantage of the passes and defeated the Reds by 8 to 3. Kelly, Reds' first baseman, pulled up lame in the fifth and retired from the game. Clarence Mitchell, the visitors' starting pitcher, also was forced from the contest after injuring his ankle while running from second to third in the fourth inning. The score:

[illegible]

Two base hits, High, Heilmann, Cuccinello, Ford.

GREENE SLATED TO HURL AGAINST WINSTED WEDNESDAY

Boots Greene, the Academy's latest pitching sensation, will get his third pitching assignment of the season when Coach Brigham sends him against Gilbert high of Winsted at the campus tomorrow afternoon. Boots has twirled brilliantly so far this year and should turn back the boys from the western end of the state. This means that Butsy Weisgraber will pitch against Weaver high of Hartford Saturday.

The Academy held a long batting drill Monday, aided by the fine weather, that was not over until nearly 5 o'clock.

So far the team has lived up to all expectations. All of the boys are playing their heads off to win back that state title that was lost last year, in fact, this year's team has more pep and hustle than any in some time.

The infield is going at top speed, with each and every one of the quartet of Arico, Reardon, Gibbs and Green, getting on base their share of times and fielding well. The outfield, although composed of men new to their positions, is rounding into shape slow but sure.

The pitching staff is the strongest in years with Green and Weisgraber going at top speed. Bud Fontaine is a much improved catcher this year, seemingly headed for a big season.

Over-confidence is a big enemy sometimes and that seems to be the only bar to a state title for the Wildcats this season.

ERICKSON GIVEN BAD BEATING BY CHOCOLATE

TORONTO, Ont., April 28—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban featherweight, made his Canadian debut tonight and gained the decision over Johnny Erickson of New York in a ten round bout at the Coliseum. It was Chocolate's third victory over the New Yorker.

The dusky Cuban sensation gave Erickson a thorough trouncing from start to finish and nearly knocked him out in the last round. Erickson was taking a terrific lacing when the final bell sounded. Chocolate weighed 124 1-2; Erickson 128.

Black Bill, Chocolate's Cuban stable-mate, scored a victory by decision over Routier Parra, Chilean flyweight, in a six rounder. Johnny Goodrich, Toledo, a flyweight, outpointed Harry Hill of Montreal in six rounds.

INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURE

FOUR BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED THE PAST WEEK; ONE FOR NEW DWELLING

With weather conditions ideal considerable progress in the building line has been made during the past week, a number of the larger projects nearing the completion stage. Work upon the Norwich Inn on the Norwich-New London highway has gone along at a fast rate and at the present time there remains only a small amount of work to be done before the building is finished. The contractors, Peck-McWilliams, expect to have the inn ready for its official opening, which is to be on Memorial day.

During the past week four permits were issued at the office of Acting Fire Marshal Dennis J. Brennan for new construction work in the city. The total number of permits issued this month up to date is 30. Included in the permits for this week are one for a two-story frame barn and another for a two-story frame dwelling house. The following are the permits:

To Zachae Bros., to erect a two-story frame barn on Palmer street extension for Dr. N. B. Lewis. The building when completed will be 20x30 feet and is to cost approximately $800. The foundation will be of stone and the structure is to be of frame construction, North Carolina pine being used. The sides will be in composition shingles and composition roll roofing will be used on the roof.

To Zachae Bros., to construct a frame 2 1-2 story house on Palmer street extension for Dr. N. B. Lewis. The building, size 38x28 feet, will contain nine rooms, bath and a garage, the latter to be located in the basement. There will also be a porch with dimensions 8x28 feet. The first story will be finished in 12" stone veneer and the second story in siding wood shingles, with composition shingles on the roof. The interior will have hard finished plaster, hardwood floors and interior trim. There will also be a stone fireplace. The estimated cost is $6,000.

To D. J. Barry, to add a dormer window to the present frame house at 92 Oakridge street for Helen B. Barry, the size to be 8'4x4'6 feet. There will be spruce frame siding and clapboards, the roof to be of asphalt shingles. The cost is estimated at $50.

To the German Lutheran church, Franklin street, to erect a brick one-car garage at No. 169 Franklin street. The building will be 10x19 feet in size. The foundation will be of stone and the walls of cement. Non-combustible roofing paper will be used on the roof. The estimated cost is $350.

NEW LONDON
WORK STARTED ON NEW ALLYN MUSEUM, COST $400,000

Work was started by the H. Wales Lines company this week on the new Allyn Gallery of Art which is to be erected on the Allyn property south of the Connecticut College for Women at a cost of $400,000.

The museum is being built under the terms of the will of Harriet U. Allyn, and the funds for the building are being handled by Clement Scott, trust officer of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company. Mr. Scott has recently been made a member of the board of trustees of the Connecticut College for Women and through this dual association with the museum and the college it is expected that in order to promote the best interests of both the Allyn trust and the college art department a section of the new museum will be turned over to the college.

The building will be of colonial design and will be built entirely of granite. The steps leading up to the facade will be of plain granite. Four giant pillars to support the portico will be fashioned in Ionic design, suggestive of the old Greek temples.

The structure will be 110x80 feet, consisting of two stories and a basement. Four special hand-carved panels, two or either side, in rectangular shape, together with three circular hand-carved panels under the portico, all in granite, will form the only decorative features of the memorial.

The roof, entirely of glass, will require more than 6,000 feet of one-half inch wire skylight glass. The glass is made by a special process of casting the glass with the wire netting to give it added strength and to eliminate any danger of the glass being shattered by any means.

On the first floor will be located a large library, directors' quarters and administrative rooms. Eight sections, in which the many works of art will be displayed, are located on the second floor. A large auditorium will be provided for in the basement of the building.

Plans are being prepared by Architect Francis DeGrange of a cottage to be built for Nicholas Porcaro in West High street. The proposed house will be 28 by 24 feet and according to the plans will have six rooms and bath. There will be hard wood floors, steam heat and all improvements and conveniences including built in fixtures. Contracts will be awarded for the plumbing, heating and electric wiring.

Work has started on the construction of a frame bungalow to be built in Pacific street for Filamena Minucci. The house is to be built from private plans which provide that the dwelling will be 44 by 26 feet with a sun porch 8 by 16 feet and a breakfast nook, 5 by eight feet. There will be five rooms and a bath according to the layout of rooms. The estimated cost is placed at $6,500.

Work has been started on the construction of a store building to be erected for P. J. Clifford in Bentley avenue. According to the plans the building is to be 27 by 40 feet of frame construction, one story high.

Work is nearing completion on the construction of a residence being built for Donald J. Herdenbrook at Oswegatchie. The structure has been plastered and the inside trim is now being finished up.

The house, which is to cost $25,000 is to replace one that was badly damaged by fire about a year and a half ago. It is of frame construction, 73 by 73 feet in dimensions with a three car attached garage. The exterior has been finished with wide exposure shingles.

The first floor will contain besides the living room, dining room and kitchen, a study, pantries, a toilet and three open porches. On the second floor the plans provide for six bed rooms, three maid's rooms, four bath rooms and an open balcony. There are three open fireplaces on the first floor.

Work is progressing favorably on the construction of a house being built for Ricardo Conestrari in Lewis street between Crystal avenue and Eastern avenue. The structure is 26 by 38 feet and has a concrete foundation. According to plans prepared by Architect Francis DeGange the house will have all improvements and conveniences including steam heat, brass piping, hard wood floors and built in features.

WOODWORK.

Woodwork highly finished is extremely difficult to harmonize with other furnishings of a home. Highly varnished woodwork reflects the light, glitters, and for that reason calls attention to itself at the expense of other objects in the room. When, however, woodwork is finished with oil, wax, or even varnish which has been rubbed down to a dull finish, it may take its place in the general color scheme and contribute greatly to the beauty of interior effects.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

There were seven sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week as compared to 22 sales for the corresponding week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $26,502 and $88,660.

In New London during the past week there were nine sales of real estate, a decrease of five sales over the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $26,100 and $60,110.

Few Building Permits Granted

Building in Putnam during the past week has seen comparatively few developments. Present appearances are that only a few new structures will be added to the city's sky line this city. On Church street, Frederick Authier is erecting a one and one-half story frame bungalow. Permission for its erection will be formally granted at the May meeting of the common council, to which body the property owner has already applied for a building permit. City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan said today that building applications have been few during the past month, presenting the appearance that there will be only the normal amount of construction work taking place during the coming month.

Although private and public building in this city is not expected to attain the sensational pace of the spring of 1929, the city fathers anticipate getting underway at an early date a large property improvement campaign which will be made possible with an affirmative vote being cast when various measures providing for the construction of new sidewalks and improvement of streets in various sections of the city, are brought before the voters at a special city meeting.

During the week, workmen engaged in grading off the sidewalk and exterior premises of the New Cargill Trust company's bank building on Main street have completed work on sidewalks and have rolled and seeded the attractive lawn on the north side of the block adjoining the property of the Congregational church. Work on the remaining unfinished interior of the building is temporarily at a standstill because of a delay in marble and granite shipments. It is expected that the needed material will arrive here this week in order to enable the contractors to rush work, which has undoubtedly prevented the opening of the bank at the appointed date this month. J. Dyer Potter, treasurer of the institution, said Saturday that officials of the company do not expect to occupy the new site until early June.

PUTNAM
NEW GROSVENORDALE COM. HOUSE FINE BUILDING

Approximately filling a long felt need in the little textile village of North Grosvenordale, six miles north of this city, is the Grosvenordale community house, recently completed and formally dedicated at exercises held last Thursday evening.

There is an interesting story connected with the founding of the modern recreation center of the village. Its site was formerly the farm buildings of the Grosvenordale company, owners of the village industries and a substantial portion of the community real estate. A few months ago, Agent John Reardon of the Grosvenordale company, known throughout the state as a leader with modern and progressive ideas, realizing the need of a recreation haven for employes of the company, which would be equipped with all facilities to provide comfort and enjoyment, decided upon the founding of such an institution.

The group of farm buildings, situated in the outskirts of the village in the vicinity of the palatial home of Mr. Reardon, was selected for a site. Plans for the conversion of the dairy from its agricultural environment to that of a modern and well appointed, beautiful and stately lodge were drawn and during the winter months the building details were carried out. The project received the financing of the company itself.

The decorative schemes of the exterior portions of the building were carefully planned and harmonize beautifully with the surroundings. The grounds have been landscaped, enhancing the beauty of the building, to give a picturesque effect to one approaching from the distance.

Entering from the side, one is ushered into the large ball room, an item which has long been a need of the Grosvenordales. The walls of the hall are finished in panel and the high ceiling with its attractive supporting beams woven across its lofty recesses renders a most delightful effect. At the west end of the room is a mezzanine which will serve as a music box for members of orchestras playing for social functions, which will take place in the ball room from time to time.

Off the ball room are two rooms, housing rest quarters and lavatories of the most modern design. On the opposite side, is another room which will be used for meetings and card parties. These quarters, like the rest of the building, are cosy and will serve this purpose appropriately.

Pool and bowling parlors are located in an ell extending from the main structure on the west side. The equipment is complete to the most minute detail. The color arrangements here are attractive. The walls are buff tinted and the shades of black, brown and orange are tastefully worked in. One of the most attractive features of the community house is its kitchen. The food preparing center is unique in its decorative style, which blends wonderfully with the tints of its modern electrical cooking devices.

Those who have had the opportunity of visiting the new Grosvenordale institution marvel at its completeness and speak of it only in terms of high praise. Credit for the construction of this fine building goes to Mr. Reardon, whose untiring efforts made such a spot to be enjoyed by the people of Grosvenordale and surrounding communities, possible.

WESTERLY

For the last of April, Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued the following building and zoning permits:

April 19. James Conway, 138 Granite street. Build two-car garage at 138 Granite street, 20 feet by 20 feet.

April 21. Mrs. Virginia Monti, Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut. Build summer cottage with garage attached, 23 feet by 33 feet 4 inches on Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut.

April 25. Mrs. Catherine Scott Maryott, 387 Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut. Erect summer bungalow, 26 feet by 38 feet. By owner.

April 26. Miss Bessie Taylor, 68 Elm street. Move part of present rear porch and make new additions and alterations.

April 25. Rodman Griscom, Watch Hill. Reshingle roof of cottage at Watch Hill cutting off part of porch facing Watch Hill point.

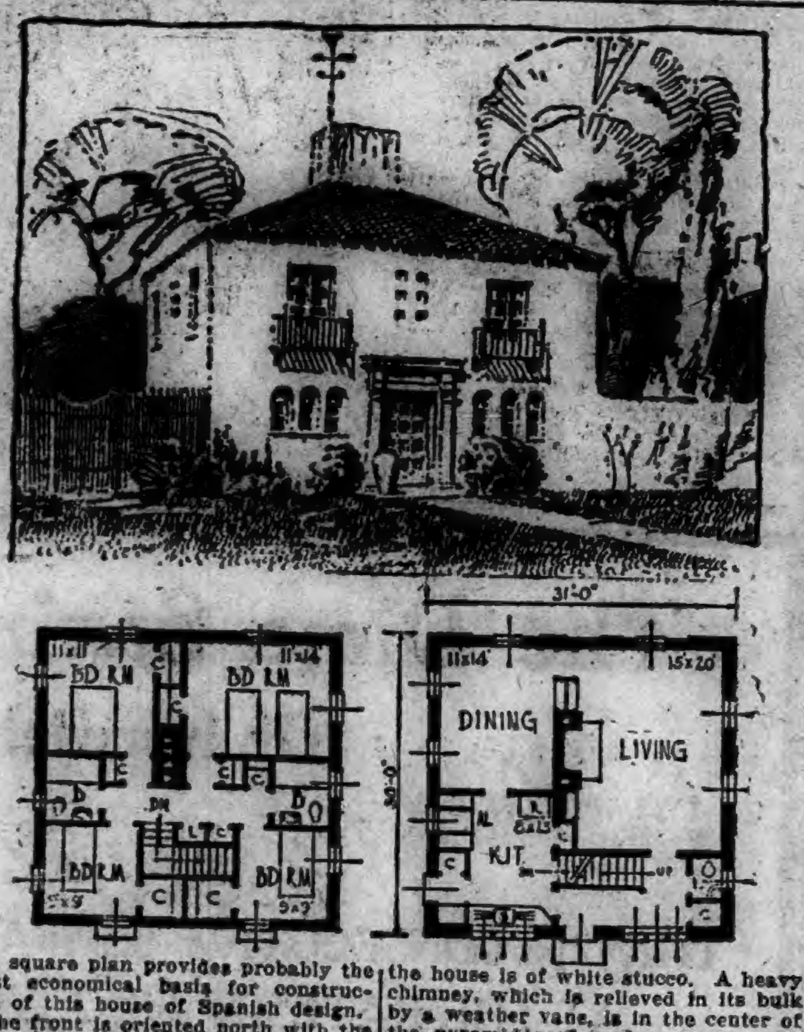
MANSFIELD

The plans of Towner Selew Associates, architects, 263 Main street, Middletown, for buildings to be erected at the Mansfield State Training school will be ready to figure about April 30. Bids will be received at 2 p. m., D. S. T., May 26, by the board of trustees at the old senate chamber, 2nd floor of the state capitol in Hartford, at which time they will be publicly opened. The buildings include two dormitories one story high, a laundry building, a power plant partly two stories high, and the remodelling and enlarging of the present power plant. They will be of brick and reinforced concrete, of fireproof construction.

PLASTER BASEMENT CEILING.

If the purse can withstand the extra attack upon it, the basement ceiling should be plastered. Metal lath and plaster act as a fire retardant and have an insulation value which means much to comfort and reduces heating costs. This job may be a two-coat one, which is less effective than the standard three-coat job but offers a large amount of protection.

SQUARE PLAN ECONOMICAL IN SPANISH TYPE



A square plan provides probably the most economical basis for construction of this house of Spanish design.

The front is oriented north with the dining room on the southeast and the living room on the southwest. The northern half of the first floor is chiefly occupied with a moderately large kitchen.

Details of the lower floor include a fireplace in the spacious living room, and an alcove in the kitchen and set immediately adjacent to an east window to catch the morning sun.

A bedroom is on each of the corners of the upper floor, a layout which with hall and staircase provides excellent opportunity for cross ventilation. Each room has two windows, and at each end of a long hall a bathroom is located.

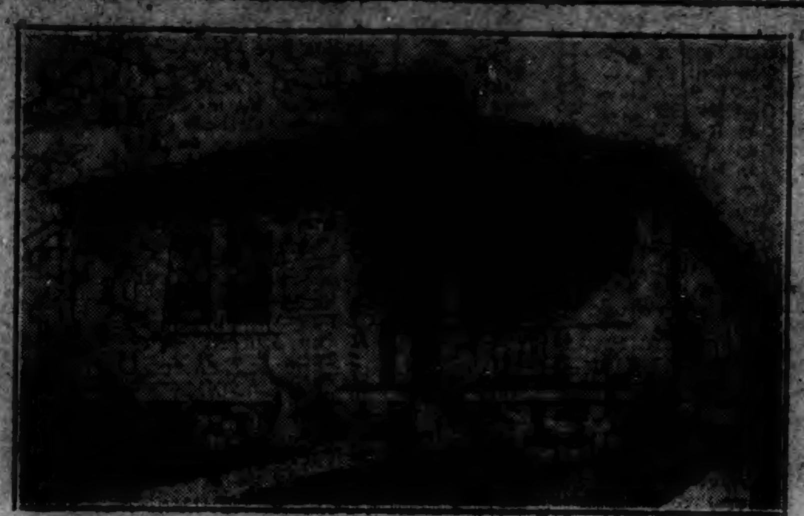
The exterior offers many possibilities for those who would experiment to obtain tasteful attractiveness. In this design the roof is of red tile and the house is of white stucco. A heavy chimney, which is relieved in its bulk by a weather vane, is in the center of the pyramid roof, and wrought iron balconies adorn the front walls.

The door is of weathered gray wood, and, as in many other such designs, this entrance effect may be enhanced by an orange or green oil jar in addition to California or Florida gardening.

A wall or a fence should enclose a patio or inner garden, the fence at the same time serving to carry out through the property the general theme of the construction of the house.

This house is designed 31 x 30 feet to fit commodiously on a lot 50 x 75 feet. Its cost would range from $8,000 to $10,000, although an exact figure naturally would be based on a choice of materials and labor costs in the community where construction takes place.

NEW BUNGALOW ON BOSWELL AVENUE



One of the most attractive houses in the Boswell avenue section is that pictured above and located at No. 261. The building, recently completed by a local contractor, is of the bungalow style with a small dormer window. The exterior is finished in clapboards and the roof is of composition shingles. The interior is handsomely finished.

CONNECTICUT DELEGATION FOR WOMEN VOTERS' CONVENTION

Twenty Connecticut members of the League of Women Voters will make up the delegation from this state to the tenth anniversary convention of the National League which opens Monday morning, April 28, in Louisville, Ky. In addition, two Connecticut members of the National League board will attend, Miss Katharine Ludington of Lyme, first vice president, and Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith of Farmington, director of the first region.

The Connecticut delegation is scheduled to take a prominent part in the convention program. Miss Elizabeth P. Andrews of Pomfret, the state league's immigration chairman, is in charge of a demonstration of a naturalization hearing which will take place Monday morning. Members of the Connecticut delegation will take the parts of immigrants being examined for admission to citizenship.

At the tenth birthday party on the night of Friday, May 2, Connecticut delegates will present a dramatic skit, "A School for She's" as part of an hour's performance of suffrage incidents in a "Little Suffrage Theatre." The skit will depict the period when co-education in the primary schools was denied to girls on the grounds of its being unnecessary and indelicate. Miss Elizabeth Farnam of New Haven and Miss Grace P. Asserson, executive secretary of the Connecticut league will take the principal parts.

The following women will comprise the delegation: Miss Mary Bulkley of Hartford; Miss Elizabeth P. Andrews of Pomfret; Mrs. Otto H. Schroeter of New London; Mrs. Fred A. Webster of Waterbury; Mrs. William P. Couch of Cromwell; Miss Madelon Gardner of New Haven; Miss Elizabeth Farnam of New Haven; Miss Emily Whitney of New Haven; Mrs. Paul Willson of Darien; Mrs. Elizabeth Canda of Pomfret; Mrs. F. U. Johnstone of Woodstock; Miss Sally Fanny Gleaton of Middletown; Miss Grace P. Asserson of West Hartford. The alternates are Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees of Greenwich; Mrs. Bernard Allen of Cheshire; Miss Frances P. Miller of Middletown; Mrs. Lyman D. Mills of Middletown; Mrs. Henry H. Townshend of New Haven; Mrs. Charles Strong of New Haven; Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins of Norwich.

CELLAR LAYOUT IS IMPORTANT FEATURE

The home builder who is about to let contracts for the construction of his home will do well to give a moment's thought to the size of his cellar or basement. In the days of the coal bin, with its attendant dust, piles of ashes and rows of ash cans, the cellar had little use other than a storage place for rubbish. Small windows set high in the walls made it dark and difficult to keep clean and attractive, and headroom was usually cut to a minimum.

With the advent of the oil burner, however, all of this changed. Gone are the piles of coal, the coal bin, the rows of ash cans, the ash sifter and the dust and clutter which were their inevitable accompaniment. In their stead is a small, clean and neat oil burner and the modern heating plant steel jacketed in brightly colored enamel. The two together occupy only a small corner of the basement.

The wise home builder now takes advantage of this fact to make use of the space occupied by the cellar, which is nearly one-third of the total usable space in the ordinary house. He builds his foundation walls a few inches higher and takes advantage of the extra headroom thus gained to put in large windows which flood the cellar with daylight, making it attractive and easy to keep clean.

A suitable work bench and ceiling lights, with one or two convenience outlets in the wall into which electric tools can be easily plugged, furnish the man of the house an ideal workshop in which to do the one hundred and one odd jobs that are constantly coming up in every home where pride is taken in keeping the house and grounds in the pink of condition.

BREVITIES

"Over the top" with linoleum makes a splendid surface for any card table. It is being used for this purpose and clever home decorators are painting the legs and edges of their card tables to harmonize with linoleum tops which, they claim, furnish a most serviceable surface.

Fireproof, enduring, practical—the all-steel house is becoming increasingly popular. But in every fireproof house there is the special problem of what to do with the floors and walls—a problem solved satisfactorily in many houses of recent erection by the use of appropriately designed linoleum, cemented both to the floor and wall surfaces.

Fire Insurance
a Key to Low Prices

Few have a true appreciation of the far-reaching effect of Stock Fire Insurance in holding down the cost of all merchandise.

No less authority than the Encyclopedia Britannica contributes a "testimonial" as follows:

"In the United States, as in no other country, has insurance in all its various phases become universally recognized as an essential of commerce and industry. To this fact may be attributed in large measure the achievements of America in business enterprises.

"Insurance encourages men and corporations to hazard their resources on new developments without fear of loss from natural and unavoidable catastrophes."

At every turn in the processing of materials—storage, manufacturing, transportation, wholesaling, retailing—the protection of Stock Fire Insurance contributes that indispensable element of certainty without loading prices for speculative risk.

By paying a premium which on the average is only a fraction of 1% of the amount insured, business transfers to the Stock Fire Insurance companies what would otherwise be an oppressive carrying charge against the risk of destruction by fire.

The 239 Stock Fire Insurance companies constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters have rendered their services at an average price that has constantly declined for more than twenty years.

PRICE INDEX OF 90 LEADING SHARES LOST NEARLY 5 POINTS YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—The stock market began the new week with a headlong decline today, the most abrupt since last December. The price index of 90 leading shares lost nearly 5 points, compared to a drop of 6 1-2 on Dec. 20. Selling was fairly orderly until the last hour, when more than 1,500,000 shares were traded. The day's total sales were comparatively moderate, however, aggregating 4,352,190 shares.

The fact that the end of April is now approaching, and business has failed to show the normal spring upswing, has caused considerable disappointment in speculative circles. While there is widespread conviction that fundamentals remain sound, and that normal conditions will be experienced before the end of the year, the opinion appears to be growing in speculative circles that the stock market advance of March and early April was unjustifiably rapid.

An accumulation of unfavorable first quarter earnings statements and the failure of week-end business reviews to display optimism over prospects for the near future finally tipped the scales decisively toward reaction.

Publication of the survey of conditions by Chairman Barnes of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, while strengthening Wall street's confidence in gradual business improvement, failed to rekindle speculative enthusiasm. Extra dividends by Ingersoll Rand and General Refractories, report of record sales during Easter week by Woolworth, and rumors of a 5 for 1 split-up of Eastman Kodak, likewise fell flat as market influences.

Liquidation embraced practically all groups. A few of the oils and utilities were in demand for a time, such issues as Standards of New York and New Jersey and United Corporation, selling up slightly to new 1930 peaks, but these shares turned downward before the close. Rails were particularly heavy, reflecting unfavorable March reports. The first 46 roads to publish net operating income reports for the month showing an aggregate decline of 30 1-2 per cent from the like month of last year. Steels were depressed by rumors of reductions in steel prices.

Shares declining 5 to 10 points included Allied Chemical, American and Foreign Power, American Tobacco B, Atchison, Auburn, Consolidated Gas, Eastman Kodak, Houston Oil, Johns Manville, Public Service of New Jersey, Union Pacific, Westinghouse Electric and Vanadium. J. I. Case dropped 18 points and Ingersoll Rand, 12. U. S. Steel and General Electric lost 3 points, and Radio and American Telephone, more than 4. Several of the copper, railroad, railroad equipment, motor and motor accessory shares reached new lows for the year.

Call money was a little firmer, holding at 4 per cent as banks called loans in preparation for the semi-weekly Federal Reserve settlements and the month-end requirements. Bankers' acceptances, however, showed a little easier tone. Foreign exchanges were fairly steady, although sterling cables ruled 1-32 lower at $4.86 1-4.

In the commodities, grains rallied sharply, both corn and wheat futures closing about 1 1-2 to 2 cents higher, reflecting a decrease in the visible supply of wheat, and unfavorable weather.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 28.—(AP)—Despite sharp setbacks at times on account of persistent liquidating sales of the May delivery, wheat prices today finished at decided gains. The liquidation of May contracts was much more general than has been the rule of late, but quick rallies were witnessed in the final transactions. Among the chief bullish factors was 3,404,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, together with export purchasing of 1,000,000 bushels of North American wheat today in addition to 3,000,000 bushels on Saturday.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at 1 1-2 to 2 1-2c a bushel net advance as compared with Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-2a2 1-8c up, oats 1-8a1c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 7c.

Helping to bring about last minute rallies in the wheat market today were late cable dispatches predicting more active foreign buying from this time on.

Provisions declined owing to scattered selling notwithstanding firmness of hog values.

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 4 points higher to 8 lower. Spot steady; middling 16.20.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 25, were $5,303,951.10; expenditures $12,218,712.81; balance $187,928,017.09.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 28—(AP)—A sharp downward readjustment of prices took place in today's curb market, the selling embracing all leading groups. While several explanations were forthcoming for the decline, such as the poor first quarter reports now being published and rumors of a cut in the prices of steel products, many observers took the view that the reaction was merely a correction of the top-heavy speculative position created in the rising markets of the past few weeks.

Public utilities, which have been prominent in the recent advance, bore the brunt of the selling. American Light and Traction (old) broke 17 points on a few sales, Commonwealth Edison dropped 7 3-4, American Gas and Electric 7 1-2, Duke Power 6 3-4, while American Super Power, Tampa Electric and United Light and Power A closed 2 to nearly 4 points lower. Cities Service, Electric Bond and Share and Niagara Hudson lost slightly more than a point each.

Gulf Oil, after touching a new high at 166 7-8, sold down to 160 for a net loss of 4 3-4 points. Humble and Standard Oil of Kentucky dropped more than a point each.

Deere and company (old stock) broke 40 points in a few odd lot transactions, and the new stock yielded about 4 points. Securities General Investment Trust, which recently was split up on a 10 for 1 basis, broke 70 points on one sale, and the new stock lost about 5 on a small turnover. Aluminum Company of America fell 8 1-2 points with losses of 1 to 8 points scattered among a score or more other industrials and specialties.

Official announcement was made today that 425 curb stocks had been accepted as suitable collateral for loans at the new money post opened last week. Previously, the question of loans on curb securities had been an individual matter between the members and their banks.

The liquidation of May contracts was much more general than has been the rule of late, but quick rallies were witnessed in the final transactions. Among the chief bullish factors was 3,404,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, together with export purchasing of 1,000,000 bushels of North American wheat today in addition to 3,000,000 bushels on Saturday.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at 1 1-2 to 2 1-2c a bushel net advance as compared with Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1 1-2a2 1-8c up, oats 1-8a1c off, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 7c.

Helping to bring about last minute rallies in the wheat market today were late cable dispatches predicting more active foreign buying from this time on.

Provisions declined owing to scattered selling notwithstanding firmness of hog values.

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—Cotton futures closed barely steady, 4 points higher to 8 lower. Spot steady; middling 16.20.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, April 28—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 25, were $5,303,951.10; expenditures $12,218,712.81; balance $187,928,017.09.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—A sharp downward readjustment of prices took place in today's curb market, the selling embracing all leading groups. While several explanations were forthcoming for the decline, such as the poor first quarter reports now being published and rumors of a cut in the prices of steel products, many observers took the view that the reaction was merely a correction of the top-heavy speculative position created in the rising markets of the past few weeks.

Public utilities, which have been prominent in the recent advance, bore the brunt of the selling. American Light and Traction (old) broke 17 points on a few sales, Commonwealth Edison dropped 7 3-4, American Gas and Electric 7 1-2, Duke Power 6 3-4, while American Super Power, Tampa Electric and United Light and Power A closed 2 to nearly 4 points lower. Cities Service, Electric Bond and Share and Niagara Hudson lost slightly more than a point each.

Gulf Oil, after touching a new high at 166 7-8, sold down to 160 for a net loss of 4 3-4 points. Humble and Standard Oil of Kentucky dropped more than a point each.

Deere and company (old stock) broke 40 points in a few odd lot transactions, and the new stock yielded about 4 points. Securities General Investment Trust, which recently was split up on a 10 for 1 basis, broke 70 points on one sale, and the new stock lost about 5 on a small turnover. Aluminum Company of America fell 8 1-2 points with losses of 1 to 3 points scattered among a score or more other industrials and specialties.

Official announcement was made today that 425 curb stocks had been accepted as suitable collateral for loans at the new money post opened last week. Previously, the question of loans on curb securities had been an individual matter between the members and their banks.

WESTERLY

TOWN COUNCIL GRANTS PERMIT FOR SUNDAY BALL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 28.— A special meeting Monday evening in the town council chambers of Westerly town hall was called to order at 7:30 o'clock by President Horace E. Burdick.

The council voted to grant a license to Manager Edward Ferrare of the Independent baseball team for Sunday baseball on the old White Rock diamond until Oct. 20. The first game will be with the Fort Trumbull Stars Sunday next.

Application was received from the Hilltop baseball association, A. P. Gencarelle, manager, for Sunday baseball on the Bradford road near the Smith Granite Co. siding. The council set the date of May 12 for a hearing.

Building Inspector Thomas Wills appeared before the council, which voted a permit to Westerly grange for construction of the new grange hall at Avondale in a wooden building of over 1,000 square feet. The Green's filling station at Weekapaug road was voted a special permit for a public building of wood, for lunch room purposes. Charles Havens, at Misquamicut, was granted permission to connect two existing buildings in a structure four feet by 16, subject to the approval of the Westerly zoning board. The council voted permission to the Weekapaug inn, F. C. Buffum, for a four-car addition to the present garage, from which a front has been cut off for the continuation of a public highway through the Charlestown town line. Having the approval of the zoning board, James P. Real, at Misquamicut, was voted permission to connect and erect a new store building, 16 by 30. Charles P. Ecclestone was granted special permit for a wooden office building with toilet, off Canal street, adjoining the property of the New Haven railroad, without a garage.

The Westerly Lumber Co., C. P. Ecclestone, was referred to the Westerly highway commission to have established a street building line before a special permit was granted them to erect a new office building and addition.

Councilman Fraser of the police committee reported new traffic ordinances as prepared by Town Solicitor Ferguson to be gone over by the committee before reference to the council and its vote for adoption.

ECLIPSE OF MONDAY RECALLS BIG DAY IN 1925

Westerly residents and visitors Monday afternoon exhibited much interest in watching the eclipse of the sun. From vantage points on sidewalks and street corners even in the business section of the town smoked glasses and camera films were used to advantage. It recalled the eclipse of Jan. 12, 1925, when Westerly entertained the largest number of visitors in its history for a total eclipse, no less than eight special 10-car passenger trains bringing many thousand visitors here to witness the phenomenon.

A second consignment of asphalt received in two large motor tank trucks was spread Monday on the subgrade of the re-built section of High street between Narragansett avenue and Dixon street intersection and that of Railroad avenue with this largely traveled Westerly highway which connects with Route 1-A or the Noosneck Hill state road. A final top dressing of oil will be added to this penetration road and the street will then be opened again to motor traffic after being closed for a number of weeks. The work was done under direction of Westerly Highway Engineer A. L. Leon.

SERRUTO CASE GOES OVER TILL WEDNESDAY MORNING

The second week of the April term of Washington county superior court opened at the Kingston courthouse Monday morning. On the attorney general's docket the case of State vs. Joseph Serruto, charged with attempting to murder Epiro Epifanio, assigned for trial before the superior court and jury was continued until Wednesday morning. Upon opening of the court a request was made by counsel for the defendant that the case be continued to Wednesday as they were not ready for trial. Judge Pouliot granted the request.

All the state's witnesses were present in court this morning ready for trial of the case. Upon the completion of the criminal docket in the Kingston calendar a number of civil cases are set down for hearing, before adjournment is taken to Westerly, among them being the suit brought against the estate of the late Treasurer George R. Green, of the town of Richmond, R. I. When civil matters are reached in the Westerly calendar it is expected that the oft-heard case of Vennard vs. Lihme will again come before the court.

Odd Fellows' Anniversary

This (Tuesday) evening Narragansett lodge, No. 7, I. O. O. F., of Westerly will observe the 111th anniversary of the founding of Odd Fellowship with a special program in Odd Fellows' hall. The guest of the evening who will deliver the anniversary address will be Dr. Walter R. McIntire, deputy grand master of the Grand lodge of Rhode Island. The program will include the Nut-Meg entertainers. A collation will be served by the joint hall and entertainment committees, Grant W. Perrin, W. Sinclair Barker, Charles Girouard, Clarence Maxwell, Floyd K. Young and G. Arthur Anderson.

WOULD-BE SUICIDE KEEPS EVEN HIS AGE A SECRET

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 28.— But little information was gained Monday by the Westerly authorities as to the identity and address of the young man picked up Sunday evening between Westerly and Stonington by a passing autoist from Taftville and rushed to the Westerly hospital when found suffering from a self-administered dose of iodine. Even Monday morning the hospital authorities were unsuccessful in learning from the young man his exact age.

At an early hour Monday when he did not go to sleep the police were informed and were in readiness to have an officer at the hospital to watch the man to make sure that he did not repeat his suicidal attempt.

Lieutenant George H. Champlin in continuing his investigation Monday morning before starting for the superior court at West Kingston was able to detect three figures on the label of the bottle which label had been nearly all scraped off by the unknown man before drinking the contents from a paper cup. He also detected the letter of a name "Lewis" almost illegible. In his check-up of pharmacies Lieutenant Champlin found listed a pharmacy in Fall River, Mass., which may have been the source from which the poison was secured, the drug store being that of "Lewis Vendura, 236 Bedford street, Fall River, Mass." This was all the information the officer could secure after a long grilling of the patient, who was continued on the danger list at the hospital Monday morning.

The 58th anniversary of their wedding was observed the past week by Mr. and Mrs. Palmedus W. Bennett at their home 42 Margin street, Westerly.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Bennett, who has been in failing health since last September, the event was without ceremony. Mr. Bennett, in his 81st year, continues to enjoy good health. He is one of the few surviving veterans of the Civil war and saw service in the battle of Bull Run. Mr. Bennett is a native of Foster, R. I., his wife was born in North Stonington. They were married in Stonington April 24, 1872. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett have four children, Palmedus W. Bennett, Jr., Apponaug; William E. Bennett of Charlestown; Eugene A. Bennett of Dunn's Corners, and Mrs. Rose E. Noyes of 42 Margin street, Westerly. Their descendants include nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP)—The bond market was soggy today. Heaviness of the convertibles in sympathy with declining stock prices and the absence of an appreciable demand for investment securities of more conservative types combined to give the list an easier tone.

Money was plentiful, but with the month end so near at hand rates held firm.

The largest decline among the stock privilege bonds was in the American Telephone 4 1-2s, off 3 points to 167 1-2, Parmlee Transportation 6s and Pathe 7s, with warrants, lost 2 points each, International Telephone 4 1-2s sagged 3-4 and Baltimore and Ohio convertible 4 1-2s yielded half a point. General Theatres Equipment 6s were exceptions to the trend of this group, rising a point net. Lautaro Nitrate 6s and Reading Coal and Iron 6s dropped 1.

Institutional inquiry for a few rails helped keep prices at the higher levels that developed late last week. Union Pacific refunding 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, New Haven 4 1-2s, Northern Pacific prior lien 4s, Rock Island 4 1-2s and Nickel Plate 4 1-2s, were the most popular carrier liens. Illinois Central 4s, New Haven debenture 4s of 1957, Southern Railway general 4s, St. Louis San Francisco 4 1-2s, New York Central 5s, and Chesapeake and Ohio general 4 1-2s turned soft.

Utilities and industrials were mixed and generally lower. American Telephone collateral 5s dropped a point. Pressed Steel Car 5s went to a new low on a decline of nearly 4 points. American Smelting 5s sagged 7-8.

Changes in the United States governments were mostly on the down side, but the group was very dull and the declines were minute. Foreign bonds tended to be irregularly lower, with considerable softness appearing in the German Republic 7s, which dipped below 108. French 7s also eased.

The American market's share of the San Paulo 20,000,000 pound international coffee loan is being offered tomorrow. The bonds, maturing in ten years, bear 7 per cent coupons, and are priced at 96. The total for this country is $5,000,000. Proceeds are to be used in gradually liquidating the accumulation of coffee in San Paulo and in marketing future crops.

INDIAN SQUAW'S HOARD FOUND BY LUCKY PERRY

Peter Perry, while tearing down the attic of his home on Branche avenue to put up an addition, saw an old Indian basket that was made many score years ago by some Redskin woman with her small hands. Perry had to look twice for the basket was in a far corner, covered with dust and cobwebs. He did not know what it was sitting on the floor. He looked inside and found some United States money, greenbacks and coins; a two dollar bill, but the face of the man on it was all worn on account of it being there so long. There was a one dollar gold piece that was dated 1828. It seemed to be in good condition. A one dollar gold piece is scarce in the country today and so Happy Perry says he will keep that for his lucky charm that may bring him luck for years to come. Among the coins a Canada one-cent piece is over 200 years old. Putting the sandpaper on the large penny that would make a war cross for an ex-army hero, who was under shell fire in the war. He came across a piece of paper, hard to read, taking a heavy glass to make out the words, it read: I am a full-blooded Indian woman. I worked hard in my days. By making baskets and using the arrow and bow I got hold of a few greenbacks and some coins. I saved them all but never have enjoyed the use of them, for I heard the call of my tribe that is far away, never to return. So good bye. I hope a lucky man will get this hand-made basket with $25 in bills and coins and a one-cent piece left over. Hustler Perry was some happy to find a basket of money and says he will keep them all for some day they will be worth a good deal more money. A man came from Massachusetts and wanted the one-dollar gold piece, would give anything he asked for it, for the Massachusetts man's hobby since he was nine years old is collecting old coins. At his home he has a chest almost filled from going all over the country; he has been at the game for over 50 years. "Well, Mr. Perry, how much will you take for that gold piece? Think it over while I go outside and puff away on a cigar and get a smell of the salt air. After about 20 minutes out in the open space of the fishing village he came inside again and said, "Well, how much do you want?" "I don't really know! I don't want to charge too much!" a hearty laugh came from the stranger. "Well, will $150 hit the spot?"

Hustler Perry almost fainted away. To think a dollar gold piece was worth that much. "Sure, take it away!" The Boston man took from his pocket a roll of bills that would choke an Elm street mule, counted out the money and thanked the Noanker many times for selling the gold piece that was put in the basket by the Indian squaw so many years ago. Jumping into his automobile the Massachusetts man was on his way home, happy as a young girl at a ladies' barber shop with a permanent wave.

So Perry found a small gold mine when he started to fix over his white house for the summer; also he found an old newspaper dated 1877, meaning 53 years ago, the New York Herald, which told about things that happened all over the world; about how the New York Giants were going strong for the flag; also the stock market on Wall street. The paper he sent to his brother in New Hampshire, who has made a collection of old newspapers a long while. One man told Mr. Perry that next he would find Capt. Kidd's pot of gold that has been lost for over 300 years, if he cements the cellar and digs down deep enough. That broke out a big laugh. Happy Perry, with all the smiles a man could give in 10 minutes was feeling good over the lucky find. It seemed as if 1930 sure would be his lucky year, as a fortune teller at Savin Rock told him last summer when he spent the day with his family on an outing in their Dodge car.

The tongue and mouth is nothing more or less than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. You need Tanlac to correct this condition.

Taken before meals Tanlac prevents formation of gas and acids so there is no sour bloating or distress. Tanlac helps regulate the bowels, too, and so with your system free of poisonous toxins your breath is immediately sweetened. Get a bottle today at your druggist. STATES OBJECTION TO CONGREGATE COUNTY HOME

In a communication to The Bulletin, Mrs. Edith Valet Cook, executive secretary of Connecticut Child Welfare association, states the objection which that association has to the congregate type of institution which the commissioners of New London county are having built for the new county home on the Laurel Hill road.

Mrs. Cook writes:

"As you probably know, the emphasis in child welfare work today is upon family life for children. Experts agree that the best development of child life takes place in the individual home. The problem of the county commissioners then, is to provide for the abandonede and dependent children of their counties, opportunities for normal family life.

"There are two ways of doing this. The first and best method is that of placement in foster homes. This plan calls for a small receiving home in which children may be kept temporarily while free or boarding homes are being sought for them. An institution housing 25 or 30 children would meet the requirements of even our largest county under this system which also implies the use of trained social workers to find suitable homes and to supervise the children placed in them.

"The second method consists of caring for these children in the cottage type of institution in which seven or eight of them live together in a small home under the supervision of a competent 'house mother.'

"I am sure any one will agree that either of these two methods is superior to the old-fashioned congregate system in which a 100 or more children are brought together under one roof.

"It is fine that New London county is willing to spend a quarter of a million dollars on its uncared for children. Our only regret is that so much money should go into bricks and mortar instead of into actual social work with these children and their families.

"Think what the yearly income alone from such a sum would do toward caring for these children either in their own or foster homes. What a valuable supervisory service could be maintained over them by trained social workers, any one of whom would almost save the county her salary each year by finding good free homes for some of the children who are now being cared for out of county funds."

The two dormitories at the county hame are each designed to accommodate 50 each children, but ordinarily there will not be more than 40 children in each.

POETRY

Service And Song

I stood upon a hill a year ago,
To watch the brilliant sunset slowly die;
Like sentinels to guard the vale below
Some giant cedars held their arms on high.
There was a little stunted tree nearby—
How small it seemed beside those forest kings!
I pitied it, and gave an idle sigh,
And watched a bird nest there, with fluttering wings,
But after that I stopped and thought of other things.

Today, beside a window high in air,
I watched two sparkling seagulls at their play;
They dipped and rose, and whirled, a graceful pair,
Over a logboom coming down the way.
And then I felt a pathos hard to say,
Because the bodies of my forest kings
There on the kindly bosom of the bay
Floated, beneath the seagulls' whirring wings.
Yet in that little stunted tree a bird still sings.

—Helen Graham Johnson in the Christian Science Monitor.

Procrastinator

When I've grown old and slow, he said,
I'll hedge a patch of ground
And a low snug cottage
Where I can potter round,
Tinkering a door-latch,
Mending an old hoe,
Pruning a grape-shoot
Or thinning a beet-row

And hazy, warm October days
With all chores done,
I'll tilt a chair beside the door
And soak there in the sun
Like an old hound,
While the yellow leaves fall
And their shadows waver
Down a stone wall,

For sitting in the sun, he said,
Makes a man wise,
But while I'm prime and quick, I'll work,
Gather, and devise,
And ride the bucking world! he said,
And would not stay at all . . .
He never tilted in the sun
And watched the leaves fall.

—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"How did you happen to crash into that other car?" asked the policeman as he surveyed the wreck.

"The exasperator was to blame," admitted the driver of the offending car.

"Exasperator!" exclaimed the officer of the law. "You mean accelerator?"

"No I don't," said the driver.

"Then what part of the car is the exasperator."

"Well," said the driver with a sickly smile, "she usually drives from the back seat."—The Pathfinder.

WOMAN TIPS NEW LONDON POLICE WHO GATHER IN BOOZE AT FREDERICK'S

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 28.—The police this afternoon raided the residence of Victor Frederick, Walbach street, and seized 50 cases of home brew beer and a small quantity of whiskey. Frederick was arrested, charged with violation of the liquor law on two counts, possession and keeping with intent to sell. He was released upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $1000 and will be in the police court tomorrow. William Frazer, who was found in the house by the raiders, was arrested, charged with frequenting. He furnished a surety on his bond of $50 and will also be presented in court tomorrow.

The raid and arrest of Frederick was the work of a female informer. Shortly before 3:30 o'clock a woman called on the telephone at police headquarters and said that a quantity of liquor was either being unloaded from a truck or placed on a truck at the Frederick residence. Automobile Patrol Officers Elwood Bailey and Thomas Cavanaugh and Patrolman Dennis Murphy were sent to the house. The officers did not possess a search warrant, nevertheless, they gained admission to the premises. Frederick has been arrested several times within a year charged with violation of the liquor law.

STATE REFORM SCHOOL FOR YOUNG JOY-RIDERS

William Fenn, Donald Toohey and Philip Santangelo were presented in the police court this morning, charged with taking automobiles without permission of the owner. The youths were sentenced to the reformatory at Cheshire, but execution of the sentence was suspended. They admitted having taken at least 10 automobiles that were parked on the street, using them for an hour or two and then abandoning them.

Sebastini Muscarella was charged with reckless driving on Broad street and was fined $25 and costs.

Arthur Messer, charged with reckless driving on Ocean avenue, was fined $10 and costs. He was arrested Sunday by Patrolman Carlos Stone.

Harry Wheeler, 13 Briggs street, was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor, but the charge was nolled.

One Goes To State Hospital

All of the other cases were for intoxication. A woman who was arrested Sunday on Winthrop street was given suspension of judgment, as was a man. Another offender was sentenced to jail for 30 days and another man, residing on Fowler court, was committed to Norwich State hospital. He was arrested Saturday upon complaint of his mother.

Tony Lynch, 31 Warner street, Groton, was arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia today, charged with breach of the peace, upon complaint of Andrew Makaiwk, of 30 Shaw street. He will be in court tomorrow. The two men quarreled.

George Hedges, 25 Moore avenue, reported to the police this afternoon that a spare tire, tube and rim were stolen from his automobile last night while the automobile was parked in front of his home.

Maxwell Melenoff, employed at the Garde theatre, was arrested this afternoon, charged with violation of the parking law in allowing his auto to stand on State street longer than half an hour.

R. L. PACKER REPEATS FRAUD GAME IN N. Y. STATE

R. Lawrence Packer, formerly of Groton, who has a police court record in this city, is wanted by the police of Buffalo and Syracuse, N. Y., on a charge of passing worthless checks. He recently entered the employ of the Lamson Co., of Syracuse. After being employed by the company but a short time he issued and negotiated a worthless check and was discharged. Packer then went to Buffalo where he represented himself as a salesman of the Syracuse company and negotiated additional worthless checks. Packer was convicted of a charge of forgery in Groton fourteen months ago, being sentenced to three months in the county jail. He was adjutant of Groton post, American Legion, and cashed checks through forging the endorsement of the paper, which was designed for disabled members of the post, applying the money to his own use.

The continued case of Max Elionsky, 768 Ocean avenue, came up in police court this morning and was again continued, this time for a week. Elionsky was arrested in February when the automobile he was driving hit a child on Broad street, the girl, Mary Manice, sustaining a fractured skull. WIFE'S GAY NIGHT ENDS IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 28.—Ruth Dushame Guiang, youthful wife of a Filipino sailor at the submarine base and residing at Uncasville, attempted to commit suicide by hanging at police headquarters early today, after she had been locked up on a charge of intoxication, following a wild night in an automobile.

The woman and a companion known as "Mickey" Jones, 30 Howard street, this city, with two sailors, had been on a joy ride and during the night the women drank freely of liquor. About 1:30 o'clock this morning the Guiang woman became violent in her conduct and on a road in Palmertown the sailors put the woman out of the car, driving away. The woman was found staggering about the road by passing autoists, who informed the state police. Officers John Smith and James Dygert went to Palmertown and found the woman lying beside the road. In attempting to place the woman in their automobile the officers experienced great difficulty for she fought them savagely, so that handcuffs were placed on the tigress in order to subdue her. When the woman was taken to police headquarters she continued her violent conduct and a physician was summoned who administered to her. After she had become composed Mrs. Guiang was placed in a cell. There she removed her dress, tying one end to the cell lattice and making a noose of the other, which she fastened around her neck, the woman jumped from her cot in an endeavor to strangle herself. Her screams were heard by the officers who went to the cell room and, observing the dangling body, cut the dress. Mrs. Guiang was committed to the Norwich State hospital for observation, being taken there by the officers at 8 o'clock.

FINES, WITH JAIL FOR TWO, IN WATERFORD STILL CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 28.—The six men arrested last Thursday night by state police officers when the building housing a huge still off Bayonet street extension, Waterford, was raided, were tried in the Waterford town court this afternoon. All the men entered a demurrer through counsel, but this was overruled and all the accused were fined. Two of the men were also sentenced to jail by Judge F. L. Schofield.

Lucio Ribaudo, owner of the building, was charged on two counts of violation of the liquor law, manufacture and keeping with intent to sell. He was fined $200 and costs on each count and was sentenced to ten days in jail.

Poetro Rocoro, New Haven, operator of the still, was also charged on two counts, manufacture and keeping with intent to sell. He was fined $200 on each count and was sentenced to 60 days in jail.

Sebastini Ribaudo, brother of the owner of the building, and Peter Vona, 48 Shaw street, were charged with aiding and abetting in the manufacture of liquor and each was fined $200 and costs and given suspended sentences of six months in jail.

Felix Niederzewcki, 30 Bayonet street, and Peter Piscatello, 79 Bayonet street, were charged with aiding and abetting in the manufacture of liquor. Each was fined $200 and costs. The two men drove into the building with a quantity of molasses and fusel oil while the raid was in progress.

Michael Sireci, proprietor of the Main Street Tire shop, who went to the building the night following the raid and created a disturbance, was charged with interfering with an officer and was fined $5 and costs. He was arrested by State Police Officer John Smith.

The still, by far the largest ever seized in New London or vicinity, was of 3,000-gallon capacity and its owners had but recently caused its construction, the plant only being in existence a few days before the raid. It was intended to supply bootleggers and traffickers in liquor in eastern Connecticut with the alcohol, which would retail for $7 per gallon.

The still has been totally dismantled and has been taken to the state police barracks at Groton.

Mrs. David Coffey, of 44 Linden street; Mrs. Alexander Brown and infant son, Groton; Miss May Guski, 50 Smith street; Archie Daniels, 40 Bishop street; Mrs. Waldo Miner and infant daughter, 803 Montauk avenue; William Knott, U. S. Coast Guard; Mrs. Benjamin Bloomer and infant daughter, 33 Hamilton street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Sunday and today.

CHULA VISTA NEW HOME OF FORMER NORWICH RESIDENTS

The chamber of commerce of Chula Vista (City of Beautiful View), California, lists among new members former residents of Broad street, Norwich, Lieut. Commander John A. Monroe and Mrs. Monroe (Minerva Rogers), who for a time made their home with the latter's aunt, the late Mrs. James Lewis Smith. They have built a home recently in Chula Vista, a city of 5,000, about eight miles south of San Diego, also eight miles north of the national boundary separating the United States and Mexico. It is located on what is poetically named "The Harbor of the Sun," and is on the wide concrete highway which links San Diego, northern California, the Pacific coast and eastern points with Baja, Mexico, (Lower Califorina) 6,000,000 people crossing the international border annually.

The city has all the conveniences of urban life, yet ocean, beach and mountain sports, country club, golf grounds, etc. etc. Agriculture and floriculture, the poultry, rabbit and dairy industries, with rail and steamship facilities are sources of profit to the townspeople.

Climatic conditions are said to be unsurpassed—frost practically unknown, while a cool summer breeze from the Pacific on the west and the Cuyamaca mountains on the east results in an ideal all-the-year-round climate.

Breed Theatre

Scenes of superior photographic quality are to be viewed in Norma Shearer's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Their Own Desire," which is playing at the Breed theatre.

One of the unusual photographic effects is the big lakeside dancing scene in which the entire action on the ballroom floor is mirrored in the water. Another spectacular camera picture is the night fireworks celebration in which a gigantic pyrotechnical display is featured.

Robert Montgomery plays the leading masculine role in the new Shearer film with the supporting cast including Lewis Stone, Bella Bennett, Helene Millard, Cecile Cunningham and Mary Doran.

Palace Theatre

There is variety in the double feature bill which will be presented at the Palace theatre tomorrow and which will be shown there through Friday of this week. "Notorious Affair," a gripping drama with Billie Dove and Basil Rathbone as the leads, and "The Second Floor Mystery," a thrilling detective story featuring Grant Withers, Loretta Young and H. B. Warner are the two pictures which have been combined to make this bill one of the best on record at the Palace.

Supporting Miss Dove and Mr. Rathbone is an excellent cast, among whom are Kay Francis, Kenneth Thompson and Montague Love. Billie Dove plays the part of an English girl who marries a poor violinist, brings him fame and then spends the rest of her life trying to protect him from his public, other women and his temperament.

Basil Rathbone plays the part of Paul Gherardi, the genius, and represents the type often seen on the concert stage. The idol of the moment, egotistical, deeply sincere, petulantly childish, he is a very convincing character.

Kay Francis, as the "other woman," has been perfectly cast in her role. She tries to get every man she sees, and has little difficulty in charming Gherardi. She helps him to rise, demands his attentions thereafter and quickly tires of him.

"The Second Floor Mystery" is a fast-moving thriller written by Earl Der Biggers. The plot is developed around an insertion in the "Agony Column" of the London Times. A young American girl answers the ad., which states that a gentleman wishes to make the acquaintance of a lady preferring grapefruit to strawberries. Before the culmination of the plot both get into a peck of trouble, are arrested for a murder and do a great deal of explaining to clear up the situation.

This program is part of the Spring Festival now being held in all Warner Brothers' theatres, during which time the standard for pictures to be shown under this management for the coming year will be set.

"Puttin' on the Ritz," starring Harry Richman and Joan Bennett, will be shown at the Palace for the last times today. This production, mighty in its cast, scenes and music, should be seen today by all Norwich theatre-goers who have missed it during the week. Do not forget Al Jolson is coming Saturday.

Broadway Theatre

It's all gaiety at the Broadway this week, for following the final showings of William (Bill) Haines' latest joyfest, "The Girl Said No," with Leila Hyams and Marie Dressler, today, the Broadway offers tomorrow a dual program guaranteed to chase the blues. Richard Dix, sterling actor, comes into his own, in the part he has always craved to play, that of Magee, the author, in Earl Der Biggers' mystery comedy, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Briefly, Magee, on a wager, attempts to write a complete story in 24 hours, and to insure the solitude necessary for the task, takes the "only key" to a deserted inn on the top of Baldpate mountain, and locks himself in. Then and there sensations start to pile up on each other, for mysterious persons appear to the startled author, who is finally obliged to fight for his life. A howling storm does nothing to relieve his injured feelings, either. Thrills follow chills at the ghostly visitations, and chuckles grow into roars of laughter at the wild series of haps and mishaps that follow the author's attempts to be alone. George M. Cohan staged Der Biggers' story with great success, but the film version, with its greater scope and Dix's talent, transcends even Cohan's best efforts. The companion picture re-unites the greatest comedy quartette in film history, the original cast of the Cohens and Kelleys, George Sidney and Charlie Murray, with Vera Gordon and Kate Price in "The Cohens and Kelleys in Scotland." Now if you can imagine the almost impossible combination of a wild Irishman and a crafty Hebrew trying to take money from the canny Scotchmen on their own "home grounds," you have a faint idea of the mountain of hilarity contained in this reunion of talent. Not only are they trying to "gyp" the poor Highlanders, but they are after each others' scalps as well, and the result is a riot. Disaster is so close that poor Cohen attempts suicide, but is prevented by Kelley, who wants the river for his own death! For a chronic case of the "blues" or spring fever, a visit to the Broadway is a guaranteed specific. The young ladies of the city are busy determining who shall be the Broadway's "Summer Girl," and receive the gift of the up-to-the-minute summer outfit soon to be given by the Broadway.

PARTIAL ECLIPSE OF SUN IS SEEN HERE

By the use of smoked glass or dark photograph films, the eclipse of the sun was plainly seen here a little after 4 o'clock Monday afternoon. At a certain point on the Pacific coast just north of San Francisco the eclipse was total, casting a shadow half a mile wide on the earth, but there was nothing to indicate that the light of the sun was obscured at all.

When looked at through smoked glass, it could be seen that a black spot with a rounded edge was cutting into the lower right quarter of the sun, covering but a very small part of the entire surface.

The sun stood out in a cloudless sky at the time of visibility here, giving a good view of the extent of the eclipse which was to be seen in this part of the country.

By Pacific coast time the eclipse was at 11 a. m.

COUNTY FAIRGROUNDS CASE TO BE ARGUED IN THE SUPREME COURT

The New London county fairgrounds case in the suit of Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver, against George H. Gilman and Francis Gilman, who bid and made payment on the property at auction, is one of eight that are to be argued before the supreme court of errors when it opens its sitting here this (Tuesday) morning. The case comes to the supreme court on an appeal by the Gilmans.

Another important Norwich case which will be argued this session of the supreme court is the appeal of Harry L. Lathrop from the superior court decision which sustained the Norwich zoning board of appeal in refusing to grant Mr. Lathrop a permit to erect a gasoline filling station on his property on Washington street.

The judges who will sit at the court are Chief Justice George W. Wheeler and Associate Justices William M. Maltbie, Frank B. Haines, George E. Hinman and John W. Banks.

The cases in which arguments are to be made will be taken up in the following order:

State Finance Corp. against Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ballestrini all of New London, appeal taken by the plaintiff from the court of common pleas.

Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver, against George H. Gilman, both of this city, appeal taken by the defendant from the superior court.

Absalon Belliefleur of New London against the United States Finishing Co. of this city, appeal taken by the plaintiff from the superior court.

Joseph Miceili of New London against Lawrence A. Chappell of New London, appeal by the defendant from the superior court.

Anthony Silva of New London against the New Haven railroad, appeal by the plaintiff from the superior court.

Three cases pending will not be argued. One of these is that of the city of New London against the Pequot Point Beach Co. and others but since the records have not been printed in entirety as yet, this case, together with two others in which the records have not been printed, will not be heard at this time. The other two cases pending but not ready because of the printing, are those of Charles A. Lavoie of New London against the Ballou and Nagle Express Co. of Stonington and others and of the Texas Co. against Jacob R. Slosberg of this city.

The docket arranged for this session of the supreme court by Clerk John H. Walker is in a new form which contains a number of improvements which the attorneys concerned appreciate and are in line with the progressive spirit shown by the clerk of the court in instituting changes that facilitate the business of the court and are of assistance to the attorneys.

Holland, safety engineer with the Travelers, which was reinforced by the pictures shown upon Accident Prevention by James G. Buckley, textile engineer with the insurance company, whose talk pointed out the right and wrong ways to handle tools and machinery and what were good or bad conditions in manufacturing plants.

Frank Tracy favored the audience with a song, playing his own banjo-uke accompaniment, and this was followed by an interesting motion picture on the Wizardry of Wireless, which was enjoyed through the courtesy of the General Electric company.

GAVE INSTRUCTIVE TALK ON THE HAT BUSINESS

The hat making business is unique in one particular in that it is probably the only business in which the product proceeds from raw material to the finished form under one roof. This was one of the interesting facts told the Contact club at its luncheon meeting at the Wauregan hotel Monday by Robert A. Holmes, vice president and general sales manager of the Cavanaugh-Dobbs Hat company of South Norwalk, who was the luncheon speaker. Mr. Holmes came at the invitation of Francis T. Diggins, programme chairman for April, and gave the club a talk that was at once entertaining and instructive.

Vice President Abner Schwartz presided at the meeting in the absence of President E. O. Rodier, who was in New York. Alex Pasnik was song leader, and Russell Crowell was appointed programme chairman for the month of May.

He said he had been in the woods but had come back to the farm Sunday night and slept in one of the buildings, going off again into the woods Monday morning.

Mr. Northrup has had Wilcox examined by a doctor and he has been committed to the Norwich state hospital under observation.

CALVARY PLEA REPEATED IN MASS, SAYS FR. GALVIN

Explaining the hold of his religion on the Roman Catholic, why distance or difficulties weather conditions or other reasons never keep him from assisting at the holy sacrifice, why Catholic churches are always crowded, Rev. Myles P. Galvin continued Sunday at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church his series of sermons on the mass, which is the sacrifice of Calvary renewed. This theme was the purpose of the mass.

"This, he declared, was for the same reasons which existed in the sacrifice on Calvary—to adore the Creator, to thank Him for all benefits, to atone for sin, to ask God for blessings of sonul and body. God is the Creator, man the creature. God is all holiness; man is sinful. Of himself, man is unable to render God the honor and glory due Him. Good works help in the homage due God, but only a God can render to God the full honor due Him. This is posible only in the sacrifice of the mas, when a God offers Himself.

God simply loans us whatever we chance to have in this world; only by the sacrifice of the mass are we able to render Him sufficient gratitude for what He has given us. By offering Him his divine son alone are we able to pay in full, to make the supreme act af thanksgiving. This is the sacrifice of adoration, of thanks, the petition for favors and blessings in the temporal and the spiritual order. In the mass, Christ left to us the continuation of Calvary, as through His church and its sacraments He has given us power to attain salvation. It is a means of atonement for sin, prepares us for true contrition. Keeps God from letting His avenging hand fall upon us for our evil-doing and the evil-doing of the world, since in the mass Christ still utters the plea which He uttered on Calvary, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." It saves the world from God's just punishment, it is the greatest act of prayer. It is the acceptable time to ask God for favors and benefits, which we may feel sure He will grant providing they are not dertimental to the welfare of our soul.

Rev. Father Galvin, assisted Rev. John J. Reilly in giving communion to many penitents. At this service the junior choir, under direction of the organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, attempted a very ambitious composition, Lambillotte's "Haec Dies," with its majestic Alleluia chorus, which they sang exceedingly well.

The members of the Altar society employed jonquils, daffodils and genesta in securing a golden effect in the sanctuary in accord with the Easter spirit. Ascension lilies and daybreak carnations were the adornment of the main altar.

GOES TO JAIL WITH ANOTHER SENTENCE COMING

John J. O'Malley, a frequent offender, was sent up for 30 days Monday morning when he was presented before the city court on a charge of intoxication. He put up a fight while being arrested by Officer Albert Lamphere Sunday, bit one of the officer's fingers, kicked him in the knee and injured him so badly that he is temporarily confined to his home. When he returns to duty O'Malley will have to answer to the second charge against him.

DOUBTFUL VOTES TO DECIDE FATE OF PARKER IN SENATE

Senator Borah Seeks Rejection of the Nomination of Judge Parker For the U. S. Supreme Court On the Ground That Parker Had Upheld a Labor Contract Whereby Employers Bind Employes Not to Join a Union—Senators Fess, Gillett and Hastings Insisted That Parker Had Simply Upheld the Law As Laid Down By the Supreme Court —Senator Overman Continued His Defense of Judge Parker.

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—With doubtful votes admittedly holding the balance of power, the senate mixed in exhaustive debate today over the nomination of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, to the supreme court.

Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, conducted a lone-handed attack upon the nominee. He asked his rejection because of a decision which he contended upheld the labor contract whereby employers bind employes not to join unions.

Administration republicans came to the Parker defense in the afternoon with Senators Fess, of Ohio; Gillett, of Massachusetts, and Hastings, of Delaware, insisting that Parker in his labor decision upheld the law as laid down by the supreme court.

Senator Borah denied this and accused Parker, in turn, of ignoring the supreme court and going beyond it in his decision upholding an injunction restraining the United Mine Workers from soliciting membership among employes of the Red Jacket Coal company in West Virginia who had signed contracts not to join the unions.

It was the contention of Borah that Judge Parker's decision denied unions the right even to employ peaceful persuasion against the contracts.

Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, returned to the Parker defense with telegrams from Parker and others denying published charges that the nominee as a government prosecutor in war frauds cases withheld testimony tending to prove the innocence of defendants.

D. Lawrence Groner, federal district judge in Virginia, who tried the war frauds case in question, wrote to the senate that the charges were "wholly unjust and without warrant."

An assertion by Senator Fess that the Parker foes were "trying to break down the American judiciary" brought Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, into action.

"No man is fit to sit on that bench," shouted Senator Ashurst, "who ratified the 'Yellow Dog' contract. No one but a weakling could."

Senator Fess who was looked upon as the administration's spokesman in answering the Borah attack stated he had no sympathy with the decision on the "Yellow Dog" contract, but he insisted "the fault is with the contract and not the judge who interprets the violation of the contract."

Senator Gillett challenged the contention of Senator Borah that Judge Parker had held in the Red Jacket case that unions could not employ peaceful persuasion against the "Yellow Dog" contracts and therein, he insisted, was the "fallacy" of Senator Borah's argument.

The protest of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People against a speech by Judge Parker in his 1920 campaign for governor of North Carolina, was referred to by Senator Gillett who defended the nominee while disagreeing with the quotations attributed to him.

"I cannot agree with Judge Parker," Gillett said, "but I realize that environment occasions different views on the question. I do not hold the same view but I believe that as a judge he is a man of such vision and of such character that if a case involving the question came to him, he would judge it with justice and fairness."

Leaders believed tonight a vote would be reached by Thursday. After a careful checkup of the situation it was conceded by both sides that the result was in doubt.

Senator Fess pleaded for independence of the judiciary and denounced some of those who were making attacks now on Parker as aimed at the judiciary itself. The Ohioan also asserted that it was up to congress rather than the supreme court to enact legislation against the "Yellow Dog" contract.

Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, presented a letter from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, taking issue with Judge Parker's statement defending himself.

SEEKING FOR SLAYERS OF THE SMITH BROTHERS

MUSKOGEE, Okla., April 29.—(AP)—County officers tonight were seeking certain "hard characters" against whom officials of the now bankrupt New Milford Security company of Connecticut had been warned, in an effort to clear up the mystery surrounding the slaying of David and George Smith, Connecticut capitalists, who were killed in a hotel room here Saturday night.

Investigators turned to this angle of the case when dispatches from Connecticut were received which said that John L. Wike, who with P. G. Seeley, is under charges of murder in connection with the slaying of the brothers, had attempted to dissuade the Smith brothers from making the trip through Oklahoma, on which they were checking up on mortgages held by the New Milford Security company because there were many "hard characters" in the part of Oklahoma the party planned to visit, "and no one could tell what they might do to a fellow."

A preliminary hearing will be held tomorrow for Wike and Seeley, who were traveling with the Smith brothers and occupied an adjoining room to them when they were shot and killed.

Tom Graves, Muskogee police chief said a diamond ring found in Seeley's baggage corresponded to the description of one which Mrs. George Smith, widow of one of the brothers, telegraphed Graves today.

Philip K. Oldham, assistant county attorney, said there was "probable cause" for Wike and Seeley being implicated in the double killing but would not elaborate on this statement.

RUM RUNNING FLEET ABANDONED AFTER FIGHT

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., April 29.—(AP)—A rum running fleet of two sixty-foot speedsters, and a smaller, slower, supply craft, were abandoned in Raritan river today after a furious battle in the bay with a coast guard patrol boat.

The runners eluded the patrol and managed to land their cargo before the coast guards traced them up the river. Several bullet holes were in the boats, but none of the one-pound shells fired by the coast guards had found their mark.

The smugglers were discovered roaring across Raritan bay without lights about two hours before dawn. They apparently were armed with machine guns, but no weapon was found aboard the abandoned craft.

The captured boats were brought to the coast guard base at Clifton, Staten Island.

PRAISE FOR HOOVER'S ACTION TO HELP REVIVE BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, April 29. — (AP) — Praise of President Hoover for speedy action toward stemming the downward sway of business following the depression of six months ago, formed the keynote tonight of five speakers before the chamber of commerce of the United States.

Headed by Secretary Lamont and Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the national business survey conference, the business leaders centered the second general session of the 18th annual meeting of the chamber around a discussion of "business stabilization."

The commerce secretary said the chief executive's quick call to business to confer with the government last fall had definitely lessened "the death of the depression."

RESIGNATION ANNOUNCED BY BISHOP H. P. A. ABBOTT

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 29.—(AP)—Because he considered the verdict in the ecclesiastical trial of the Rev. Julius A. Velasco, Dayton, Ky., a reflection upon his integrity as a bishop, the Rt. Rev. H. P. Almon Abbott, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Lexington, today announced his resignation.

Bishop Abbott is a native of Canada, a graduate of Kings college, and attended Oxford, England. After a rapid rise in the Canadian church he became dean of Niagara. His first charge in the United States was as dean of Trinity cathedral, Cleveland.

The Rev. Edmund P. Dandridge, Tennessee, received the next largest number of votes when Abbott was elected.

Bishop Abbott is not resigning his orders, but only relinquishing his leadership of the Lexington diocese. Mr. Velasco is a native of Key West, Fla.

The presiding bishop of the Episcopal church, to whom Bishop Abbott tendered his resignation, is the Rt. Rev. James De Wolf Perry, bishop of Rhode Island.

Mr. Velasco was tried last week on charges of violating a pre-ordination agreement with the standing committee that he would not marry a Roman Catholic, conduct unbecoming a clergyman, and using defamatory language to his bishop. The ecclesiastical court, composed of five priests, acquitted Velasco of the first two charges, but found him guilty of the latter. The sentence imposed was a reprimand by the bishop.

Advised in Dayton today of the bishop's resignation, Velasco declined to comment other than to say, "the entire case is closed so far as I am concerned."

COLLAPSED AND DIED ON THE WITNESS STAND

NEW YORK, April 29.—(AP)—Testifying today as a defense witness for his firm which is being sued by Mrs. Mabel Taormina, motion picture actress, for alleged false arrest and imprisonment, Harry Garfunkel, 50, collapsed and died.

As Mr. Garfunkel, under cross examination, slumped against the side of the witness stand and then slid to the floor, his wife and two sons created an hysterical scene.

"She did it, she did it," Mrs. Garfunkel shouted, pointing at Mrs. Taormina. The trial immediately was adjourned until tomorrow.

Mrs. Taormina, known to the screen as Mabel Stapleton, had a fur coat repaired at the shop of Garfunkel and Gerth, Inc., in 1926. When the coat was delivered to her, with a bill for $350, she told the messenger some of the skins had been removed, gave him $200 and kept the coat. He returned with a patrolman and had her arrested. The case was dismissed in magistrate's court.

She is suing the firm for $50,000.

Quiet Welcome In N. Y. For Naval Delegates

Crowds W[illegible]lent As the Parad[illegible]ed Up Broadway [illegible] City Hall.

NEW YORK, April 29.—(AP)—Bearing the pact of London which limits the fleets of the three major naval forces, four of America's seven delegates to the naval limitations conference returned to the United States today aboard the liner Leviathan.

Convoyed by a battleship and two destroyers, and with the dirigible Los Angeles and army airplanes maneuvering overhead, the delegation was given a restrained welcome by a New York which apparently was more curious than it was informed.

They were met at Quarantine this morning by the usual mayor's committee of welcome, given a slow ride up the harbor aboard the municipal tug Macom, a parade up Broadway and a motorcycle escort to the Pennsylvania station. A little over an hour after they landed at Pier A, the Battery, the delegation, with the exception of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, was on a special train en route to Washington. Mr. Morrow went direct to his home in Englewood, N. J.

The delegates, headed by Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, expressed pleasure at being home again after four months' absence. They found a typical New York spring day, warm winds, clear sky, a brilliant sun. There was little applause as the delegates took their seats in waiting automobiles and started up Broadway behind three bands.

Up that deep canyon of skyscrapers the parade passed through crowds strangely silent, to the sun-drenched plaza of city hall. Only an occasional length of ticker tape floated down.

A taxi driver caught in the parade jam, pulled up and called to a patrolman, "What's this all about?"

"Admiral Stimson's home from the peace conference," the officer replied.

At the city hall the delegates were greeted by Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee.

Secretary Stimson and Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas responded. Both praised the three-power treaty as a step toward world peace, Mr. Stimson expressing the opinion that Italy and France eventually would accept such a treaty as that signed by the three major sea powers.

Climbing back in their cars the delegates were wrisked through crowd-lined but quiet streets to Pennsylvania station, where they boarded a special train for Washington. Ambassador Morrow accompanied his colleagues to the train, then went with Mrs. Morrow to Englewood.

GANDHI CONTINUES TO DENOUNCE BRITISH RULERS

BOMBAY, April 29.—(AP)—With unrest apparently slumbering in India today, no riots or sensational incidents being reported, Mahatma Gandhi took occasion at Bilimoria to denounce "British dictation" in the course of a statement on the revival of the native press censorship law by the viceroy.

"I hope the time for tame submission to dictation from our British rulers has gone forever," he said, "whether we realize it or not we have been living under a veiled form of martial law for some days past."

Mr. Gandhi said new provisions of the revived press censorship act were more severe than the original.

2 Convicts Wounded At Ohio Penitentiary

Shot By Prison Guards As They Made a Massed Attack On Barred Doors.

COLUMBUS, O., April 29—(AP)—Blood was spilled today in Ohio penitentiary, scene of disorders since Easter Monday night when a tragic fire took the lives of 320 convicts, as revolting prisoners made a mass attack on the barred doors leading from the White City idle house. Guns in the hands of prison guards sent bullets into the ranks of the mutineers, wounding two convicts, one seriously.

As if cowed by this first show of determination on the part of officials to put down the mutiny, the revolting prisoners quieted immediately, and tonight the situation was in control of the Ohio National Guard, the first time in a week that the authorities had all the prisoners under their domination.

Emboldened by the fact that they had disregarded all prison rules and orders for a week, the "passive resistance convicts today decided suddenly to mutiny. Their decision came just as Governor Myers Y. Cooper had ordered that the revolt be suppressed at once, and prison officials and Ohio National Guardsmen were planning to enter the cell block and force the convicts into submission.

The quiet of the penitentiary was broken when scores of the revolt leaders massed on the ground floor range, made a concerted rush for the guard room door, through which they would have to pass to gain the outside. They threw clubs and other missies, breaking the guard room windows. Warned to get back, the infuriated convicts refused. Instantly automatic rifles and shotguns sent a rain of bullets down the cell block runway.

The mutineers dropped to the floor until the firing ceased. Then they resumed their assault on the barred door. Again the guns spoke, and the convicts retreated into the refuge of cells. As quickly as it started, the fight ended. The wounded were rushed to the hospital, one having been shot through the lungs. Two guards, who had been held prisoner by the convicts were quickly released.

Col. R. S. Haubrich, Ohio National Guard, was placed in charge of the situation within the prison shortly after the shooting terminated. He mounted machine guns in the yard, and then marched the revolters to the dining halls for their noon meal. They had had no breakfast. When they returned to their cells they were quiet and orderly.

Within the prison yard guardsmen tonight were erecting a barbed wire stockade, with a steel building in the center. Eighteen foot telephones were being sunk into the ground. Upon these will be strung the barbed wire. center, Eighteen foot telephone poles were being sunk into the ground. Upon these will be strung the barbed wire, and tomorrow morning the revolters are to be placed withi nthis enclosure as guardsmen, with machine guns, guard the four sides. The convicts will be kept in the stockade until the idle house cell locks, all broken by the prisoners, are repaired. Then they will be marched back into the block, there to be locked in and disciplined.

No further rioting in the White City was anticipated, as Columbus city firemen had cut holes in the roof, and soldiers were prepared to drop tear gas bombs into the place at the first sign of trouble.

Among those who ran wild in the White City today were seven men condemned to die in the electric chair. All seve nwere recaptured this afternoon and rmoved to the city jail for safe keeping.

COLOR BLINDNESS WINS ACQUITTAL FOR ENGINEER

HALLE, Germany, April 29—(AP)—The possibility that various features of severe cold weather may bring a temporary color blindness causing a red light to appear green has won acquittal for Robert Siebler, a railway engineer.

Siebler, engineer of the Berlin express, had been accused of ignoring the red signal at Burgkemnitz last winter during a blizzard and crashing into a halted express train, causing one death and 24 injuries.

Evidence indicated that the soot-covered windowpane of a locomotive, in conjunction with the watering eye of the engineer in cold weather, may cause an apparent super-radiation of signal lights and cause a red light to appear green.

BODY OF A VICTIM OF THAMES RECOVERED

NEW YORK, April 29.— (AP)— The body of H. A. Westcott, one of the missing members of the crew of the freighter Thames which burned in Long Island sound last Thursday, has been recovered and taken to the coast guard base at Northport, Long Island, according to a report to headquarters here.

Sixteen were missing from the crew of 26 after the fire. The body of Westcott, the freighter's cook, is the first to be recovered.

CONN. ASSOCIATION AGAINST 18TH AMENDMENT FORMED IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, April 29.—(AP)—Bringing into being the strongest organization which has been arrayed against the 18th amendment in this state since its passage, the Connecticut division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment organized as a permanent body here tonight with a board of directors of 113 men who are outstanding in industry and professional life.

The meeting, held at the Hartford club, was addressed by Major Henry H. Curran, president, Pierre S. DuPont, chairman of the executive committee, and Captain William H. Stayton, chairman of the board, of the National Association Against Prohibition.

Major Curran, lately under the fire of an investigating committee of the United States senate, took the occasion to hit back at his inquisitors in his speech. He pointed out that while the senators had not hesitated to read into public record nearly all his confidential letters, at the same time they had withheld the contents of a letter of his containing information of "drinking dry" senators and congressmen. "What a curious collection of wastrels they are!" was his parting shot of comment.

That Connecticut and other states should adopt regulatory laws in anticipation of repeal of the 18th amendment, was the recommendation of Mr. DuPont. Equally optimistic of not too distant repeal, Captain Stayton, organizer of the association, urged the Connecticut organization "not to go too fast" in accomplishing their objective.

Attorney Lucius F. Robinson of Hartford, former president of the State Bar association, was elected chairman of the board of directors at the meeting; Col. Norris G. Osborn, editor of the New Haven Journal-Courier, vice-chairman; Goodwin B. Beach, of Goodwin-Beach and company, Hartford, treasurer, and Mayor W. Raymond Crumb, of Bristol, secretary.

PLANNING ACTION ON LAW ENFORCEMENT PROPOSALS

Republican Leaders In Both House and Senate Are Considering Means to Expedite Legislation—The Administration Expects to Develop a Coordination of Federal and State Authorities to Carry On a Vigorous Campaign Against Prohibition Law Violators, Particularly Against Gangsters In the Larger Cities.

WASHINGTON, April 29.— (AP) — Means to expedite action on law enforcement proposals were considered by house and senate republican leaders today in response to President Hoover's appeal to congress for legislation that would reduce the nation's crime tolls.

Although both branches are confronted by tariff and other important legislation that probably will keep them busy for weeks, senate leaders hope for early action on pending prohibition enforcement transfer and prison bills already passed by the house. House leaders expect to give the chief executive cooperation in his efforts to relieve court congestion. Bills are being considered to provide additional federal judges.

It became known today that the justice department with the approval of the administration had adopted a policy of cooperation with local authorities in stamping out lawless rings.

An intensive drive on rings of lawbreakers is planned by the justice department which expects to obtain the maximum of assistance from state and municipal authorities under the new policy.

With the development of the system of coordinating activities of federal and state authorities, the administration expects the justice department to carry on a vigorous campaign against prohibition law violators, particularly gangsters in the larger cities.

While awaiting action by the senate on bills to authorize a $7,000,000 federal prison program, the justice department has decided to utilize three former army camps in which to place the growing prison population that already has overcrowded the existing institutions.

Confronted by serious opposition from many quarters, the law enforcement commission's proposals before the house judiciary committee to legalize juryless trials of minor dry law violators apparently have died in committee.

That group is to meet tomorrow, however, to determine how many additional judges are to be needed to relieve congestion in federal courts. Seventeen bills are to be considered, and it is probable each will be approved.

Progress has been made by the house interstate commerce committee on a bill to create a unified military border patrol under the coast guard. Representative Hoch, republican, Kansas, chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the legislation, considers that action on it may be taken this session.

The Williamson bill to transfer prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the justice department and the bills to authorize the construction of a prison in a northeastern state and a reformatory west of the Mississippi, are still in senate committees.

Attorney General Mitchell disclosed today that the northeastern penitentiary would be built in the vicinity of Erie, Pa.

Mitchell said his department was cooperating in every way possible with local authorities in a campaign to suppress organized criminal gangs.

Mitchell said that on April 23rd there were 11,985 prisoners in federal institutions which had a capacity of 6,946 and on last Jan. 15 a total of 13,565 federal prisoners in county and state jails, making a total increase of federal prisoners in the last nine months of more than 6,000.

He said three remedies for court congestion had been advanced. First that United States commissioners try minor cases, second that congress authorize the appointment of inferior federal judges and third that there be a general increase in federal judges.

MASEFIELD MENTIONED FOR POET-LAUREATE OF ENGLAND

LONDON, April 29—(AP)—A man who has roamed the world in carefree hobo fashion, and once was even a porter in a New York saloon, may be the next poet-laureate of England.

Indications were today that Prime Minister MacDonald soon would appoint a successor to the late Doctor Robert Bridges, and the name of John Masefield is most prominently mentioned.

Masefield has been a seaman, ships cook, farm hand and ordinary hobo. He went to sea when only a boy and traveled over the world. One day when he arrived in New York he decided to tramp across the United States. Eventually he returned to New York and there took the saloon job in a place kept by Luke O'Connor.

After a long struggle for success in writing he finally attained it with three poems, "The Everlasting Mercy," published in 1911; "The Widow in the Bye-Street," 1912, and "Dauber," 1913. His most famous novel is "Sard Harker."

Masefield is 55 years old and has a wife and two children.

RIGHT OF UNION MEN TO PICKET THEATRES UPHELD

NEW HAVEN, April 29—(AP)—Judge Carl Foster, in superior court today upheld the right of striking motion picture operators to picket theatres without making themselves liable for damages suffered by the owners.

The decision denied the plea of Johnson-Robbins, Inc., operators of the Strand theatre, Hamden, for an injunction and $1,000 damages.

The application for an injunction was directed against Motion Picture Operators' union, Number 273.

The suit was the result of a strike last fall in which the Strand theatre failed to meet the demands of the union.

The Berlin police and the Anti-White Slave Traffic society were stated to be communicating with the Uruguayan authorities.

65 FOREST, BRUSH AND GRASS FIRES IN N. Y. STATE

ALBANY, N. Y., April 29—(AP)—With 65 forest, brush and grass fires, two of which were not under control, taking heavy toll in widely separated sections of the state, the state conservation commission tonight issued the warning that bonfires should not be started in woods or fields for any purpose until a heavy rain removed statewide conditions of dryness. High winds have added to the forest fire hazard.

In southwestern Sullivan county, near Summitville, fire had swept over more than 1,000 acres of forest land, despite efforts of scores of forest rangers and volunteers. The other fire not under control was near Mount Beacon, in Dutchess county, which had burned over 1,500 acres.

Approximately 80 acres of the 1,000 acre Charles Lathrop Pack demonstration forest near Warrensburg, property of the New York State College of Forestry had been destroyed. Other serious fires in the Adirondack regions were at Indian Lake, where ten acres of brush land and second growth timber had been swept; at Chazy, where fire swept over five acres, and at Elizabethtown, Ausable Forks and Tupper Lake.

CLAIMS TAXPAYERS ASSO. RUINED WINDHAM'S CREDIT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 29. — That there exists a concerted effort against the attempts of the Taxpayers' Protective association to have a citizen committee authorized to name the auditors who shall examine the town books, was revealed today in a circular letter that was received by many voters, mainly of democratic tendency. The letter decries an allegation that the association has stamped itself as being of political character in adherence to the republican party and that its activities have all but ruined the credit of the town of Windham.

The letter comes as a preliminary to the special town meeting to be held next Thursday night when various clauses relative to an audit of the town books will be acted upon, including one naming Dr. George E. Wilcox, Attorney William A. Arnold and Henry A. Bugbee as a committee to select the accountants to do the work. The forthcoming special town meeting is supplementary to one held some time ago and the minutes of which provide an audit of the books of the selectmen, without mention of those of the town treasurer, contrary to the evident intention of the prime movers for an audit.

When approached on the matter of the circular letter today Judge of Probate Valentine L. Murphy, who is chairman of the democratic town committee, stated that insofar as he knew the town committee had no knowledge of the letter until it was received in the mail this morning. The letter, it is noted, is signed "Democratic Committee." Asked whether the town committee approved or disapproved of the letter, Judge Murphy stated that there were 70 members of the town committee and as a meeting had not been held to consider the letter he was unable to give an opinion on the matter. It was made clear to the reporter that the democratic town committee as a group had no participation in the framing or circularizing of the letter in question. The letter follows:

Willimantic, Connecticut,
April 28, 1930.

Dear Sir:

You must know of the activities of the Taxpayers Protective association and how their course has all but ruined the credit of the town. If the association was capably led and operated along the right channels as a non-partisan organization, then it could and would accomplish a great deal of good but the tactics used and the absolute indifference of the Taxpayers association to anything that might be done at the recent city meeting, evidently because the republican party controls the city, stamps it as political in character, beyond the shadow of a doubt.

That there will be an audit of the town accounts in certain. It is only fair to Frank Fenton that there should be one but it is not fair that it should be conducted and controlled by his enemies who lose no opportunity to misinterpret and distort the facts. Therefore, the auditor should be engaged by the selectmen who were elected by the people to conduct their business. They should not be sidetracked for a committee who hold no official position and who in all probability could not be elected to one.

We, democrats, must stick together to see that justice is done a fellow democrat. Frank P. Fenton. That is all we ask, no favors, just fair play, that's all. Will you not then attend the town meeting on May 1, 1930, in the town hall at 8 o'clock, daylight saving time, and get two or three others to attend also, so that we may be able to place the authority for engaging the auditor in the hands of the selectmen where it belongs.

Yours very truly,
DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

The recent city meeting referred to is believed to be the one during which an appropriation of $5,000 was voted for repairs to the footbridge which has been closed for some weeks because of its dangerous condition and which many voters were anxious to have repaired and re-opened to traffic, resulting in the special meeting on the matter.

RESERVES DECISION IN TENNENBAUM CASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, April 29.—A conflict in the statutes of the state was established as the defense in the case of Abraham Tennenbaum of Chestnut Hill, town of Columbia, who was arraigned in the Columbia town court Monday on a charge of setting a fire without a permit. The defense, set forth by Hubert P. Collins, Columbia justice of the peace, was that the state corn borer act of 1929 requiring the destriction of corn stalks before April 10, is in conflict with an act passed in 1925 which specifies that no fire must be set in the open without a permit. Tennenbaum was charged with violation of the 1925 act. After hearing the testimony Justice of the Peace Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch announced that she would reserve her decision until Friday. Deputy Fire Warden C. Huntington Lathrop of Lebanon, testified to having been an eye-witness of the violation on April 2.

Tennenbaum contended that he was burning corn stalks on his own property. Lester Hutchins testified that he saw the fire but did not know by whom it was set. Assistant Attorney General John H. King of this city was an interested occupant of the spectator's gallery. The case is widely regarded as a "test" case.

A similar charge against Clarence Holbrook of the Pine street district was nolled on recommedation of Grand Juror Joseph N. Clarke who expressed the belief that the young man was merely shielding somebody else. A third case of like nature is pending against Justice of the Peace Collins but Deputy Warden Lathrop said Monday night that he was uncertain as to whether prosecution would be made in the case.

At the session of police court this morning Claude C. Mathewson, 20, of 227 Ash street, was fined $25 and costs on a charge of reckless driving. The case was a continued one and is the outgrowth of a collision on March 19, at the corner of Valley and North streets, between cars operated by Mathewson and Euclide F. Ledoux, also of this city. Mrs. Ledoux and Mrs. Esther Reynolds, passengers in the Ledoux car, were injured and were patients in St. Joseph's hospital for some time. Mathewson pleaded not guilty. Police Officer Roderick Lariviere testified that the accused admitted driving about 35 miles an hour at the time.

The members of the Windham high school vocational agriculture teams which scored a total of 5,187.9 points, taking highest honors and the sweepstakes cup in the state-wide judging contests held at Storrs Saturday were: Animal husbandry, Milton Beebe of Mansfield, Richard Ives of Hebron and Arthur Keefe of Hebron; dairy cattle, George Landeck of Chaplin, William Pearl of Hampton and Miss Sophie Sulkowski of Mansfield; poultry, Norman Paulhus of this city, Keith Rose of Coventry and Shubael Wheeler of Scotland; sweepstakes, Beebe, Ives, Keefe, Landeck, Paulhus, Pearl, Rose, Sulkowski and Wheeler. Richard Ives of Hebron registered the highest individual score in judging beef heifers; Arthur Keefe of Hebron, highest individual score in shorthorn heifers, and William Pearl, highest individual in judging all classes of dairy cattle as well as highest scoring individual in judging Jerseys and Holsteins. The local high school vocational courses are in charge of Instructor R. L. Hahn.

There have been so many complaints concerning the traffic on Aspinook street since the tearing up of Main and North Main streets, that the entrance from North Main has been closed. The street has been used for a detour and it has been a menace to the safety of the children who live in the houses, as well as to pedestrians. A blind turn at the south end made it all the more unsafe especially as many drivers did not sound their horns.

DANIELSON

CAR ON RAMPAGE NEARLY HITS CHIEF McFARLAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 29—Chief John McFarland barely ascaped what might have been serious injury this afternoon when a car operated by John E. Lindberg of Reynolds street went out of control after being in a sideswiping affair with another machine operated by Wilfred Blanchette of Danielson, mounted a sidewalk and plowed into a store front in Main street, just below the railroad crossing. Chief McFarland heard the crash of the Lindberg and Blanchette cars and looking back, as he walked along the sidewalk, saw the Lindberg car coming at him. He fairly bounded out of the danger zone.

An instant later the Lindberg car crashed into the Goodman store, damaged by fire about a week ago, broke out a plate glass window and tore out the corner post. In backing out, Mr. Lindberg struck another car that was parked across the street in front of the A. and P. store, this machine owned by Frederick Reynolds.

The unfortunate affair is believed to be due to Mr. Lindberg losing control of his machine after striking the Blanchette car. He was not held on any charges by Chief McFarland, as he is a responsible man capable of adjusting the considerable damage claims likely to grow out of the affair. It was just one of those unfortunate cases where everything seemed to go wrong in rapid succession.

FILES PETITION ASKING FOR SPECIAL MEETING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 29—A petition, signed by the requisite number of citizens, has been filed with the selectmen asking that a special town meeting be called to pass upon the proposal that the town invite bids from persons who would like the contract of doing Killingly's road repair work. For many years the town has done the work under the direction of the selectmen.

Proponents of the plan to let the road repair work out to the lowest bidder are convinced that money can be saved for the town under the contract method.

The last annual town report covering the financial year ending July 31, 1929, shows that road repair work and selectmen's pay for the period was $20,659.08, out of an available appropriation of $22,500.

By districts, $5,022.43 was spent in the first district of the town, which includes Danielson; $3,305.40 in the second district and $4,403.36 in the third district.

In addition there was spent on the gravel appropriation (special) $6,682.63 out of $7,500 that was made available for this item in the budget. This gravel money was divided between the districts as follows: First, $1,584.73; second, $2,473.08; third, $2,624.82.

For pay in doing supervisory work First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast received $295, Selectman N. P. Gingras $352 and Selectman Alcott D. Sayles $715. In addition Mr. Tillinghast received $84.50 for transportation. Mr. Gingras received $103 and Mr. Sayles $74.50 for the same reason. James A. Gilbert, who preceded Mr. Tillinghast as first selectman and figured in part of the year's expenditures, received $100 for pay and $38 for transportation.

These figures show the sums of money involved in carrying on the work it is proposed to let out on contract.

It was indicated this morning that if the town should decide to adopt this innovation it will be under necessary guarantees of the responsibility of any contractor or contractors who might be awarded the work. The town also has been legally advised that any contractor who is awarded the work will be required to file a bond sufficient to cover any failure upon his part to do the work as required, for after all administration of the care of the roads cannot be entirely removed from the hands of the selectmen.

The coming special town meeting likely will prove a lively one. Those who want the road work done by contract are strong for the plan. Others contended today that the scheme cannot work out right or be of any advantage to the town, and there you are—two schools of opinion, both of a positive nature.

JEWETT CITY MAN FINED IN LISBON TOWN COURT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, April 29—State Officer John Murphy of the Danielson barracks arrested Thomas Kilbosa of Jewett City and John M. Durkin of Hartford today after an accident to the men's Ford trucks in the town of Lisbon, and before Justice Earl Palmer in Lisbon this afternoon Durkin was fined $10 and costs for failure to grant half the traveled right of way, and Kilbosa $3 for not having his registration with him. Both cars were considerably damaged in the crash, which occurred on the Newent road.

Danielson's streets are being made ready for their annual spring treatment with oil. Meanwhile they are being patched wherever such attention is needed. Sand with which to cover the oil is to be distributed in the near future. The oil will be applied by a concern equipped to do such work in the most rapid and efficient manner.

Operators of public service cars are complaining bitterly that they are being subjected in this town to unfair and illegal competition by owners of private cars that are using them to carry passengers for pay. From time to time throughout the present year the public service car men have been heard in protest on this matter. Just now they appear to be very considerably upset over the matter. Difficulty is encountered in trying to correct the situation because of secret understandings between those alleged to be violating the law and those that ride with them as paying passengers. The public service car men point out they are taxed heavily for the privilege of carrying on their business, whereas private car owners who are taking business away from them pay only the pleasure car registration fee.

FUNERAL

Joseph B. Seguin

The funeral of Joseph Bernard Seguin, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Seguin, was held from their home on Elm street, West Side, with an afternoon funeral service at St. James' church, Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., officiating. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers, all little boys of seven, were Ferdinand Seguin, Donald Spencey, Gerard Filateau and Paul Bernier. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Twenty members of Harmony Court, Order of Amaranth, of Danielson, were at South Manchester to attend a session of the grand court. Ethelle M. Parkhurst, royal matron of the local court, was appointed grand crown bearer, and Normand Parkhurst, past royal patron, was appointed as representative of the state to Washington. Treasurer Sidney W. Bard of the Brooklyn Savings bank, one of the local delegation, served as a member of the committee on credentials, and Mrs. L. S. Ingalls on the committee on appeals and grievances. Adele M. Bantley, royal grand matron, presided. A banquet was served the delegates by members of Chapman court of South Manchester.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Mary E. Adams

This afternoon at one o'clock at the home in Attawaugan funeral services for Mrs. Mary Ella Adams were conducted by Rev. C. H. Van Nutter, pastor of the Attawaugan Methodist Episcopal church, assisted by Rev. W. D. Woodward of Manchester, a former pastor. Burial was in Grove street cemetery at Putnam. The bearers were Harris Barrett of Revere, Mass., Kent A. Darbie, Elmer C. Wood and Albert C. Greenslit. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Many growers of corn in this area are taking very particular care with their plowing of old corn fields this year, to prevent the spread of the European corn borer. It is noted by observers that the admonition of agricultural societies that all trace of last year's corn crop be thoroughly plowed under or burned is being obeyed. Attention of those who plant gardens is also called by agriculturalists to the need of using as much care with plowing and cleaning these fields as with the larger acreages.

There is the prospect that Killingly High school's band of nearly 50 pieces will be nattily uniformed through an effort that will be made by the Rotary and Lions clubs here, in co-operation with Principal Ernest R. Warren of the high school faculty. The cost of the uniforms is expected to be somewhat in excess of $600. Various means will be used to raise this money, one thing being the bringing here of the Pawtucket High school band, an outstanding organization among the school bands of New England, to give a concert and possibly to play for a dance, on a date about mid-May.

The third and fourth degrees will be conferred on a class of candidates by the ladies' degree team of Killingly grange when the grange meets next Monday evening.

At the annual meeting of the organization in Hartford Walter A. Musgrave of Danielson was elected secretary of the Connecticut Society of Certified Public Accountants.

The children's committee of the eastern district of the Connecticut Council of Congregational Women is to hold a meeting and tea in the Westfield Congregational Parish house here next Sunday afternoon. Well known speakers will be heard at this meeting.

Fred Phaneuff, presented in court before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis this morning, was sent to jail for 30 days for intoxication and for 90 additional days for breach of the peace.

It is pointed out that motorists who stop in front of homes at night and loudly sound horns on their machines are committing a disturbance of the peace for which they may be ordered into court. The practice awakes entire neighborhoods and is becoming a nuisance here.

Advance notice is given that Miss Margaret Slattery "Friend of Youth" will come here on May 25 under the auspices of the Danielson Tri-Y club and will speak in the afternoon and in the evening.

Children's day programs are being arranged for June 8 in Danielson. At some of the churches there will be baptisms of children.

NEW STATE ARMORY FOR PUTNAM BEING CONSIDERED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, April 29—(AP)—This city is on the list for a new state armory to house the equipment of the Headquarters company of the 43rd, Div., National Guard and the prospect of the new state building being realized at some date in the future is seen in the fact that equipment of the local military unit is arriving at intervals, with the result that before the entire allotment of suppplies is received, larger storage quarters will have to be provided.

The headquarters company is part of the special troops of the division. The company was organized in 1924 and has grown steadily since the date of its organization. The large building on Harris street, originally built to house the supplies and serve as a drill shed for a former Putnam military outfit, was renovated and converted into an armory two years ago. The quarters are stately and impressive, the drill shed being one of the largest halls anywhere in the state. At the present it is serving the needs the present time it is serving the needs of the company adequately, but before long, Putnam will have to have a new armory and many are of the opinion that it will be only a few years before the state takes steps to provide the unit with the quarters which have already been considered.

Disrespect shown in past seasons by a certain element of Windham county sportsmen for the fish and game laws, is fast being ironed out with the establishment of a new high standard of efficiency in patrolling the streams and woodlands by officers of the county game commission. In the northern section of the county, Warden George H. Liard, who is assigned to patrol brooks and streams within the territory, in making his daily rounds has not encountered a single violator since the commencement of the brook fishing season. Anglers on the banks of the streams are interviewed by Warden Liard, concerning catches and on other subjects pertaining to the enforcement of the fishing laws. In this manner a careful check of conditions of the streams are kept, at the same time preserving good fishing for sportsmen who have paid for the privileges.

Officers of the game patrol, through their alertness have prevented the loss of valuable woodlands to the county since the opening of the season, by their work snuffing out small brush fires kindled by the acts of careless sportsmen.

In the northern portion of the county patrolled by Warden Liard, there have been no arrests of fishermen to date. The warden reports that men and women and even young boys, enjoying hours spent along the streams, are especially cautious, making efforts to keep within the law. It is in this way that indifferent owners of excellent trout streams are gradually taking down their placards forbidding trespassing and permitting law abiding sports enthusiasts to angle in the streams, where in the past fishing has been taboo because of malicious depredations of a certain few unfair sportsmen.

A reservoir to contain mineral spring water for drinking purposes is now being constructed on a hillside in the Mashamoquet park in Pomfret. The park which is one of the most beautiful state parks is situated on the Putnam-Hartford highway, between the village of Abington and Pomfret. In the summer time it is visited by many tourists daily, and the reservoir when completed will be another convenience added to the list of those already afforded visitors there. The park is cared for by Park Warden William Smedley, who is also in charge of the Wolf Den, state owned park in Pomfret, where the famous wolf den of Israel Putnam fame is located.

Levi Minard of Water street, was before Judge P. P. Tourtellotte in justice court in North Grosvenordale yesterday afternoon and was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and evading responsibility following an accident, for which he was fined $100 and costs, with half the amount being remitted. State Officer James Carmody of the Danielson barracks presented the case in court.

Ice in 80 minutes

World's Fastest Freezing
—proved in nation-wide test—

In a country-wide test on March 18, Kelvinator dealers in 48 states and the District of Columbia, reported that Kelvinator's wonderful Super-Fast Freezing froze water to solid ice in from 45 to 155 minutes.

The average of all freezing tests was 80 minutes. Even the outside figure—155 minutes—is far faster than any other automatic freezing known to domestic electric refrigeration.

Demand Super-Fast Freezing in the Refrigerator You Buy

Only Kelvinator domestic models have the famous Iso-Thermic Tubes, without which automatic super-fast freezing is impossible.

These tubes, acting as a cold plate, give amazingly fast freezing, automatically. No regulation is needed. Nothing to tax the memory.

Only with Kelvinator can you freeze ice rapidly without lowering the temperature in main food compartment. Foods can never be spoiled through too low a degree of cold.

The model Kelvinator you require may be purchased on easy terms through Kelvinator's attractive ReDisCo monthly budget plan.

4-WAY COLD

Back of Super-Fast Freezing is Kelvinator's remarkable 4-Way Cold. In Kelvinator de luxe models are maintained four separate degrees of cold at all times—each wholly automatic and independent of the other. All domestic models have super-fast freezing. 1180

CHANGING POPULATION

These are the days when many a community is much interested in learning whether it has experienced an increase or a decrease in population according to the unfinished census. Time will tell the story, but there is an eagerness to have the information before it has been obtained. The result will be fully enlightening when the work has been completed but there is difficulty experienced in waiting.

Census enumeration has been completed in many small places and in many instances it is being disclosed that the small towns have decreased. This isn't always the case, for there are those which have gone ahead, but in eight states surrounding the 1920 center of population on the line between Illinois and Indiana 60 per cent of the small towns have disclosed a decrease in population from 5 to 100 per cent. The same effect is to be noted in village population in six of those states with a drop of 62 to 80 per cent, while in the other two the decrease is also evident but amounts to only about 30 per cent.

Just what shifting of population has been done in the last ten years cannot be fully told until the enumeration has been completed but it was shown in one list of 90 places with populations of over 10,000 that there was an aggregate population gain of over 22 per cent, and yet some of the gains as well as the losses are in places where it would be least expected.

There are the instances where the New England cities which have been hit by the textile situation have experienced a loss, while southern cities which have benefited from the New England situation are displaying a gain. Thus while there is shown to be a growth in cities it does not necessarily apply to all cities. Conditions play their part in influencing population changes in cities, and even though there are many of the small towns which show decreases it is nevertheless apparent that there has been more or less migration in the decade from cities to outlying towns through the enticement of good roads and the influence of the automobile. The situation today is such that those living in the country can easily get the benefit of city advantages by cranking up their machines and motoring in, while many who have city jobs during the day find it advantageous to spend their hours of rest and sleep in the quiet of the country.

GRADE CROSSINGS

While the accidents and fatalities at railroad grade crossings are frequently the basis for demands for more elimination work at large expense, there is invariably a failure to appreciate the fact that a far greater number of motor vehicle accidents and fatalities is being recorded at other points. Thus, even if it were possible to eliminate all of the grade crossings, there would still be an appalling number of casualties due to the manner in which automobiles are driven.

Such being the case, it is inevitable that railroad authorities should indicate that attention is being directed in the wrong channel. The peril at grade crossings cannot be disregarded. It is real, but it lies within the power of the auto drivers to keep down the number of accidents and deaths at such points. Thus when Vice-President Galloway of the Baltimore and Ohio road calls attention to the fact that for the decade including 1929 there were but 579 persons killed on the railroads of the country, while in the one year 1929 there were 31,500 killed on the highways by autos, it is perfectly evident that serious fault rests with the operators of motor vehicles. Furthermore, he points out that when crashes occur at street intersections there is nothing heard about having one of the highways elevated, but with many that is the first thing thought of when grade crossing accidents are involved.

If any great amount of thought is given to the crossing situation it cannot fail to be recognized that most of the accidents are preventable. There is need for greater care, which would not be furnished by the elimination of crossings. Danger spots would be removed but the careless operating of autos would go on just the same and the safety of the highways would not be increased.

There is recognized need of having crossings plainly indicated, equipped with signals that operate or other protective devices, and there are plenty of instances where unusually bad and much used crossings should be removed. The slaughter at such points is deplorable but for the most part due to those at the wheel.

SHIFTING GULF STREAM

Whenever things get a bit out of joint weatherwise someone is sure to bob up with the explanation that the Gulf stream has shifted and with that as a basis all kinds of interesting tales are told of what may happen as a consequence. Because the famous stream has its effect upon the climate it is an easy matter to notice that colder weather than ought to be expected is due to a change in its course, or warmer conditions are experienced when it moves in the right direction.

The discussion over the Gulf stream and its inclinations to shift has been revived by Captain Rostron of the Berengaria. He has crossed so often and studied it so much that he has advanced the opinion that the stream is moving nearer to the coast and causing some people to prepare for the time when this part of the country will have a temperature like Bermuda and be a vacation ground the year around.

It furnishes something to dream or speculate about, but it fails to get the endorsement of G. W. Littlehales, chief hydrographic engineer of the navy department. He has a reputation far beyond this country for his knowledge of ocean conditions. He will not concede that there is any chance that the temperature of New England is to undergo any such permanent change. It is not a new thing for ocean currents to change their course, but when they do they gradually get back again, so that while the Gulf stream may be some nearer to the coast this spring as the sea captain claims it really furnishes slight ground for thinking it is going to be permanent. The fact is that the coldness of this spring would seem to indicate that either the Gulf stream had lost its heat or else, if it has actually moved west, little benefit can be expected from it in a climatic way.

Nothing is furnished to show what sort of an enticement would bring about a permanent and favorable shifting of the Gulf stream. New England is always interested in what would be beneficial during some of our rugged winters and its influence might be helpful in aiding Block Island to recover the population it has lost in the last decade.

HOME FROM LONDON

With the return of the United States delegates from the London conference, Washington can be expected to develop increased interest over the accomplishments and the effects.

The result of the conference is well summed up by Secretary Stimson when he says: "We feel we have accomplished a long step on the road to peace. By this treaty which we bring home competition will be completely ended between the navies of the three greatest naval powers of the world—America, Great Britain and Japan—and with the other two powers—France and Italy—we have also reached agreements which though not complete are leading in the same direction. Eventually, we hope, competition will be abolished between all five powers."

Because the conference did not accomplish all that was hoped doesn't mean that there isn't cause for gratification over results obtained. Other conferences have demonstrated the fact that the important thing is to keep moving in the right direction. The goal last January was a laudable one. Because it was not reached in all particulars doesn't mean failure. Through steady progress, through step by step advancement on the goal, all the nations are gradually being brought to a realization of the merits of the effort. Sure progress, even though slow, is preferable to rapid developments which cannot be maintained.

When competition is eliminated in naval construction one of the big causes of war and the suspicion among nations has been removed. Without neglecting defense provisions the nations are turning to thoughts of peace rather than preparations for war and evincing a desire to settle disputes in a sane manner rather than by resort to bloodshed. Every conference that aids in further development along that line is moving in the right direction and such agreements as result are deserving of ratification. Washington and the country, as well as New York, has good reason to hail the return of the naval delegates.

SENATORIAL POLITICS

Repeated have been the instances where those who sought to embarrass the president undertook to learn what he wanted or didn't want in the way of legislation. It was perfectly evident from the manner in which the requests were made and the ones making them that sincerity did not actuate the senators. It had been demonstrated that to disclose his desires was sufficient to produce an adverse vote, the coalition apparently getting considerable pleasure out of such a course of action.

In communications to congressional leaders and to congress the president has called attention to conditions which he considered made it necessary for him to speak. These have been in the nature of warnings as to what is threatened if congress fails to give heed to the budget and the possibility of a deficit. It was perfectly evident from what the president said and the manner in which he said it as to what he meant, but in keeping with the disposition to lose no opportunity to embarrass there has been offered a resolution in the senate requesting the president to give a list of the measures which threaten a deficit and indicate what he favors and what he opposes.

It is the old story again of trying to get the president to express himself on legislation so that it can be treated in a contrary manner. Any of the senators knows perfectly well how far it will be possible to go in the way of making appropriations without getting to the point where there will be danger of putting the government in the red. They know the difference between emergency legislation and that which can wait without doing any harm. They also know the political game and there are those who are always ready and willing to place it ahead of constructive legislative business. The resolution that has been presented bristles with the politics characteristic of the present senate. Instead of being desirous of getting the president's views for such help as they might be, the purpose is to secure them for further political activity.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Oh, that we were a-Maying!

Now that you have gotten adjusted to daylight saving, how much longer the summer is going to be!

Because of counter attractions not much has been heard lately about the 12-mile limit, but what it is supposed to stop continues to appear in impressive volume.

It is highly amusing to note that those who are so much disturbed over Judge Parker's attitude toward the Negro have never lifted their finger to remove the democratic disfranchisement of the Negro in the south.

SNAKE SKIN SHOES

"What's all the sighing and sobbing for?" demanded Mrs. Ripley, with a sweet pout at her young husband.

"This bill," replied Ripley trying not to show his utter vexation. "Snake skin shoes, for instance—"

"But you told me to get comfortable ones, dear," said Mrs. Ripley, eyes misty.

"Yes, but good heavens, twenty-two dollars for shoes. And rent almost due, et cetera. I make only ninety dollars a week. If we spend a hundred, at the end of a year we owe five hundred and twenty dollars. And that is bad any way you look at it."

The lovely Mrs. Ripley shook her head sadly.

"I thought you would get used to my extravagance," she finally murmured. "Couldn't you possibly get more money from Mr. Hemingway? After all, you must be worth more than ninety dollars. Men are either worth fifty dollars or a hundred and fifty a week. I don't see how any man can be worth just exactly ninety dollars. Do you, darling?"

"Precedence. Hemingway paid the last man in my job ninety. Next year I'll have to wait for a hundred and a quarter."

"How silly," cried Mrs. Ripley.

The tinkle of the telephone put an end to the matter and Ripley turned to he evening paper.

At bedtime, however, Mrs. Ripley hinted at the subject of bills and income by sighing.

"Men are so helpless in some matters. I don't think you know how to handle Hemingway, darling."

"Ugh, I don't? Huh," said Ripley. He kicked his oxfords into a far corner and strode into the bathroom.

Mr. Ripley took the steps at one jump and almost tore down the front door.

"Dear," he began, almost stuttering, "do you know, I am now—I mean, did you tell any one we were moving to California?"

Mrs. Ripley opened her big blue eyes just a trifle wider and stared.

"Let me think," she frowned, evasively.

"Do you go to Mrs. Hemingway's bridge affairs?" persisted her husband. "And do you—well, chatter about us moving away from here?"

"Darling," said Mrs. Ripley, "I only tell the truth. You know we often speak of how nice it would be to go to California or Florida, or—"

"Yes, for a vacation. But not to work."

"We don't need to tell everybody everything," argued Mrs. Ripley. "I only said yesterday, that we planned to go to California—"

"Yes, and Mr. Hemingway called me into his office and asked me about it," interrupted Ripley. "Before I could say yes or no he went on about my job here and the future and—and asked me to stay with him. Then, you little rascal, he said his wife was rather fond of you, that we ought to move over into their neighborhood. When I started to offer my reasons for not moving he just waved off my arguments and began talking money. Real money, dear. I'm to get a hundred and fifty dollars a week. And a better job, starting the first—"

"Of course," smiled Mrs. Ripley. "Didn't I say you were helpless and couldn't handle Hemingway? I couldn't handle him, myself, but I knew that Mrs. Hemingway could. So there we are. And you're worth every penny of what you get. Besides, I did want to go to California."

"So did I," confessed Ripley. "On a vacation."

"Certainly," nodded Mrs. Ripley. "But I'll need some hose and hats to go with my new shoes."

"Go as far as you like," sighed Ripley.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, April 29—Royal Johnson of South Dakota has been looking up this question of the toughest government job.

He finds it is the presidency. And second only to the white house berth he puts the director of the veterans' bureau.

"It is the second most difficult job in the United States," is the way Johnson puts it.

This South Dakota estimate of hard job relativities under Uncle Sam came out during house debate of the new veterans' bill. Johnson took occasion to pay an extraordinary tribute to Gen. Frank T. Hines, bureau director for seven years and one-time Utah boy "water corporal" in the mines of his native state.

"I do not think General Hines will remain always in the service," Johnson said.

"During all the seven years not one personal attack has been made on him. Everyone takes this floor, and legion convention floors, and abuses the bureau for about half an hour and then says, 'We think the general is a great man.'

"He did not seek the office. He was drafted for it. When he tried to resign, he was redrafted. I hope he continues in the service while we try to work out this legislation.

Artillerist

Most folks probably don't know that Frank Hines was a Spanish war volunteer, enlisting as a college youngster at 18 in the Utah artillery that reached the Philippines in time for the fighting before the walls of Manila.

Despite his youth, Hines jumped through non-commission ranks to a lieutenancy, a promotion made in the field. He was then the youngest artillery officer in the entire army.

More than that, he won a recommendation for the congressional medal of honor for gallantry in action before Manila in the first real clash of Spanish and American forces of that campaign, July 31, 1899.

Perhaps that appeals to the Bystander particularly because he was there himself that night, that stormy, muddy, exciting night so long ago, lying with California doughboys in support behind those very Utah guns. He will never forget the reassuring sound of those barking 3-inchers.

Often Drafted

Frank Hines has a habit of being drafted to big jobs. Naturally, he got into the regular army as a gunner officer after the war with Spain and specialized on coast defense guns. He was drafted to help Greece fix up her harbor defenses just before the outbreak of the world war and that led to his being drafted to ship 3,000 stranded American tourists home from Europe when the struggle started.

And that ultimately led to his being drafted to ship more than 2,000,000 fighting Americans to France, which in turn led to his being drafted to reorganize the veterans' bureau after four men had been tried out on the job.

Stories That Recall Others

Preparedness

Shortly after Billy, first grader, left for school, which is only two blocks from his home, it began to rain.

At the kiddies' recess period Billy rushed into the house. Dripping from the pouring rain, he gasped: "Mother, give me an umbrella to go home with at noon."

At noon the sun was shining.

In Training

Betty wanted to get big enough to go to kindergarten, so she was told what she must do.

Her aunt had a full length mirror in which Betty liked to look at herself. One day she was heard to say: "Betty, you drink your milk and eat your spinach, and you've quit sucking your thumb, but you are not a bit bigger than you were the last time I saw you. You will have to take more cod liver oil."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Finds Out a Secret

The zest of life it doth enhance
To find a secret out by chance.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit is like a lot of other people—full of curiosity. If any one has a secret, Peter does his best to find it out. He cannot seem to be happy unless he is poking that wabbly little nose of his into the affairs of other folk. So when Peter had reason to think that Sammy Jay and Mrs. Jay had built a nest, he wanted to know where it was. He knew it was quite useless to ask Sammy Jay. He knew that Sammy Jay would probably tell him that it was no business of his. So Peter went looking for it.

Now, when he doesn't want to be seen, Sammy Jay is wonderfully clever in keeping out of sight. He keeps that noisy tongue of his still and he quietly slips around without attracting any attention whatsoever. Mrs. Jay may have a nest close by and you never suspect it. So Peter had no success at all in his hunt for that nest of Sammy Jay's. Nevertheless, he couldn't keep it out of his mind.

On this particular morning Peter was over in the Green Forest. He was hopping along down the crooked little path where it winds between the pine trees. It was some time since Peter had been over here. The last time there had been nothing special to see. So it was with surprise and then with delight that Peter discovered just off to one side of the path one of the loveliest of all the spring flowers—the Lady's-Slipper, or Mocassin Flower, as it is sometimes called. Peter squealed right out with pleasure and hoped over for a close look at it. Rising from between two large, rather thick, pointed oval leaves, which seemed to be growing opposite each other right out of the ground, was a slender stem, at the top of which hung one of the quaintest, most interesting and most beautiful of all spring flowers. One petal of a delicate pink and covered with the little lines of darker pink was in the shape of a dainty bag with a slit nearly the whole length on the upper side. The edges of this folded in. Some folks think it looks like an Indian's mocassin and this is why it is called the Mocassin Flower. The other petals did not look in the least like this one.

"I wonder if Lady Bumblebee is anywhere around," thought Peter. "She certainly has to work for the sweets she gets out of these flowers; but she seems to think it is worth all it costs. Hello! Here she comes."

"Bz-z-z-z-z!" said Lady Bumblebee, as she passed one of Peter's long ears

"Bz-z-z-z," said Lady Bumblebee, as she passed one of Peter's long ears. "Bz-z-z-z-z." And she alighted right on that beautiful pink flower. Then she disappeared from sight. Yes, sir, she disappeared right inside that flower, so that Peter could see nothing of her. But he knew that she was busy inside, for the flower nodded strangely on its long stem. Then in a moment or two Lady Bumblebee came out, but not by the way she had entered. She came out of a little opening in the neck of that pink bag. You see, it was the only way she could get out. Peter chuckled as he saw that her head and back were covered with pollen. He knew that the next flower she went into would receive some of that pollen and that that was why Old Mother Nature had made the Lady's-Slipper so that Lady Bumblebee must come out the way she did.

It was while Peter was watching Lady Bumblebee flying to another of those flowers not far away that he caught just a glimpse of blue disappearing in a pine tree. Straight over to that pine tree went Peter, lipperty-lipperty-lip. Then he sat down and looked up in the tree. There was a nest up there. Peter chuckled. He knew that he had discovered Sammy Jay's secret.

YOUR HEALTH

Sinuses

By Edward King, M. D., Cincinnati.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Most patients have the idea that a sinus infection is confined to the region above the eyes and must be accompanied by headache. As a matter of fact, this frontal sinus is usually the last to be infected. Almost any severe cold is a sinus infection. Patients think little of pus in the nose, unless the word "sinus" is employed. Then they immediately gasp, "Why doctor, I haven't got a sinus infection, have I?"

As a mater of information the frontal sinus (or cavity above the eye) is only one of four sinuses on each side of the head. The ethmoid sinus is a spongy shaped cavity along the side of the eyes. It is partly obscured by a soft covering, but the infection in the nose readily enters under the covering and forms pus. From this cavity the infection travels to the antrum. This sinus is a large opening in the upper jaw, just behind the "cheek bone." From the ethmoid also the germ may travel backward to the sphenoid, a small sinus just behind the ethmoid. Then the infection must go upward through a very small twisted opening in order to reach the frontal sinus. The lining of the nose and sinuses protects them from some germs, but they cannot withstand a severe cold without some help. That is why it is so important to treat a beginning infection before the germ begins to travel. Most often sinus infections do not cause pain or headache, and are overlooked. Probably they are cured by the treatment of the cold, but we must not overlook the danger of pus in the sinus becoming chronic.

When the cold "hangs on" it is necessary to treat the sinus infection locally. It is not possible to reach the frontal sinus. The ethmoid and sphenoid are also rather inaccessible but the antrum can be washed out with little difficulty.

Severe colds in children should never be neglected as children are just as apt to have sinus infections as adults and neglected pus in the nose may have far reaching consequences.

The best way to keep from having a sinus condition is to keep from having colds—or at least to treat them before it is too late.

Little Talks on Thrift

Thrifty Man Able To Force Favorable Opportunities

"You can do more than strike while the iron is hot; you can make the iron hot by striking." Thus the philosopher, Colton, epitomized a great lesson in personal progress. It was in much the same spirit that Napoleon is said to have exclaimed upon an occasion to one of his generals, "Circumstances? I make circumstances!"

One of the great values of thrift is that it enables us to take advantage of opportunities for self-advancement when they are available. But a still deeper value comes through the creation of opportunity. Fortified by thrift one often may force the issue with fate rather than wait patiently for opportunity to come knocking at the door.

The great difference between the thrifty and the thriftless man is that the former is always sure of his destiny—his star is continually in the ascendency while the other irrevocably is marked for failure.

Lafontaine's great fable of the grasshopper and the ant contains a depth of meaning for all of us. When skies are clear and the sun is shining we may get along very well without provision for the future but when adversity and hard times come, the forsight and providence of the ant prove their worth.

Thrift is essential to progress whether our pathway leads to adversity or opportunity. If disaster awaits us we shall need the material resources and the strength of character which are ours through thrift. If we are more fortunate we shall be able to take advantage of favorable opportunities when they come or create them for our own uses.

Through thrift we overcome adversity, create opportunity, conquer destiny.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

A YANKEE ABROAD

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Egypt's American General

LONDON — The Anglo-Egyptian treaty negotiations recall a little-known chapter of Egyptian history in which American army officers played a leading part.

But for a twist of fate Egypt, through the skill of these officers, might today have been one of the world's greatest empires.

As it is she is trying her best to escape British guidance.

It was only in 1876 that England intervened in a large way in Egypt.

Then, as now, the Suez canal, gateway to the East, played a big part.

Dream Of Conquest

Ismail Pasha was khedive in those days, and it was his son, the late Sultan Hussein Kamil, who told me the story of how a handful of American army officers were on the verge of conquering half Africa with the khedives army.

His highness, Hussein Kamil, was the first Egyptian ruler under the British protectorate.

The English, who many years before had deposed his father, put Hussein Kamil on the throne after throwing out the Khedive Abbas II, who was decidedly unfriendly to the allies.

Prince Hussein Kamil was a young man in '76, but he was minister of war in the cabinet of his famous and powerful father. It was during an audience in 1916 with Sultan Hussein Kamil at Rasel-Tin, his summer palace at Alexandria, that I heard the story of the romantic project which would have placed Ismail among the greatest rulers of all time.

American Officers

Just after the American civil war, said the Sultan, there went to Egypt a number of American officers who were appointed by the khedive to reorganize his army. Among these soldiers were Gen. Charles P. Stone (Pasha), Col. Chaille-Long, Col. Alexander Macom Mason (Bey) and Col. James Purdy (Pasha). Gen. Stone was made chief of staff of the army.

The Sultan spoke feelingly of these "American army officers who labored so unselfishly with me in the reconstruction of the Egyptian army."

"Had we been strong enough financially to carry out the plans conceived by my father, which these American officers so ably worked out, we should have achieved the ambition of establishing a great empire embracing everything to Central Africa."

BRITISH FOREIGN LOANS NEARER U. S. FIGURE

NEW YORK—(AP)—Great Britian came closer to equaling the record of the United States as a foreign money lender in 1929 than any year since the war, due partly to the speculative fever of the American investors who transferred their interest from bonds to the stock market.

The foreign capital issues floated in the United States in 1929 dropped approximately 50 per cent, according to the department of commerce. They totaled $706,807,000 while British total was $541,470,000.

Rundown?

YOUR "run-down" child may be playing host to vitality-sapping worms which rob her of nourishment and poison her with their secretions. Worms are much more common than most mothers think.
Look also for the following symptoms: grinding of teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, causes or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.
Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

BURGLAR ATTACKED BY WOMAN, ESCAPES WITH $15

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, April 29—Courage instinctively instilled in her by fear of harm coming to her sleeping baby, caused Mrs. George Dennler of School street to bravely enter her home last evening at 10:30 and grapple with a burglar, whom she sighted prowling about the house upon returning from an errand. The prowler was successful in felling the woman and escaped, taking with him $15, constituting the day's receipts of the Prentice filling station, corner of School and Mechanic streets.

About 10:30 Mrs. Dennler left her house to mail a letter at a box on the street corner a short distance away. Returning to her home she observed a figure passing a window inside. Realizing that all was not well and fearing for the safety of her child, the woman, calm and unexcited, removed her shoes and crept cautiously onto the veranda, stole into the house and surprised the unknown burglar. Stunned by the sudden intrusion, the thief leaped upon Mrs. Dennler and, in a struggle that followed, the prowler was bitten several times.

Shrieking the name of her husband caused the burglar to ward off the attack and hurriedly leave the house. He circled the building and went onto Mechanic street where it is believed that a confederate awaited him in an automobile.

Local police were called and, after an investigation, Sergt. A. J. Spencey learned that the thief entered the house from a cellar garage, which was left unlocked. From here access to the upstairs was easy. Undoubtedly aware of Mrs. Dennler being alone, the marauder awaited her departure from the house at which time he began his operations. She furnished police with a satisfactory description of her assailant today.

Several suspects were rounded up but until a late hour tonight none could be identified as the person responsible for the act.

LATHROP'S ZONING APPEAL BEFORE BENCH OF SUPREME COURT JUDGES

Four appeals were argued and one was partially heard before the supreme court of appeals here Tuesday and two more are to be heard when the court concludes its sitting today (Wednesday).

When court adjourned late Tuesday afternoon, the case before it was the Harry L. Lathrop appeal from the Norwich zoning board in denying him permission to erect a gasoline filling station on his property at 271 Washington street. Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, counsel for Lathrop, made his argument before the court Tuesday, in which his claim is that the Norwich zoning act is void because it is one of those acts which was not signed by the governor within three days of the adjournment of the legislature and also that it is unconstitutional in that it deprives Lathrop of property without due process of law and denies him the equal protection of law.

The arguments for the town and city will be made by Corporation Counsel H. H. Pettis and Attorney George H. Gilman.

Appeal Over Note Case

When court opened in the morning with Chief Justice George W. Wheeler presiding, prayer was offered by Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown of Trinity Episcopal church.

The first case to be argued was plaintiff's appeal in the suit of State Finance Corporation of New London against Louis J. Ballestrini and wife of that city. This came from the common pleas court where Judge C. B. Waller found a set-off of $477.12 against the plaintiff's claim for $544.56 in regard to some notes, thus giving the plaintiff a balance of $67.44.

Fairgrounds Case

The Norwich fairgrounds case in which the appeal is taken by George H. Gilman and his brother, Francis Gilman, from the superior court decision in favor of Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver of the New London County Agricultural society, directing them to pay the receiver $13,750, which is the balance on their auction bid of $15,750, on which they paid $2,000 cash at the time of the auction of the fairgrounds at East Great Plain. Interest added makes the payment called for amount to $14,025.

Grounds of appeal made by the Gilmans are as follows:

1. The appointment of Gilbert S. Raymond as permanent receiver is void because notice was not given as required.

2. Sale of May 1 is void, because notice thereof was not given in accordance with the judgment of March 8, 1929.

3. The sale of May 1 is void, because the actual sale varied from the terms of the advertisements and notices.

4. The sale of May 1 is void, because the real and personal property were not sold together in one lot as required by the said judgment of March 8, 1929.

5. The burden is on the receiver to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the title is good.

6. If the court is doubtful whether the title is good, even though it resolves the doubt in favor of the plaintiff, it will not decide the question, but will deny the plaintiff relief.

Attorney George H. Gilman argued the case for himself and his brother and Attorney E. W. Perkins appeared for Receiver Raymond.

Automobile Accident Case

An appeal was heard by the Fidelity and Casualty company of New York from an $8,000 judgment given against the company by Judge Earnest C. Simpson in a suit brought by Mrs. Agnes Bessette of Taftville, who was struck by an automobile driven by Frank Mader of this city. Mader had an insurance policy in the company which the latter claims had been cancelled before the accident. Mrs. Bessette was one of five persons who were hit by the Mader machine and there are four other judgments totaling about $4,000 hinging on this case.

Question of Trial Period

The third case heard was the appeal of Absalom Bellefleur of New London against the United States Finishing company of this city. The question of when a 30-day free trial period begins in the case of machinery is the question to be answered by the court in this case. Bellefleur submitted a vertical boring machine valued at $2,400 to the finishing company for 30 days trial. Bellefleur claimed that the 30 days began when the machine left his shops in New London and the finishing company claims that the 30 days began when the machine had been set up in the finishing company's mill. The superior court returned a verdict in favor of the defendant and Bellefleur took an appeal.

Trolley Company's Appeal

Another case argued was the appeal of the Connecticut company from a judgment of $930.46 given in favor of Philogene C. Beaudette of this city, whose motor bus and a trolley car were in collision on Oct. 23, 1928, on Boswell avenue where the trolley tracks cross the highway close to city line at Taftville. The verdict was rendered by a jury, but the appeal is on the grounds that Judge Earnest C. Simpson erred in his charge to the jury.

To Be Heard

One of the two appeals yet to be heard is in the suit of Anthony J. Sylvia of New London, who obtained a verdict of $4,166 against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, but Judge C. L. Avery set the judgment aside on the ground that the jury was swayed by prejudice and sympathy. Sylvia brought suit because his automobile was hit by a train at the Maple avenue crossing in New London on Oct. 27, 1928.

New London Automobile Case

The other case to be heard is the appeal of Laurence A. Chappell, Jr., of New London from a verdict of $2,100 and costs given by a jury in favor of Joseph Miceli, a New London tailor, who was struck by Chappell's car while crossing Bank street on Aug. 5, 1929.

RECEIVES REPLY ON FORD TRADE SCHOOL

In response to a letter to Henry Ford from Secretary John Richardson of the Norwich chamber of commerce in which the secretary suggested Norwich as a location for one of the trade schools which Mr. Ford had announced he is proposing to establish, the following has been received:

Dearborn, Mich.
April 24, 1930.

Mr. John Richardson,
Norwich Chamber of Commerce,
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Sir:

Thank you very much for your recent letter suggesting a location for the proposed Ford Trade schools.

We regret very much to inform you, however, that plans for schools outside of Detroit have not as yet been fully developed and we are therefore unable to make a definite decision regarding your suggestion.

LEGION DISTRICT MEETING ENDORSED RANKIN BILL

There was a large attendance at the fifth district meeting of the American Legion and auxiliary held at the Uncasville community house Tuesday evening. Plans were discussed for a large representation at the national convention to be held at Boston in October.

The fifth district endorsed the Rankin bill. The posts represented at the meeting were Norwich post, No. 4; New London, No. 9; Taftville, No. 104; Baltic, No. 85; District No. 55; Groton, No. 114; Noank, No. 115; Jewett City, No. 15, and Montville, No. 112.

Joseph Bellefleur of Norwich was the presiding officer.

After the Legionnaire meeting the auxiliary met, with Mrs. Ruth Sears of Taftville as presiding officer.

Following the meetings dancing was enjoyed to music furnished by Perry's orchestra of New London. A luncheon was served after the dancing and consisted of coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts.

Plans were also discussed for the parade to be held at Bridgeport July 26. The next district meeting will be held at Lyme, May 17.

MRS. HANKEN AT CAPITOL FOR THE SWICK BILL

Mrs. Bessie Hanken, national president of the Ladies' auxiliary, V. F. W. of the U. S., was in Washington Tuesday and will be there today (Wednesday) in the interest of the Swick bill, which is now before congress. Her appearance there will be of special interest to all members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, their auxiliaries and all others interested in the disabled veterans.

The Swick bill provides for the relief of those disabled who are now receiving no compensation from the government and does not require that they must pass through the old routine of proving that their disabilities were received while in active service. The Swick bill was sponsored by the V. F. W. of the U. S.

On Wednesday, Mrs. Hanken will be the dinner guest of President Hoover.

MAMMY KNITS AWAY IN PALACE THEATRE LOBBY

"Mammy" is on hand at the Palace theatre to greet Al Jolson when he comes there in the movie of that name Manager R. B. Hamilton has her seated in the lobby, knitting away behind the garden fence that sets off the pretty scene arranged along one side of the lobby entrance. Her busy fingers keep the needles flying and an expansive smile is the greeting for those who stop to exchange a word as they keep a wary eye upon the bow-legged bulldog that guards the gate in the fence.

SCOUTMASTERS TO MEET AT THE K. OF C. HALL

Scoutmasters, assistants, and deputy commissioners will hold a round table meeting at the Knights of Columbus hall at 6:15 with a supper this (Wednesday) evening for the purpose of discussing Boy Scout work in this community. It is anticipated that a permanent association will be formed and that a chairman, secretary, and treasurer will be elected. One of the most important matters on the mind of every scoutmaster is the coming rally and the progress the several troops have made. A number of troops are expected to challenge other troops for preliminary try outs.

A rally committee on arrangements will probably be selected to consist of five or more of the scout men who have had most experience in rally work and who will take over considerable of the planning and detail work of the rally.

Other important matters to be brought before the meeting will be the success of the camp savings folder, selecting of proper awards for the rally, need of a Norwich owned camp for Norwich boys, the court of honor, the Patrol Leaders training course, etc.

Following adjournment of the meeting, the group will visit the patrol leaders' training course where again they will have an opportunity to talk over the rally and what can be done to make it a show worthy of scouting in Norwich.

Patrol Leaders Course

The patrol leaders' training course will meet at the usual time Wednesday evening at 7:30 in the armory. An interesting program has been arranged and every one of the 40 boy leaders is expected to be present. This meeting will be the last indoor session, the next meeting being the court of honor at which the leaders will have some special tasks to perform, and the last meeting of the course being an overnight hike.

TWO MORE BRING APPEALS OVER NORWICH ASSESSMENT

Two more appeals from tax assessments on their property have been filed by Norwich owners with the superior court. Charles B. Flint of this city has appealed to the court for a reduction in his assessment. He was assessed for $11,240, the board of relief cut the assessment to $9,740 which Mr. Flint claims is excessive. Mr. Flint's property is located at No. 122 Chestnut street.

Attorney Telley E. Babcock has also taken an appeal to the superior court from the assessment on his property at No. 119 Thames street. He claims he was assessed for $1050 more than he placed the property in the list. When he filed his list, he put the value of the lot at $500 and the house at $700. The assessors boosted the lot to $870 and the house to $1380. He claims the assessors' figures are unreasonable. He failed to obtain relief from the board of relief.

SUES ON CLAIM FOR MORTGAGE BALANCE DUE

Foreclosure on a mortgage and possession of the premises are asked in a suit brought in the superior court by Henry T. Bray and The Commercial Trust company of New Britain against the General Finance company of New London.

The plaintiffs claim that on June 16, 1925, Joseph Segal owed Henry T. Bray $3,800 on a note secured by a piece of property on Bentley avenue, New London. They further claim that the defendant obtained title to the property in question July 12, 1929, by foreclosure, that Segal has defaulted on payment of the note and that $2,800 remains unpaid. The papers show that $151.29 is due for taxes on the property and that the Mariners Savings bank has a mortgage of $3,000.

LAW REQUIRES DRIVERS TO CARRY INSURANCE

In motor vehicle hearings conducted here Tuesday morning by Inspector Philip E. Devnew of the state department, he refused the return of their driving licenses to four operators until they have secured insurance or furnish proof of financial responsibility. This is an application of a new law in effect since July 1, applying to drivers following an accident in which damage of more than $100 had been caused.

Application of this law affected Arthur Beaudry of 76 Ashland street, Jewett City, suspended for evading responsibility and driving without a license.

The other drivers who were informed to secure insurance before their applications for re-instatement would be considered were:

Everett L. Moulton, R. F. D., Baltic, who lost his license for drunken driving; Ernest Peltier, Goodyear, who lost his license for drunken driving in R. I.; John J. Goss of 667 Ocean avenue, New London, who lost his license for operating under influence and reckless driving.

Omer Bernier of 86 Battery street, Putnam, who had previously lost his license for drunken driving was reinstated.

Decision was reserved by the inspector on the petition of Wilfred Proulx of 19 Carley avenue, Jewett City, who was convicted for speeding.

Alfred L. Chartier of Moosup, was before the commissioner for a conference and he was allowed to keep his license. Complaint of his driving was made by the R. I. authorities.

Wasil Ladyga of Everett street, this city, was reinstated. He had lost his license for drunken driving.

COPYRIGHT GREEN LABEL FOR EACH BUDDY POPPY

Arrangements have been completed for the sale of buddy poppies in Norwich by R. E. Hourigan post, No. 594 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The name of the buddy poppy is registered by the V. F. W. and no one not authorized by the local post will be permitted to sell them. Each flower is labelled, and as further precaution V. F. W. poppy sellers will bear credentials of identification, it was announced by J. J. Poliquin, chairman of the V. F. W. buddy poppy committee in charge of the sale plans here.

Each genuine buddy poppy carries a copyright green label which identifies it as the genuine handiwork of disabled or needy ex-service men. The majority are made in government hospitals through an arrangement with the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, and a total of 6,000,000 will be completed in readiness for the opening of the sale in every section of the country.

The necessity for adequate funds for the relief and welfare work among the ex-service men and their dependents continues to exist, and there is an increasing number of needy veterans whose health has finally given way as a result of war-time experiences, making them no longer capable of self-support.

PHARMACIST CLERK SUES FOR $25,000 DAMAGES

For injuries she claims she received last May, Catherine Downey of New London seeks $25,000 damages from Fred A. Baker and the Connecticut Power company, according to papers filed here Tuesday with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court.

The plaintiff claims that she was about to be taken to church by Baker when the latter backed the car into her and caused injuries which resulted in her being forced to lose money she earned as a pharmacist's clerk and to give up her studies of pharmacy.

The car in question was owned by the power company by which Baker was employed.

HEARING SUIT OVER SALE OF REAL ESTATE

Trial was started Tuesday in the superior court at New London in the case of Charlotte E. Woodbury and others against Thornton Woodbury and others, in which the plaintiffs seek to obtain an order of the court to sell the Woodbury land in Ocean avenue, New London, which the city declined to accept for a park. After Attorney Peter Woodbury testified a recess was declared to await the arrival of other witnesses.

Judge Allyn L. Brown is hearing the case.

NAMES THREE DEFENDANTS IN SUIT FOR $15,000

Damages of $15,000 are asked by Judson Thomas Cousins of New London against Samuel Katz, Lillian Packer and Mrs. Annie Katz, according to papers in a suit brought in the superior court and served by Deputy Sheriff Manuel J. Martin.

The plaintiff alleges that he was struck by an automobile owned jointly by the defendants and operated by Samuel Katz, at the intersection of Green and State streets Jan. 24 of this year.

RESERVES DECISION IN $5,000 ASSAULT SUIT

Decision was reserved by Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court at New London Tuesday morning, after hearing the $5,000 damage suit brought by Nicholas Sammataro against Madeline Piscitello, both of New London.

The suit was the result of an alleged assault on the plaintiff by the defendant several months ago. Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky represented the plaintiff and Attorney Morris Lubchansky represented the defendant.

RUM RUNNER BEACHED NEAR MONTAUK POINT

NEW LONDON, April 29.—(AP) — Coast guard officials here were notified tonight that the Ester B, one of two rum runners seized earlier in the day in Long Island sound, had been beached on the south shore of Long Island near Montauk Point.

Liquor on the craft, a motorboat, officials were informed, was being transferred to a patrol boat. Advices received here did not indicate how much liquor was found aboard the boat nor whether any of the crew were arrested. Officials here believe that the boat was beached before she was seized.

ACADEMY POINTS TO 100TH VICTORY TODAY UNDER BRIGHAM'S COACHING

EARLE E. BRIGHAM
Academy Coach

PROBABLE LINEUPS

N. F. A.	Gilbert High
Arico, 1b	c, Meehan
Reardon, 2b	2b, Fournier
Gibbs, ss	ss, Bascetta
Fontaine, c	3b, Carroll
Breen, 3b	lf, Otis
Crowell, rf	cf, Bardonarai
Pepin, cf	1b, Cooney
Berghinzo, lf	rf, Mitchell
Greene, p	p, Sirsmon

If the Academy's baseball team can turn back Gilbert high of Winsted today at the campus, it will be one of the most important events in Coach Earle E. Brigham's life.

Something to Fight For

In today's tussle, regarded as one of the stiffest on the Red and White schedule, the boys will have a chance to fight for his 100th victory as a baseball coach since he came to N. F. A. for the 1924 season. His first season produced a club that won eleven games, the next year they won 12; in 1926, it was 16; 1927, 17; 1928, 19; 1929, 17 and so far this year it is seven. Such a record is unequalled in the history of the school and probably in the state and bespeaks a wonderful tribute to the abilities of Mr. Brigham, both as to his knowledge of the sport and his ability to handle boys.

So, with this in mind the Wildcats are determined to send Gilbert high back home as another victim of the local rush to the state title.

Boots Greene, the Academy newfound sensation, will be sent to the mound backed by the regular lineup. Greene, who seems due for a big year, has had a week's rest and is in A-1 shape. Butsy Weisgraber, the Academy's other pitcher, who is bothered with a lame ankle, will not start the game in the outfield today, as is his custom, but will remain on the bench to give the injured member a rest.

Bud Fontaine will be behind the bat with the infield of Arico, Reardon, Capt. Gibbs and Breen and Berghinzo, Pepin and Crowell in the outer gardens.

Gilbert Beat Naugy

Little is known of the visitors outside of the fact that they have beaten Naugatuck high this year, 9 to 4, the team that won the last game of the year from the Wildcats in 1929, being one of three teams to get a decision over the locals during the campaign. Naugy looked like a good team that day and if Gilbert high is on the same order, then the fans can expect a real battle on the local lot this afternoon. Sirsmon, who pitched the entire game against Naugy two weeks ago, and held them safely in hand, will toe the slab for the visitors today, it is expected.

High School Sports

Hillhouse high, which plays the Academy at the campus June 7, scored an impressive 16 to 3 victory over Choate prep school last week. Tommy Flynn, veteran pitcher, was in top form, limiting the Wallingford team to six hits.

Three former Academy players played for their colleges last Saturday. Pheno Tombari was at shortstop as Conn. Aggies defeated Clark university at Worcester; Billy Tirrell caught for Wesleyan as it lost to Princeton and Red Fagan caught for the Aggie freshman as they won from the Bristol Boys' club.

The Academy is almost ready for its track opening tomorrow with a meet against Chapman Tech at New London.

Eddie Sawyer, former Westerly high hurler, who had been trying out with a Piedmont league team, has been sent to the House of David nine of Benton Harbor, Mich., for further experience.

The Academy's tennis team opened its season with a victory over Chapman Tech Monday afternoon, 4 to 2. Capt. Spiro, Moody Alexander and Morse and Tingley the latter in the doubles, were N. F. A. winners.

BETTING EVEN MONEY ON GRIFFITH-GAGNON FIGHT

CHICAGO, April 29—(AP)—The big moment in the heavyweight championship career of Gerald Ambrose Griffith, the tough one from Sioux City, Iowa., arrives tomorrow night.

Griffith, rated as a leading contender for the heavyweight title until he was knocked out, in a startling upset, by Jack Gagnon, a Boston "upstart" in six rounds a month ago, will meet his conqueror in a ten round return engagement in the Chicago stadium.

Griffith will attempt to prove he can bounce right back into the heavyweight scramble, while Gagnon, ex-sailor, professional football player, and rough and tumble fighter, knocked out six times himself, will attempt to advance in the big money and fame by repeating his victory.

The Iowa heavyweight is at the crisis of his career, and knows it. He will be striving to retrieve his prestige and save the tremendous earning power that was within his grasp before the disastrous battle at Philadelphia.

Indications were tonight that a capacity house of 20,000 would witness the contest, with receipts in excess of $50,000.

Betting odds on Griffith skyrocketed at first but now they have dwindled to even money. Gagnon might even enter the ring a favorite to repeat his six round triumph over the Sioux City puncher. Griffith's disappointing showings in his last two battles, in which he lost to Gagnon after being floored five times, and in an engagement with Al Friedman of Boston, have been a disturbing influence on Tuffy's followers.

Gagnon, realizing his earning possibilities if he can knock out Griffith again, says he is perfectly conditioned for the fight. He has trained consistently since stopping Griffith before, feeling that he has blasted his way to the front ranks and is determined to stay there.

Griffith has taken time out to recover from the physchological effect, if any, the defeat had on him. He believes he is in condition to crush the ex-sailor man from Boston, just as easily as Gagnon crushed him. Griffith was down to 184 pounds and this pleases him. He weighed 187 pounds against Gagnon at Philadelphia and declares this deprived him of his speed.

Gagnon was down to 186 1-2 when he finished his training yesterday, which, he says, is his best weight. The Boston boy appears grim, determined and confident. He flattened Griffith before and says there is no reason why he cannot do it again.

AGGIES TRIM YEARLINGS IN ABBREVIATED GAME

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, April 29—A six inning game played between the Connecticut Aggie varsity and yearling baseball teams here today resulted in a victory for the varsity nine by a 10 to 2 margin. The varsity battery consisted of Kolb and Roever on the mound, and Tourville at the receiving end. Krumholtz, former Bulkeley high school player, and Flynn pitched for the freshmen, and Fagan of Norwich, Academy star last year was behind the bat.

Both varsity and frosh nines are hitting a fast stride, and give indications of having a successful season. The varsity has won three out of four games to date, losing only to the Army in the first game of the season by a 2-1 score. The freshmen nine won the first game of the season Saturday by defeating the Bristol Boy's club, 4 to 3.

The varsity is preparing for a strenuous week end and will play the Springfield college nine, at Springfield, on Friday, May 2, and the University of Vermont team at Storrs on Saturday, May 3.

The frosh team will play their second game when they meet the Suffield Prep team at Suffield.

UNDEFEATED SAILOR TEAM WANTS GAME FOR SATURDAY

The U. S. S. Wilkes nine of New London would like to hear from any fast semi-pro team in or about this vicinity for a game next Saturday. The Wilkesmen, Destroyer champs last year, have strengthened their team considerably this year and up to date have won every game, including tilts at Miami and St. Petersburg. The team also has open dates later in the season and games can be arranged by getting in touch with the athletic officer on the U. S. Wilkes, C. G., New London, Conn.

INVITATION EXTENDED DE MAR TO BE GUEST OF FLETCHER POST MEMORIAL DAY

An invitation to Clarence De Mar, the world's greatest distance runner, to be the guest of Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, on Memorial day, May 30, the date of the National A. A. U., 10-mile championship, has been extended, according to information given out last night by officials of the Duwell A. A. sponsors of the run. It was largely through the efforts of the local legion post that the famous athlete came here a year ago, and the legion is again cooperating with the Duwells to secure the seven time winner of the Boston marathon for the coming national run.

At the present time De Mar is engaged as a teacher at the state normal school at Keene, N. H.

Recently the Duwells wrote to De Mar and asked him if there were any suggestions that he might offer relative to the conduct of the national run. In response he stated that he did not see how the coming event could be conducted any better than it was when he took part a year ago. He made mention of the fact that the reception in Norwich was very good, the prizes were valuable, and the race itself was very well conducted. In conclusion he stated that he hoped to be in Norwich for the national title race but that it was really a bit too early to make any definite promises.

De Mar, who is over 40 years of age, is without doubt the greatest distance runner the world has ever produced. He has taken part in about 40 full distance marathons during his career and won about half of them. He has won the Boston marathon seven times and twice has represented the United States at the Olmpic games.

This year De Mar was not conceded a chance to win the Boston marathon, Koski and Miles being picked by the experts to cop the run. The former printer, however, upset all dope and won the event by a healthy margin, barely missing the course record. There is little doubt but that had he been pressed at the finish he would have clipped the mark set by Johnny Miles in 1929.

When he came here in 1929, those that profess to know the ins and outs of distance running, predicted that a 10 mile race was too short for him to make a showing. Against Whitey Michelson, Arthur Gavrin, Max Lamp and Fred Ward, the Millrose A. A. entrants, he did not appear to have a chance. However, the Melrose veteran not only outran a field of a hundred to win the race, but he actually finished as fresh as the proverbial daisy.

PHILLIES TRIUMPH OVER BRAVES IN BIG INNING

PHILADELPHIA, April 29—(AP)—An eight run flare up by the Phillies in the eighth inning broke up a beautiful scoreless hurling duel between Bob Smith and Ray Benge here this afternoon and gave the Southern men an ultimate 8 to 2 triumph over the Braves.

Six hits, two bases on balls, two sacrifice hits and an error by Maguire accounted for the eight tallies. Maguire's miscue was particularly fatal for it came with one run in and one out and was a sure double play.

The victory was the second scored by the locals in two days and gave them a two to one edge. Benge pitched good ball for the Quakers allowing but five hits and only being scored on when he eased in the ninth inning.

BROOKLYN BEATS GIANTS IN GAME OF 41 BINGLES

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—In a game of hard and frequent hitting, the Brooklyn Robins made their one big inning better than the best the New York Giants could produce and won the second game in a row from their Manhattan rivals by the score of 19 to 15.

The Robins connected with the offerings of four Giant pitchers for eleven hits and one walk for eleven runs in the second inning. The Giants scored nine times in the third.

The two teams made 41 hits, 22 of them going to the Brooklyn sluggers, but no major league records were broken in the fray. The modern mark for scoring in one inning is 14 runs, made by the New York Yankees against Washington in 1920. Every Brooklyn batter made at least one hit, scored a run and drove in a run, which ought to be a record if it isn't.

Mel Ott hit two homers in the game and Bill Terry got one for the Giants. Babe Herman connected for Brooklyn's only four bagger. He also batted in seven runs. Glenn Wright, short for Brooklyn, had nine putouts. The score:

CHICAGO, April 29—(AP)—It took the Pirates two hours and sixteen minutes to apply the defeat stamp to the Cubs this afternoon in a wild game. The score was 13 to 9.

Seven pitchers were used by both clubs, the only effective man being Steve Swetonic who was used the last three innings by the Pirates. Pittsburgh batted out sixteen hits twelve of which came off Fred Blake's slants in the early chapters.

PELOQUIN BEATS LURKEY BY TECHNICAL KAYO IN FURIOUS GO AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, April 29 — If Rene Peloquin, Danielson's mighty midget, and Julius Lurkey, another bit of dynamite out of Worcester, had gone at each other with machine guns in the star bout at the town hall here tonight, they could not have packed much more action into the nearly four rounds they fought before Lurkey's seconds tossed a towel into the ring. It was Peloquin's second win over Lurkey within a few weeks, and it so happens that this one ended much the same as did their other encounter with Lurkey skyrocketing out of the ring and into the laps of spectators sitting at the sides. The affair ended with five seconds remaining of the fourth round.

Peloquin and Lurkey wasted no time in going after each other and how. The air was full of flying fists with plenty of power back of them and they belted each other all over the place. In the first three sensational rounds, Peloquin shading Lurkey practically all of the way. The fighting was so fast and furious in the second and third rounds that the crowd yelled in wild excitement. A customer who has been places said the go was as good as scores of battles he had seen in Madison Square Garden. Peloquin deserved the decision and was enthusiastically cheered, nor did the crowd forget to give the brave little Lurkey a hand. Peloquin weighed 122 3-4, Lurkey just a quarter of a pound less.

Ero Peterson of Worcester won a decision over Alex Touraine of New Haven in the semi-final, a close and hard-fought bout that was enjoyed by the crowd. Both boxers used all their cleverness in trying for a knockout, but without success. Touraine won some of the rounds, but Peterson had a little the better of it through most of the bout. Weights, Peterson 138, Touraine 139 3-4.

Darr Kayoes Novak

Benny Novak didn't last long in his go with Vic Darr of Norwich in an affair scheduled for six rounds. After feeling each other out in the first round and taking a few hard swings at each other they started to mix things plenty in the second round, which was destined to come to a conclusion after two minutes 40 seconds of fighting, Darr crashing one over to Novak's nose to send him to the canvas to be counted out. Darr weighed 140, Novak 142 3-4.

The battle between Jimmie Barde and Edgar Gabourey, two Webster boys, announced as a grudge fight, must have been just something like that for it was nothing less than a cyclone while it lasted. Gabourey's hand was raised in victory after Referee Pilkington of New Haven stopped the bout after one minute and four seconds in the third round. In that minute Barde was on the floor four times, mostly from slipping and on account of grogginess. He had caught one towards the close of the second round that was so far down that his face clouded with pain, but he did not complain. He never was so good after that, though, and Gabourey was beating him quite badly while he was in a partly dazed condition when the referee stopped the fight. Barde's weight was 144, Gabourey 146.

Joe Barre of Fall River was given a decision over Billy Champigny of Worcester after six rounds of close and clever battling during which the fans enjoyed a classy boxing exhibition. Champigny though losing fought a clever battle. Weights, Barre 135, Champigny 136 1-4.

Al Brouillard, another Danielson boy, scored a win over Buck Moran of New London, substituting for Johnny King of Fall River, in the opener. This was a bruising go while it lasted, but Brouillard put the New London boy away after one minute, 45 seconds, of the second round. One of Al's left hooks caught Doran in the short ribs and he took a count of nine only to get up to be promptly flattened for the full count. Brouillard weighed 144 3-4, Doran 146.

The card as a whole rated one of the most interesting from start to finish staged here in a long time and the fans enjoyed it immensely.

REYNOLDS HITS 2 HOMERS IN WHITE SOX VICTORY

DETROIT, April 29—(AP)—The White Sox hit George Uhle, veteran Tiger pitcher, freely today and won the second straight game of the series, 8 to 6.

The Chicago hitting included two home runs by Reynolds and one by Cissell.

None of the Tigers was able to find Urban Faber, Sox pitcher, for extra base hits except Gehringer, who made a double and a triple, and McManus who popped out a home run in the ninth with one on.

The Sox made a perfect double steal in the seventh inning when Clancy went home and Jolley to second. The score:

ROSENBLOOM-JOHNSON FIGHT THIS EVENING

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Madison Square Garden returns to its first love, boxing, tomorrow night, with a famous ring clown and a husky young Negro taking over the spotlight held for three weeks by the annual visit of the circus.

The principals are Maxie Rosenbloom, the Harlem harlequin, and Larry Johnson, Chicago clouter, whose engagement in the big battle pit resulted in a foul.

Johnson gave Rosenbloom the roughest struggle he has had here in years in their Garden battle, March 10. If anything, Johnson had a slight edge when he belted Maxie low unintentionally with a left hook in the sixth.

Johnny Indrisano, Boston welterweight will meet Freddy Fitzgerald, of Cleveland, a newcomer to the Garden, in the ten round semi-final.

DARR TO SPEND WEEK IN TRAINING AT NEW YORK

Vic Darr, Norwich fighter, who appeared in Danielson last night and knocked out his opponent, was in fine fettle, a reversal of form from that of a previous appearance there. Darr fought in Danielson about a month ago when he had as an opponent, Alex Touraine of New Haven, who gained the decision over him. At this time Darr lost through illness, going on in spite of the fact.

His followers said Tuesday night had he been in the condition he was last night he would have knocked out Touraine. Incidentally he will have another chance at Touraine in the not distant future when he clashes with him at New Haven. However, before this setto Darr, with his manager, Joe Besade, will go to New York, where they will be stationed at Pioneer gym. Here Darr will spend a week in training. They are to leave Friday evening.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Two extraordinary pictures each with a notable cast will be presented at the Palace theatre today on the double feature bill, which includes "Notorious Affair," starring Billie Dove and Basil Rathbone and "The Second Floor Mystery," with Loretta Young and Grant Withers.

"Notorious Affair," is a story that has been drafted from a page of life. It shows a young English girl who marries a violinist, makes him the idol of the moment through her social standing and his ability and then learns that her idol, like all the rest, has feet of clay.

Basil Rathbone plays the part of Paul Gherardi, the genius, Billie Dove is cast as his wife and Kay Francis as the "other woman" is splendid. Among the other stars in this picture are Kenneth Thompson and Montague Love.

"The Second Floor Mystery," is an adaptation of the novel by Earl Deer Biggers called "The Agony Column." It centers about an American girl who is visiting in London. She chances to run across the following insertion in the personal column of the London Times:

"Wish to make acquaintance of lady who prefers grapefruit to strawberries—Address Strawberry Man—Claremont Hotel."

The young American answers this and before the play is ended the audience has received many a chill and a thrill. There is a love story too, and the plot, combined with the splendid work of the cast result in a most unusual production.

Loretta Young is excellent in her part as the American girl; Grant Withers is the Strawberry Man. Supporting these are H. B. Warner as a detective from Scotland Yard and Claire McDowell who plays the part of the girl's very prim aunt and guardian.

"Notorious Affair" and "The Second Floor Mystery" will be shown at the Palace through Friday. Coming Saturday Al Jolson in Mammy, so hold everything.

Broadway Theatre

Quantity plus quality—a rare combination these days, but invariably the case with the double feature programs at the old reliable Broadway—and the bill opening today proves the rule. Truly a feast of entertainment, with the main course Earl Der Biggers' delightful mystery comedy "Seven Keys to Baldpate," immortalized on the stage by George M. Cohan, and now brought to the talking screen with Richard Dix in the coveted role of Magee, the harassed author who sought the solitude of Baldpate Inn on the top of a secluded mountain, secure in his belief that he had the only key—only to find himself involved in a maze of mystery, and the Inn peopled with a half-crazed financier, a grafting politician, a desperate killer, a lovely girl, a ghostly marauder, a jealous woman, and a cold-blooded man of mystery who apparently pulled the strings of the puppets in the mad melange. A howling winter storm, the age-ridden hotel creaking and groaning, and the mad pranks of the weird inhabitants, gave poor Magee a night of terror, but furnished the theme for the "big story" for which he had been seeking inspiration. Dix at his clever best, and a corking supporting cast make this the supreme mystery-comedy of the screen. More good news lies in the reunion of the most famous quartet of comedians on the screen, the original Cohens and Kellys, comprising George Sidney, Charles Murray, Vera Gordon and Katie Price in their fastest and funniest riot of hilarity, "The Cohens and Kellys in Scotland". Imagine the scrappy "Irishers" and the wily Hebrews invading bonnie Scotland with the avowed purpose of cheating the canny Scotch in a big deal in wool plaids, and you have a situation that can't be beat for possibilities—and this hilarious quartet of fun-makers make the best of it. There is golf at its worst, with the scrappy partners opponents on the links—the weird attempts of Sidney to master the Scotch dialect—a business flop that sends both the partners to the bridge to commit suicide, but each jealously claiming the sole rights to the river—oh, folks, you've just got to see it yourselves, and don't try to count the laughs, for they come like bullets out of a machine gun! It's by far the funniest "Cohens and Kellys" yet—and that's saying a lot. Then there's the latest Fox movietone news, and there's that "Summer Girl" contest for the lady patrons, whereby some young lady is going to invade a local store and pick out her own summer outfit in time for Memorial day.

The marriage last Saturday of Miss Alicia Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dyer, to James Atwater Fernald, Jr., of New York and Chicago, was revealed in Freehold, N. J.

WESTERLY

MAN WHO TOOK IODINE GIVES NAME AT HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., April 29.—Hubert Hilary Fredette, 23, of Taunton, Mass., is the name given to Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon Tuesday morning at the Westerly hospital, as he was about to be discharged, by the young man picked up on the Westerly-Stonington road Sunday night by Taftville motorists. According to his story, he sustained severe and painful injury to his foot in a motorcycle accident in 1927. Since then, he said, he had five time been a patient at the Pawtucket Memorial hospital, but little relief could be secured from the throbbing pains caused by the broken nerves in his foot. He said he came here Sunday and after walking around became discouraged and decided to end his sufferings by drinking the iodine. When discharged this morning from the hospital Fredette appeared to be in good health and to have suffered no bad effects from the poison. When the hour of his release from the institution came this morning Sergt. Webber and Trooper John Smith from the Groton barrack of the Connecticut state police, Attorney Henry P. Hammacher of the town of Stonington, and Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown of Westerly were present, ready to place the young man under arrest, provided he refused to reveal his identity. He would have been held as a suspicious person as it was suspected by the authorities that the wound in his foot was caused by a bullet.

After he told who he was, however, Prosecutor Hammacher, in whose district he was picked up Sunday night, said that no charge would be preferred against him and he would be allowed to return to his home.

Fredette was seen Sunday afternoon walking up West Broad and South Broad street by people who live along those streets. He was well dressed and they noticed him as they would a stranger on a Sunday afternoon stroll. He was limping at the time. That was at about 4:30 in the afternoon. It was early in the evening that he was found on the Stonington road, having come to the road from the lots where he had taken the poison.

LEFT HIS MOTORCYCLE WHICH WAS NOT WORTH BAIL

In Stonington town court Tuesday morning before Judge William A. Wilcox, Joseph Vigeau, of 108 Walnut street, Lawrence, Mass., had been given a summons by a Connecticut state police officer to appear to answer to a charge of reckless operation of an auto. By agreement with Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher his motorcycle was held in lieu of $50 bail required. A letter for his court appearance sent him by Court Clerk Albert G. Martin had been returned marked "declined." On the recommendation of the prosecutor the bond was called by Clerk Martin and declared forfeited by Judge Wilcox. As the motorcycle was not worth $50, the authorities in Lawrence are to be notified to have the man make good on the full amount of his bond.

Held Noisy Party

Ernest Reed, 38, of the Commercial hotel, Pawcatuck, an iron worker with a Providence construction company on a Pawcatuck job, arrested by Officer Adin R. Sheldon of Pawcatuck Saturday night, while disturbing the peace near midnight after too much liquor, pleaded guilty. The officer on West Broad street went into the hotel on complaint and took the disturber, in scant attire, to the Liberty street lockup. He was released later on bail. The prosecutor represented to the court that the accused held parties in his hotel room in which he engaged with others in drinking, such procedure is not tolerated by the hotel proprietor. When sober, the state declared, the man attended to his business but when under the influence of liquor "cuts up capers." A light fine was recommended. Judge Wilcox fined him $1 and costs which totaled $13.95 which Reed paid.

GAVITT, BABCOCK ESTATES TO BE SETTLED BY TRUST CO.

At a special session of Westerly probate court Tuesday morning, in the estate of Charles H. Gavitt, a petition received for the probate of the estate as testator died a resident of Westerly April 6, 1930. His wife, Anna Kenyon Gavitt, named in the will as executrix, declined to serve, praying that the Industrial Trust Co. be named as administrator. Will was read, proved and admitted to probate and the Industrial Trust company was made the administrator. Bond was made $75,000 without surety. Herbert W. Rathbun was named appraiser.

Estate Tristam D. Babcock. Petition was received from a granddaughter, Mrs. Martha B. Owens, setting forth that the executors named in the will, Charlotte J. Dilatory Tax Payments

The office of Town Clerk Everett E. Whipple in the town hall has been a busy place the past few days with the payment of fire district taxes and dog registrations, both due before May 1st.

The total fire taxes to be collected amount to $19,373.70, of which $12,000 had been taken in up to Tuesday night. Thus there is still about $7,000 to be collected before Thursday.

There are about 650 dogs in Westerly but only about 400 of them had been registered. That leaves 250 more to be paid for before Thursday. Otherwise the owners will have to pay a fine of $1.

About 2:45 p. m. Tuesday the whistle on the central fire headquarters building sounded two blasts to locate Fire Chief George E. Egger and later 127 was sounded, for a brush and grass fire in the lots to the eastward of East avenue. Both the Ahrens-Fox and Seagraves motor pumpers with force of firemen responded and on their arrival found dense clouds of smoke arising from the burning grass and brush. The trucks were driven to the lots at the rear of the farm buildings of Samuel Silver and the blaze was fought by setting back fires. Later the motor pumpers were moved to be near the buildings along East avenue, the Seagraves pumper remaining at the Silver place while the Ahrens-Fox pumper proceeded down East avenue nearer the home of Louis J. Rossie. The recall sounded at 3:30 p. m., there being no property damage.

An Important Announcement to Home Owners Contemplating the Use Of Oil Heat

A little more than ten years ago the first Williams Oil-O-Matic was installed. This oil burner which was built on certain vital principles found instant acclaim. From time to time certain changes have been made in the physical appearance of the Williams Oil-O-Matic. But the cardinal laws of construction and operation have been rigidly adhered to. The Williams Oil-O-Matic always has been the master of all heating problems. Cheap fuel oil is burned efficiently and the operation is entirely automatic. The Oil-O-Matic is the oil burner which public acclaim has made the yardstick by which all other burners are measured.

For many years the public has waited for Williams engineers to produce a small fuel oil burner which would represent in an oil burner for smaller homes the same efficiency which has made the larger Oil-O-Matic so reliable in performance and positive in action. The announcement that this small burner—the Oil-O-Matic Junior—is now on display and in operation in many homes is important news for owners of small and medium size homes for it brings to those homes all the advantages that have won world leadership for the larger Oil-O-Matic Model J. POETRY

Along The Coast Of Maine

There is an azure in the air,
A sapphire in the sky,
A blueness of old chinaware
On hills that landward lie;
And all the islet-studded sea,
Where gulls are fishing lazily,
Is living lapis lazuli
Along the Coast of Maine!

There is a crimson on the leaf,
And on the apple's cheek;
The partridge-berry and the ash
Are scarlet-stained and sleek.
And through the evening still and grave,
With bright autumnal colors brave
The sun-torch gutters to the wave,
Along the Coast of Maine!

There is Adventure in these woods
And Romance on these isles;
No hill that lifts its hazy crest
But beckons and beguiles—
For Indian Summer lights once more
Her burning challenge to explore
The golden wilds and granite shore
Along the Coast of Maine!

—Agnes Kendrick Gray, in Boston Transcript.

The Happiest Hour

Of all the pleasant hours to me
The hour-glass measures, tell
Me why the happiest hour should be
The shortest one as well.

Why should the minutes swiftly fly,
That make the pleasant hour
Like merry birds across the sky
Before the coming show'r?

Is Joy so fearful of her store
She bars it from the old?
Has love, so generous of yore,
Grown stingy with his gold?

Mark down the happiest hour upon
Mem'ry's unwritten page,
So that 'twill be, when hopes are gone,
A comfort in old age.

—Arthur Eugene Smith, in the Philadelphia Bulletin.

First Skater—What are you laughing at?

Second Skater—That fellow at the other end of the pond whom we couldn't bear.

First Skater—But what about him?

Second Skater—Well, the ice couldn't bear him, either.—Tit-Bits.

Manager—Where did you keep this diamond tiara which you say has been stolen?

Actress—In the box with the rest of my jewelry.

Manager (coldly)—What's it worth?

Actress—Oh, about a column and a half.—Sydney Bulletin.

One of two rival chapels in a village had just got a new and very smart organ. A member of the other congregation met the caretaker leaving the chapel one day.

"Ah reckon tha's gotten a organ," he said. "All that needs now is a monkey."

"Aye," said the caretaker, "and all tha needs is a organ!"—Liverpool Post.

"Didn't your son give promise when he was a child of becoming a mathematical genius?"

"Yes, he did."

"Has he still the same bent?"

"I believe so. You'll find him down at the beach almost any fine day looking over figures."—Boston Transcript.

More than 10,000 foreign tourists, a majority of them Americans, will visit Japan during the first six months of 1930, according to estimates by the Japan tourist bureau. The tourist trade generally will yield more than $30,000,000 during the year, it is estimated, a majority of it coming from pasengers on the numerous world-tour ships that will visit the ports of the empire.

The remains of what must have been a handsome Roman villa of early Imperial times were accidentally brought to light in the village of Carini near Palermo during the course of digging the foundation of a new school building. Large slabs of polychrome marble which formed the floors of the villa have been discovered, together with a number of mosaics in good preservation. Traces of columns and statues probably belonging to a nymphaeum in the Pompeii style have also come to light.

London's red-coated, steel-helmeted horse guards who attracted so much attention from tourists as they sat erect on fine horses at the gates of Whitehall, may be abolished for the sake of economy. Theoretically the guards are at the gates to prevent entrance to Whitehall, which houses government departments. Actually, it seems, no one knows why they are sitting there so proudly. Secretary of War Tom Shaw is represented as feeling that units regarded as "largely ornamental" must be sacrificed in the interests of economy.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Platt Brothers & Company, Waterbury

Nathan Platt moved from Newtown in 1799 to the shore of the Naugatuck river, three miles below Waterbury, where he built a dam and grist mill. His son, Alfred, learned the milling business and worked in the brass mills in Waterbury, where he was one of the first to draw copper wire for making button eyes.

Alfred Platt later disposed of his interests in Waterbury, and bought his father's mill and water power at Platts Mills. Later with his two sons, William S. and Clark M., he started manufacturing buttons.

In 1847 a partnership was entered into between father and sons. In order to make buttons from zinc, they set up and operated the first mill for rolling strip zinc in the country. At the time of the Civil war they found themselves in a position to profit greatly from their industry and ability to produce with labor saving machines, which they had invented. They made great quantities of zinc pants buttons and zinc slugs which were rammed in the muzzle loaders to clear out the rifling. The Civil war business firmly established the concern.

In 1876 the Platt Brothers & Co. was incorporated and at the same time the Patent Button company was formed as a selling organization to conduct the sale of the large overall button business which had grown up.

In 1911 The Patent Button company took over the manufacture of the buttons The Platt Brothers & Co. continuing in the strip zinc rolling and eyelet manufacturing. Both companies are now entirely owned and managed by the descendants of William S. and Clark M. Platt.

The present officers are: Roland H. Camp, president; Lewis J. Hart, treasurer, secretary and general manager.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Platt Brothers & Company, Waterbury

Nathan Platt moved from Newtown in 1799 to the shore of the Naugatuck river, three miles below Waterbury, where he built a dam and grist mill. His son, Alfred, learned the milling business and worked in the brass mills in Waterbury, where he was one of the first to draw copper wire for making button eyes.

Alfred Platt later disposed of his interests in Waterbury, and bought his father's mill and water power at Platts Mills. Later with his two sons, William S. and Clark M., he started manufacturing buttons.

In 1847 a partnership was entered into between father and sons. In order to make buttons from zinc, they set up and operated the first mill for rolling strip zinc in the country. At the time of the Civil war they found themselves in a position to profit greatly from their industry and ability to produce with labor saving machines, which they had invented. They made great quantities of zinc pants buttons and zinc slugs which were rammed in the muzzle loaders to clear out the rifling. The Civil war business firmly established the concern.

In 1876 the Platt Brothers & Co. was incorporated and at the same time the Patent Button company was formed as a selling organization to conduct the sale of the large overall button business which had grown up.

In 1911 The Patent Button company took over the manufacture of the buttons The Platt Brothers & Co. continuing in the strip zinc rolling and eyelet manufacturing. Both companies are now entirely owned and managed by the descendants of William S. and Clark M. Platt.

The present officers are: Roland H. Camp, president; Lewis J. Hart, treasurer, secretary and general manager.

INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURE

SHRINKAGE IN STOCK PRICES WAS PARTIALLY DISPELLED AT CLOSING

NEW YORK, April 30—(AP)—The stock market had further sharp sinking spells today, but regained much of its loss in the last half hour of trading, as shorts hurried to cover in expectation of a favorable quarterly report from U. S. Steel after the close.

Closing prices were irregularly lower, but the index of 90 leading stocks showed a net loss for the day of only 1-5 of a point. Trading was in heavy volume, total sales aggregating 5,410,010 shares.

The U. S. Steel report was considerably more favorable than most estimates had indicated. Net profit of $3.44 per share, while comparing with $5.04 in the like quarter of 1929, substantially exceeded Wall street estimates, running from $2.90 to $3.25. Report of the finance committee that the corporation expected to maintain operations at 80 per cent of capacity during the second quarter, was encouraging.

Inland Steel also published a good first quarter report. In view of the slack business generally during the period. This company earned $2.26 a share, compared to $2.50 in the same period of 1929. Wall street looks for early announcements of reduced prices for steel products which is expected to stabilize the price structure.

News from the oil industry continued favorable, and several of the oil stocks gave good accounts of themselves. Leading refiners followed Tidewater Oil company in boosting price 1 cent a gallon in the east. Oil and copper shares continued to decline, several reaching new lows for the year or longer.

American Tobacco B was a strong feature, closing nearly nine points higher. J. I. Case was up more than 7, and such shares as American Can, American Telephone, McKeesport Tinplate, Continental Can, Commercial Solvents, Johns Manville, and Standards of New York and New Jersey gained about a point or two. International Harvester and Pan American B were up nearly 3 points at the close.

People's Gas dropped 19 points to 300, then rallied to 312 1-2. Vanadium dropped about ten points, and closed off 3. Atchison dropped six points, and rebounded 3. Anaconda, Eureka Vacuum and Patino Mines broke through the low levels of last November. Several recent weak spots, such as Canada Dry, National Cash Register A. and Stewart Warner, rallied substantially in short covering. U. S. Steel and General Electric were off fractionally at the close.

Credit conditions were a little easier. Call money was unchanged at 4 per cent but an easier tone in time money indicated that lower call loans rates are expected after completion of the month end shifting of balances. Month end influences brought steadier foreign exchange rates, after the sagging of the past few days. Sterling cables held at $4.86 1-4.

In the commodity markets, grains reacted moderately. Wheat futures lost about 1 1-2 cents on a slackening of export buying, and bearish Texas reports. Corn lost about a cent. Cotton sold up a little, then lost its gains in selling prompted by bearish weather reports from the southwest.

WASHINGTON, April 29—(AP)—Treasury receipts for April 26 were $6,234,036.39; expenditures $9,813,440.48; balance $184,348,613.00.

COTTON

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Cotton futures closed steady, 6 points higher to 3 lower; spot steady; middling 16.30.

Repeated reports that a further cut in the price of copper is pending has had the effect of holding up sales that otherwise might be made. Domestic buying is small and on a hand-to-mouth basis, while foreign sales also are light. So far rumors of another cut in price have been met with general denials by those qualified to speak

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, April 28—(AP)—Frequent waves of selling swept through today's curb market but, except in the case of a new high priced specialties, the recessions, as a rule, were small, with a brisk rally under way at the close. The reaction was generally described as a further correction of the top-heavy speculative position created in the frenzied trading earlier in the year.

High grade public utilities received good support on the reaction. Electric Bond and Share, after dipping to 110 1-8, rallied to 112 for a small fractional decline. American Super Power closed unchanged and Niagara Hudson and Cities Service showed only slight recessions. Duke Power broke six points and North American Light and Power 3 1-2 on a small turnover. Net losses of a point or more were registered by American and Foreign Power warrants, Associated Gas and Electric, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, Electric Power and Light warrants, Memphis Natural Gas and Tampa Electric.

Oils received fairly good support on rumors of an early increase in crude prices. Humble closed more than a point higher and several of the others showed slight gains.

Securities General (old stock) which broke 70 points yesterday, rallied 52 today, and the new stock to be outstanding after the 10 for 1 split-up is effective rallied nearly 2 points. Fractional recessions took place in most of the other leading investment trust and holding company shares.

Among the high priced specialties, Singer Manufacturing broke 10 points, A. O. Smith 7 3-4, and Driver Harris 5. The market quotation of Foremost Dairy Products was cut in half, the stock touching a new low at 4 after having sold as high as 10 7-8 earlier in the year. Gramophone was an outstanding strong spot, crossing 25 to a new high in expectation of an early merger announcement.

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Unofficial estimates of steel production throughout the country place the rate of operations at around 77 1-2 per cent of rated capacity as against a shade above 78 per cent last week, and 76 per cent two weeks ago. At this time last year the average for the country was nearly 101 per cent.

From figures so far available it is estimated that the March net operating income of the class 1 railroads approximated $61,100,000, compared with $97,466,478 in March, 1929. A decrease of 37.3 per cent the February figures showed a decline of 29.8 per cent from those of February, 1929.

Directors of the Republic Steel corporation today elected Tom M. Girdler, chairman, to fill also the office of president, made vacant last week by the death of Elmer T. McCleary.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Bonds moved in larger volume today and prices developed considerably better resistance. Most of the increased business was in a comparatively few rails and foreign obligations.

Carrier liens made progress, but the buying was confined to les than a dozen issues which had softened in the recent dull markets. Chesapeake and Ohio refunding 4 1-2s, Rock Island refunding 4s, Nickel Plate 1 1-2s and 5 1-2s, Pere Marquette 4 1-2s, Frisco 4 1-2s, and prior lien 4s and Southern Railway general 4s, were the leaders of the group and accounted for most of the day's advance therein.

The shake out in stock prices and the late rally gave the share feature section a highly irregular appearace. American Telephone 4 1-2s went to a new low for the movement below 165, but picked up most of the loss and closed about even with Monday final figure. International Tel 4 1-2s ended the day with a small net advance. Railroad covertibles were heavy, Atchison 4 1-2s dipping to within half a point of the year's low while New Haven 6s lost 2 points. Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s sagged fractionally to virtually their low. Bonds in the amusement classification were dull. Warner Brothers 6s eased to the new minimum of 107 1-4.

Telephone obligations featured the utility section. The American and International company's debenture 5s and New York Telephone 6s rose half a point, although closing prices were slightly below the top. Industrials dragged.

Trading in foreign bonds was limited to the better grade loans, especially those of the European nations interested in German reparations.

German bonds were fairly active today, although prices were slightly irregular. The Republic 7s advanced a shade, and Berlin City 6s rose 2 points, but German General Electric 6s eased and Rhine Westphalia 6s with warrants sold off a point. French 7s closed unchanged, Belgium 7s of 1955 encountered some selling.

Liberties and treasuries remained dormant on the absence of important changes in money. Time accommodations eased slightly in the long maturities, but the market was dull.

It was learned that the $5,00,000 San Paulo coffee loan, oated here today was 90 per cent subscribed.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 29—(AP)—Wheat prices were down grade today owing largely to rains over recent drought sections, with southwest Kansas receiving the best moisture supply in five months. The wheat market was also bearishly affected by continued heavy letting go of May delivery holdings, with latest official figures showing that the rate of contraction of the open interest here in the May delivery is about 10,000,000 bushels for a single day. Government sponsored agencies, however, were credited with buying enough May wheat today to keep liquidation from resulting in a demoralized market.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at almost the day's bottom level 1 3-8 at 1 3-4c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-4 at 1 1-2c down, oats 5-8 at 2c off, and provisions showing 2 at 3c advance.

Provisions were responsive to hog market upturns.

the annual open night at the Connecticut State Trade school on Providence street, are now being formulated, Principal H. H. Ellis of the institution announced this afternoon. The school of trades will be open for public inspection this year on May 15, Mr. Ellis said. In the past two years that the trade school has occupied the two new wings added to the main building, open nights have attracted hundreds of people who have found the long tour of inspection in the various instruction rooms both educational and interesting. As usual the entire school will be in operation during the visiting hours with the students of the trades and domestic sciences occupied with various tasks, while the parents and friends look on. Mr. Ellis on behalf of the state board of education, extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend the open night.

With the forms for the concrete foundation prepared for the pouring and preliminary steel work already underway on the steel reservoir construction project on Oak hill, the noise and hum-drum that will be heard for the greater part of the summer is already echoing and re-echoing throughout the city, as the giant cylinder begins to take form.

A military animal-drawn rolling kitchen, weighing two tons, has been received from the war department by Captain John J. McGarry, commanding officer of the Headquarters Co., 43rd., Div., local national guard unit, and has been added to the equipment of the company. The queer appearing device is composed of two vehicles mounted on heavy steel tired wheels and when pressed into military service will be drawn by four animals. One of the wagons is known as a commissary cart, for storing rations and other eatables. The second trailer, termed a rolling kitchen, contains a portable fire place, ovens and a compartment equipped with fireless cookers used for the preparing of soups and other liquid foods.

The Headquarters company has attained its minimum peace time strength Captain McGarry said Monday evening on the occasion of the weekly drill at the state armory, but because of certain conditions four vacancies exist in the ranks at the present time. Captain McGarry intimated that he is anxious to secure new enlistments in order to bring the company up to its quota, that all possible non-commissioned promotions may be made before the military unit entrains for Camp Devens, for its 7th annual tour of active field duty. Also recruits entering the national guard service at the present time will be included in the personnel of the company to attend the encampment at Ayer, Mass.

Putnam high school is "wet" by a wide margin, a prohibition straw ballot taken among the students, with the sanction of the officials, last Friday morning, showed. The three questions asked were identical with those being asked hundreds throughout the nation by the Literary Digest. Repeal, received the largest vote, with continued enforcement, second, and modification of the dry laws, running a poor third.

Lieut. Colonel John B. Byrne of Hartford, finance officer of the 43rd, Div., C. N. G., visited the local company at its drill shed Monday evening at the state armory.

Luther M. Keith, Grove street, supervisor of the landscape bureau of the state highway department, has returned to his duties following his recovery from a recent illness.

The combination pumper and hose wagon at the Central station responded to a four call at 9 o'clock last evening for a chimney fire at the home of Ray C. Bosworth on Woodstock avenue. The blaze was confined to its place of origin and was extinguished without property loss.

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Unofficial estimates of steel production throughout the country place the rate of operations at around 77 1-2 per cent of rated capacity as against a shade above 78 per cent last week, and 76 per cent two weeks ago. At this time last year the average for the country was nearly 101 per cent.

From figures so far available it is estimated that the March net operating income of the class 1 railroads approximated $61,100,000, compared with $97,466,478 in March, 1929. A decrease of 37.3 per cent the February figures showed a decline of 29.8 per cent from those of February, 1929.

Directors of the Republic Steel corporation today elected Tom M. Girdler, chairman, to fill also the office of president, made vacant last week by the death of Elmer T. McCleary.

NEW YORK, April 29—(AP)—Bonds moved in larger volume today and prices developed considerably better resistance. Most of the increased business was in a comparatively few rails and foreign obligations.

Carrier liens made progress, but the buying was confined to les than a dozen issues which had softened in the recent dull markets. Chesapeake and Ohio refunding 4 1-2s, Rock Island refunding 4s, Nickel Plate 1 1-2s and 5 1-2s, Pere Marquette 4 1-2s, Frisco 4 1-2s, and prior lien 4s and Southern Railway general 4s, were the leaders of the group and accounted for most of the day's advance therein.

The shake out in stock prices and the late rally gave the share feature section a highly irregular appearace. American Telephone 4 1-2s went to a new low for the movement below 165, but picked up most of the loss and closed about even with Monday final figure. International Tel 4 1-2s ended the day with a small net advance. Railroad covertibles were heavy, Atchison 4 1-2s dipping to within half a point of the year's low while New Haven 6s lost 2 points. Baltimore and Ohio 4 1-2s sagged fractionally to virtually their low. Bonds in the amusement classification were dull. Warner Brothers 6s eased to the new minimum of 107 1-4.

Telephone obligations featured the utility section. The American and International company's debenture 5s and New York Telephone 6s rose half a point, although closing prices were slightly below the top. Industrials dragged.

Trading in foreign bonds was limited to the better grade loans, especially those of the European nations interested in German reparations.

German bonds were fairly active today, although prices were slightly irregular. The Republic 7s advanced a shade, and Berlin City 6s rose 2 points, but German General Electric 6s eased and Rhine Westphalia 6s with warrants sold off a point. French 7s closed unchanged, Belgium 7s of 1955 encountered some selling.

Liberties and treasuries remained dormant on the absence of important changes in money. Time accommodations eased slightly in the long maturities, but the market was dull.

It was learned that the $5,00,000 San Paulo coffee loan, oated here today was 90 per cent subscribed.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 29—(AP)—Wheat prices were down grade today owing largely to rains over recent drought sections, with southwest Kansas receiving the best moisture supply in five months. The wheat market was also bearishly affected by continued heavy letting go of May delivery holdings, with latest official figures showing that the rate of contraction of the open interest here in the May delivery is about 10,000,000 bushels for a single day. Government sponsored agencies, however, were credited with buying enough May wheat today to keep liquidation from resulting in a demoralized market.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at almost the day's bottom level 1 3-8 at 1 3-4c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-4 at 1 1-2c down, oats 5-8 at 2c off, and provisions showing 2 at 3c advance.

Provisions were responsive to hog market upturns.

PUTNAM

the annual open night at the Connecticut State Trade school on Providence street, are now being formulated, Principal H. H. Ellis of the institution announced this afternoon. The school of trades will be open for public inspection this year on May 15, Mr. Ellis said. In the past two years that the trade school has occupied the two new wings added to the main building, open nights have attracted hundreds of people who have found the long tour of inspection in the various instruction rooms both educational and interesting. As usual the entire school will be in operation during the visiting hours with the students of the trades and domestic sciences occupied with various tasks, while the parents and friends look on. Mr. Ellis on behalf of the state board of education, extends a cordial invitation to the public to attend the open night.

With the forms for the concrete foundation prepared for the pouring and preliminary steel work already underway on the steel reservoir construction project on Oak hill, the noise and hum-drum that will be heard for the greater part of the summer is already echoing and re-echoing throughout the city, as the giant cylinder begins to take form.

A military animal-drawn rolling kitchen, weighing two tons, has been received from the war department by Captain John J. McGarry, commanding officer of the Headquarters Co., 43rd., Div., local national guard unit, and has been added to the equipment of the company. The queer appearing device is composed of two vehicles mounted on heavy steel tired wheels and when pressed into military service will be drawn by four animals. One of the wagons is known as a commissary cart, for storing rations and other eatables. The second trailer, termed a rolling kitchen, contains a portable fire place, ovens and a compartment equipped with fireless cookers used for the preparing of soups and other liquid foods.

The Headquarters company has attained its minimum peace time strength Captain McGarry said Monday evening on the occasion of the weekly drill at the state armory, but because of certain conditions four vacancies exist in the ranks at the present time. Captain McGarry intimated that he is anxious to secure new enlistments in order to bring the company up to its quota, that all possible non-commissioned promotions may be made before the military unit entrains for Camp Devens, for its 7th annual tour of active field duty. Also recruits entering the national guard service at the present time will be included in the personnel of the company to attend the encampment at Ayer, Mass.

FUNERAL

Thomas B. Mathewson

At the grave in Woodstock hill cemetery this afternoon at three o'clock, funeral services were held for Thomas B. Mathewson, of Fremont street, former Woodstock resident, who died Saturday. Rev. Mr. Linton, pastor of the Hill church in Woodstock, officiated at the committal service. There was a number of friends and relatives in attendance.

Mrs. Andrew P. Donovan and Joseph Donovan of Lyons street were in Providence today.

Road builders at work on the new state highway running between Pomfret and Goodyear, were employing special machinery today in erecting the new type cable fences along the completed stretch of highway.

Putnam high school is "wet" by a wide margin, a prohibition straw ballot taken among the students, with the sanction of the officials, last Friday morning, showed. The three questions asked were identical with those being asked hundreds throughout the nation by the Literary Digest. Repeal, received the largest vote, with continued enforcement, second, and modification of the dry laws, running a poor third.

Lieut. Colonel John B. Byrne of Hartford, finance officer of the 43rd, Div., C. N. G., visited the local company at its drill shed Monday evening at the state armory.

Luther M. Keith, Grove street, supervisor of the landscape bureau of the state highway department, has returned to his duties following his recovery from a recent illness.

The combination pumper and hose wagon at the Central station responded to a four call at 9 o'clock last evening for a chimney fire at the home of Ray C. Bosworth on Woodstock avenue. The blaze was confined to its place of origin and was extinguished without property loss.

Mrs. John Gallup entertained the M. M. club Wednesday evening at the Community house at a table of bridge. The prizes were won by Mrs. Augusta Nolan, Mrs. Henry Fontaine and Miss Lena Pipher.

He is survived by his wife, Anna Briggs, and six children, Frank, of Plainfield, George of Voluntown, Ida Eichelberg and Everett, of Plainfield, Eva Herbert of Bridgeport and Claire of Plainfield, also five grandchildren, a brother, Robert L., of Plainfield and a sister, Phoebe Edwards of Washington, R. I. The funeral was held at his home Sunday afternoon, Rev. William C. Prentiss conducting the services. James Royle sang "Sometime We'll Understand," and "In the Garden." The bearers were four sons, John J. Herbert, a son-in-law, and Willie Bonney, a nephew. The flowers were beautiful. Burial was in Pachaug cemetery. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Demonstration of Duralith

For the past week Laurence J. Martin, national supervisor of distribution for the D. C. of N. Y. has been in Norwich conferring with Disco Bros., prominent merchants of Main street and getting things in readiness for a 6 days demonstration of duralith to which the public is cordially invited with no obligation to buy. Mr. Harry Henkin, nationally known demonstrator of designs and colorings in textures is at Disco Bros. store now to stay for six days to explain the simplicity of designing and coloring duralith.

The Bulletin reporter was shown the apparent miracle worked with this product and when Mr. Martin was interviewed he said: "Wall textures are not new, because the ancient Egyptians used them thousands of years ago making them from mud, clay and water. In spite of many difficulties and drawbacks, however, textures were used extensively by wealthy people and in the construction of churches, office building, theatres, etc., because of their great beauty. Then, several men gathered at dinner one evening, men who were builders, contractors and architects. They talked over the possibilities of creating a wall texture that would eliminate all of the old difficulties, be so simple to apply that a child could do it, and so low in price that the owner of a modest home could have the walls of a palace!

"Much more time and energy was spent in experimentation.

"Finally, a contact was made with Dr. Y. C. Cheng, a very progressive, modern Chinese chemist who, by the way, in addition to being the head of our laboratories at the present time, is assistant to Prof. Dr. Morgan of Columbia university in New York and particularly in charge of the chemical research laboratory at that institution of learning.

"And then along came duralith, so simple a child could finish a beautiful wall and so moderate in price anyone could afford it.

"Today, my personal opinion is that duralith stands supreme to the people of this section of Connecticut that in justice to themselves they should at least come into Disco's this week including Saturday night where a courteous demonstrator will answer all questions, where they can take hold of a brush and apply it themselves and prove as we always say that it slides on the wall like melted butter".

BONDSMAN FOR RUM-RUNNERS CREW, NEW LONDON, BACKS OUT, BUT RELENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 29. — The seven members of the crew of the rum-runner, Marianne, seized in Long Island sound a fortnight ago while carrying a cargo of several hundred cases of liquor, were presented before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran this afternoon. Their cases were continued to Monday next. The men have been at liberty on bail furnished by Louis Elfenbein, but today the bondsman surrendered the men, stating he did not desire to longer furnish bail. However, when it appeared as though the men would have to go to jail, Elfenbein changed his mind and again qualified as their bondsman.

COAST GUARD PATROL BOATS CAPTURE TWO RUM SHIPS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, April 29.— Coast Guard patrol boats made another rum capture early today when the Speedboat Elsie and the motor boat Esther B., were seized, off Montauk point, with their liquor cargoes and crews. Both boats were brought into port and will be taken to New York, where the crews will be tried, since the seizures were made in New York waters. The patrol boats had been scouring the waters of Long Island, Block Island and Fishers Island sounds throughout the night. About 2 o'clock this morning the boats were observed and as they were low in the water it was decided to search them. The boats were signaled to stop and when the order was obeyed coast guardsmen boarded both craft and found the liquor.

Car Stolen

Ralph Carchici, 41 Front street, reported to the police this evening that his Oakland roadster, carrying Connecticut registration N—4508, had been stolen. The state police throughout the state have been requested to be on the lookout for the auto. Carchici said that he drove to his home about 7 o'clock and was away from the auto less than five minutes, but that was long enough for the thief to operate. When Carchici emerged from the house he discovered that the auto was not at the curb, nor could it be seen on the street.

Rowboat Gone

Alex Piascik, 79 Harrison street, notified the police tonight that his rowboat had been stolen. ON WOMAN'S TIP TO POLICE FREDERICK PAYS $200

Victor Frederick, 33 Walbach street, was in the police court this morning charged with violation of the liquor law on one count, keeping with intent to sell. He entered a demurrer, through counsel, which was overruled by Judge Daniel M. Cronin, who imposed a fine of $200 and costs. He has been arrested many times for violation of the prohibition law. The police yesterday afternoon received a telephone message from a woman, who said that a large quantity of liquor was being loaded on a truck at 32 Walbach street, but as the property at that address is the freight house of the New Haven railroad, it was known that a mistake as regards the location of the building had been made. However, Automobile Patrol Officers Thomas Cavanaugh and Elwood Bailey and Patrolman Dennis Murphy were sent to Walbach street and not finding the truck the officers decided to raid the Frederick home. They did not possess a search warrant, but entered the house and searched it thoroughly, finding 50 cases of beer and a small quantity of liquor. The beer and whiskey were seized and this afternoon it was taken to the city dumping ground off Riverview avenue and destroyed.

Tony Lynch, 31 Warner street, Groton, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $5 and costs. Lynch and Andrew Mekelivk, 29 Shaw street, engaged in a brawl yesterday forenoon and before the fight ended, Lynch attacked and beat the Shaw street man. Mekelivk made complaint to the police and Lynch was arrested by Patrolman Henry Sylvia.

Edward Klimberg, 19, of 53 Shaw street, was charged with theft and his case was again continued, this time to June 28. Klimberg and other youths were arrested last January when they broke into residences in the Pequot section, stealing whatever they found. The other youths were committed to the state reformatory at Cheshire.

Maxwell Melenoff, employed at the Garde theatre, was charged with violation of the city's parking law. As he did not present himself in court his bond of $2 was declared forfeited. Two cases of intoxication were tried. One man was sentenced to jail for 10 days and the other, a sailor, was discharged.

James J. Sullivan, 27 Cutler street, was arrested late yesterday by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with reckless driving and he will be presented in the Waterford town court next Monday. Sullivan was driving on the New Haven turnpike and when near Clark lane, he drove from the line of traffic and attempted to pass other cars. When a car approached from the opposite direction, Sullivan was caught in a serious predicament. In order to avoid a head-on crash, Sullivan's auto nearly overturned and it was only the good judgment of the driver of the car headed for Sullivan's auto that prevented a crash.

Case Was Nolled

Joseph Granata, 12 Summer street, was charged with manslaughter, in the court yesterday afternoon, but the count was nolled. The auto Granata was driving on the New London and Norwich highway, fatally injured Jacob Hester at Quaker Hill several weeks ago.

Benjamin Verito, 817 Main street and Sebastian Muscarella, Waterford, were charged with reckless driving and each was fined $25 and costs. The drivers were arrested a week ago when they indulged in a race.

When the disappearance of the pair became known the police were requested to arrest DeCosta. Last evening DeCosta telephoned to his home stating that he would return during the night. Evelyn Brent tells how to Attract ••

EVELYN BRENT, irresistibly lovely star, in the bathroom designed by a prominent New York artist and built for her in Hollywood. At home, as in her dressing room on location, she cares for her skin regularly with Lux Toilet Soap's gentle lather.

"An exquisite complexion, somehow, is always alluring. It attracts and holds attention as nothing else will. So naturally, when girls write to ask me the secret of being attractive, I'd like to say to every one: 'Keep your skin really lovely—smooth and flawless. This is all-important to any girl. And you can do it just the way we screen stars do.'"

Evelyn Brent

"A GIRL may be appealing for ever so many reasons," says Evelyn Brent, the star whose own magnetism has proved so irresistible on the screen. "But the most compelling charm of all is smooth, soft skin.

"An exquisite complexion, somehow, is always alluring. It attracts and holds attention as nothing else will.

"Long ago the directors in Hollywood found out that no girl could hope to win out on the screen unless she has the kind of skin that makes you fairly gasp with admiration. The close-ups, you know, are taken under glaring lights that would show up mercilessly even a tiny blemish.

AGNES AYRES, Columbia star: "It's wonderful soap."

"And now that the talkies are here, there are more close-ups to face than ever, so you may be sure we all take mighty good care of our skin!"

To Keep Skin Baby-Smooth

"I can't remember who began it," this charming star goes on, "but now almost every girl in Hollywood uses the same method I do—regular care with Lux Toilet Soap. We find it most refreshing.

"Indeed it is Hollywood's favorite soap. So naturally when girls write to ask me the secret of being attractive, I'd like to say to every one: 'Keep your skin really lovely—smooth and flawless. This is all-important to any girl. And you can do it just the way we screen stars do.'"

LILA LEE, charming star: "I always use Lux Toilet Soap to guard my skin."

Certainly the beauty of Evelyn Brent's own skin is convincing! And did you ever see a more tempting complexion than Lila Lee's? She uses Lux Toilet Soap. And so does Agnes Ayres. Margaret Livingston and Dorothy Revier, too, and hundreds of others.

Nine out of Ten Lovely Stars use it— in Hollywood—on Broadway—in Europe

Of the 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 511 use Lux Toilet Soap. It has been made the official soap in all the studios.

On Broadway the stage stars are equally devoted to it. At their request it is kept in the dressing rooms of 71 of the 74 legitimate New York theaters!

And even in the European capitals the screen stars, like their sisters in Hollywood, are now using it!

You will be delighted with Lux Toilet Soap, too. With the fresh smoothness it gives your skin, with its fragrant, generous lather. Order several cakes—today.

DOROTHY REVIER, Columbia star: "Lathers so generously."

MARGARET LIVINGSTON, Columbia star: "Keeps my skin smooth."

CITY ABSTRACT SHOWS TAXABLE LIST OF $36,134,928 FOR NORWICH

The city abstract of the grand list, which has been under preparation since January by Tyler D. Guy, has been completed and the abstract book was signed Tuesday afternoon by the three city assessors, Alderman Paul H. Zahn, Councilmen Alexander Sharp and Tax Collector Harold T. Robinson. They put their signatures to the abstract book and took oath before Town Clerk Harold S. Burt.

The abstract book, which has been written up by Mr. Guy, shows a total city list of $36,396,859, with exemptions of $261,931, leaving a net city list of $36,134,928 upon which the city tax is figured. The gross list includes $31,995,990 in property of residents and $4,400,869 in property of non-residents. The exemptions all apply to property of residents, leaving $31,734,059 as the net property list of residents. The total town list is $48,641,637.

Preparation of the abstract involves an immense amount of detail work on the part of Mr. Guy in separating city from town property, ascertaining the exemptions, and finally writing out the abstract book, all of which is done so well as to make a highly creditable piece of work.

The accompanying summary shows the figures in each classification of property, with the amounts under resident and non-resident ownership:

WILL NEED WEEK MORE TO CLOSE NORWICH CENSUS

The taking of the Norwich census will not be completed for at least a week more, according to Assistant Supervisor Benjamin H. Mull of Mystic. This is not the fault of the enumerators who were supposed to have completed their tasks by April 15th but is due to the fact that numerous persons have been continually absent from home when the enumerators called at their houses. Another obstacle which the enumerators have run against is the person who requests them to "call some other time" as they "did not have time to bother" or were "not ready to answer the questions." Enumerators have been forced to call at certain houses from six to eight times in some cases before finally securing the necessary information.

Conditions in New London are not better as it will require a week more to complete the census in that city. A number of the towns in the county have had the census completed and the enumerators have turned in their lists. Among those towns in which the census has not been completed are Voluntown, North Stonington and Griswold.

In North Stonington a census taker found a couple, 82 and 80 years old respectively, who celebrated their 63rd wedding anniversary the past month. For many years they have been residing on a farm in that town. Many other interesting facts have been revealed in the county by the census returns.

In New London the youngest person recorded was a one day old baby and the oldest resident is a woman, 100 years of age. In one family the census taker found that there were eight girls and no boys. One man was found to have waited until he was 69 years old before venturing into matrimony. He lost his wife by death shortly after his marriage.

Among the far-off places where local persons were born is Tonga, in the South Sea islands, where one man was born. One woman was born on the Indian ocean.

Indicating a desire to cooperate fully in the counting of noses one woman told the census taker who called on her that she expected a visit from the stork within a few days and asked if the census enumerator couldn't come back within a week. This could not be arranged, however, inasmuch as the census is taken as of the first day of April. Persons who died after that day are counted but children born after that day are not counted.

One of the enumerators reports that he was called upon to name a baby at one house. He named the child Elizabeth.

At Gales Ferry it was found that there are 19 people over 70 years of age keeping house alone. At Noank seven women who are over 80 years of age were found to be living on one street.

Doing Parachute Jumping

Fred Williams of Norwich, former parachute jumper for the Red Wing Flying Service, left Hartford, Tuesday for Ohio, where he is to continue his operations in parachute jumping for Roy Ahern, who flew in Norwich last June; Jack Hankin, another Norwich boy, is also jumping for this company. Mr. Hankin now claims the world's record for long distance jumping.

Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel of the state motor vehicle department will speak on "Co-operation Between State and Truck Owners."

Among other speakers and their subjects are: Charles L. Eyanson, assistant to the president of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut, "The Desirability of United Action," George H. Pride, of Brooklyn, N. Y, "The Operation of Motor Trucks by Competitive Railroads and Its Influence Toward Trucking Amalgamations and the Development of Franchise Operation", Henry Trumbull, president of Connecticut chamber of commerce, "Better Co-ordination Between Business and Community Organization."

HEALTH DEPARTMENT GUARDS STATE'S WATER SUPPLIES

The fact that Connecticut has been fortunate of late in its freedom from water-borne disease should not lull us into a sense of security, because such outbreaks have occurred in the past and may occur in the future, says the weekly bulletin of the state board of health.

Public water supplies in Connecticut are under the direct control of local officials and are under the general supervision of the state department of health. Eternal vigilance is needed to continue Connecticut's excellent record—vigilance by supervisory officials and by the public who frequent the vicinity of public water supplies.

Private well water supplies should be located away from sources of sewage pollution and should be constructed so as to shut out surface contamination. A pamphlet on "Private Water Supplies" by the Connecticut state department of health is available upon request.

OPPOSE MORE TAXIS FOR NEW LONDON OPERATOR

Considerable opposition developed Monday at the hearing before the public utilities commission in Hartford on the application of Meyer Rubin, operator of the Yellow Cab system in New London, who desires eighteen cabs instead of the twelve he now operates. The other taxicab operators in New London united to oppose the request. Rubin, who has the rail station business and the parking privileges at the station, contended that he had obtained the business of the Griswold hotel, and needed additional cabs for that service. It developed, however, the extra cabs would be used in city service when the hotel was closed for the winter months.

DR. LUCIUS BUTTON'S BOOKS ARE SUBJECT OF NOTE

The March issue of a well known magazine gives a remarkable insight to the tastes and fine character of the late Dr. Lucius Button, of Rochester, N. Y., a native of Norwich, who died several months ago. He had collected some choice and rare books and it is mentioned that one of these which is to be sold is a presentation copy of Stephen Crane's "Maggie: A Girl of the Streets," privately printed in 1892. Copies of this book seldom reach the public in this manner. With it are six letters from Crane to Dr. Button which have been kept intact with the book and with which Dr. Button long refused to part.

The regular meeting of the Taftville Business Men's association was held Monday evening at Firemen's hall on Merchants avenue, with the largest attendance as yet recorded at one of these meetings. Chairman Philias Poirier presided. Plans were made for the annual outing and clam-bake, which is an affair looked forward to each season by the members of the organization and their families. Efforts will be made to make the coming event the largest attended and most successful affair ever engineered by the association.

The committees which had charge of water and lights in the business district made pleasing and satisfactory reports, after which the election of officers took place, the same officers being re-elected by acclamation. President Poirier stated that be trusted that the members would co-operate and assist him to improve the organization by a hundred per cent attendance. The Business Men's association is in very good standing and is prosperous. At the close of business there was a smoker and lunch was served by Noe Frechette.

The children of the kindergarten and primary departments of the Taftville Congregational church school enjoyed an Easter party in the church lecture rooms Saturday afternoon. There was a peanut race and an Easter egg hunt, and each child received a favor of a small basket filled with candy Easter eggs. The affair was planned by Mrs. Elsie K. Pingree, Miss Gladys Thoma and Miss Helen Thoma.

COLCHESTER'S WORST FIRE COVERS 500 ACRES IN BULL HILL SECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, April 29—The worst forest fire in this vicinity for many years burned over from 300 to 500 acres of timberland in the Bull hill section of town today. The blaze is thought to have been started by a spark from a freight train on the air-line railroad, and is understood to have started shortly before 11 a. m. on the west side of Dickinson's stream.

District Wardens John H. Phelps and Deputy Warden Elmer H. Foote of Colchester, together with wardens from East Hampton, Lebanon and Portland, hastened to the fire which was fast spreading westward toward East Hampton. Backfires were set effectively in several places and the force of over 100 men fought the flames frantically with shovels and brooms, while the Lebanon state pumper and fire trucks from East Hampton and Portland were also used to good advantage. The fire spread so rapidly that it was with difficulty that the Bull hill district school house was saved, the flames coming within 15 feet of the building. Several farm buildings near the school were also saved after a hard fight. A large peach orchard a short distance away was somewhat damaged by the blaze.

The extent of damage to the timberland in the section had not been estimated tonight. A large part of the burned area was brush land.

A force of over 100 volunteers came from East Hampton, Colchester, Moodus, Marlboro, West Chester, Hebron, Portland and Lebanon. Late in the evening the fire was reported under control in the Colchester district but was still burning westward over the town line into the outskirts of the town of East Hampton, where the men were hard at work building back fires attempting to check the spread of the flames.

Signs of petroleum have been discovered in the Tucum and Boa Asperanca districts of Brazil.

CLAIMS IMITATION OF MALT COMPANY'S SYRUP

By a suit brought in the superior court for this county the New London Malt company asks $2,000 damages, an accounting and an injunction restraining the National Economy Stores incorporated, from selling a product alleged to be an imitation of the malt company's malt syrup. The malt company, of which M. A. Keenan is president, claims that a malt syrup it has manufactured and sold for nine years under a certain trade mark was imitated in a similar product put out by the Economy stores. The plaintiff claims that through misrepresentation the product of the Economy stores has been sold as a substitute for the malt company's syrup.

The wages of farm labor in Connecticut rank second highest in New England at the present time, whether paid by the day or month with board or by the day without board, and highest when paid by the month without board, the department of agriculture at Washington reports.

Wage rates in the state when paid by the month with board are reported as $53; by the month without board, $84; by the day with board $2.80 and by the day without board, $3.65.
